WORLD FLYERS PASS OVER JAPAN ON HOP TO TOKIO FROM SHANGHAI

Pride of Detroit Plane Reported at Kagoshima, Half Way to Capital, on Flight From Chinese Port.

MORE THAN HALF WAY ON CIRCUIT OF GLOBE

Schlee and Brock Have Favorable Weather Conditions for Their 1200-Mile Trip, Mostly Over Water.

By the Associated Press.

KAGOSHIMA, Japan, Sept. 11 (Sunday.)—The globe circling airplane, Pride of Detroit, passed over this city at 1:35 p. m. (10:35 p. m. Saturday, St. Louis time), on the way to Tokio from Shanghai, after eight hours in the air.

Kagoshima is on Kiushiu Island, about 600 miles southwest of Tokio, which is on Honshu Island, largest body of the Japanese archipelago. Kagoshima is the halfway point of the flight from Shanghai to Tokio.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 11 (Sunday)—The monoplane, Pride of Detroit, with Pilots W. S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee, hopped off a 5:42 a. m. today (3:42 p. m. Saturday, St. Louis time) for Tokio.

The weather was favorable for the 1200-mile flight to Tokio, most of it over water.

The globe flyers were aided in getting away by British air force men.

Crowd Bids Flyers Goodby.

A large crowd of Americans and Britishers cheered the Pride of Detroit on its departure, despite the early hour. The aviators waved a cheerful farewell. They previously had declared they had every expectation of carrying out their itinerary—Tokio, Midway Islands, Honolulu, San Francisco and Detroit.

Brock and Schlee arrived at Shanghai from Hongkong at 5:30 p. m. yesterday (4:30 a. m. yesterday St. Louis time). They made the trip of 780 miles in 11 hours.

The total distance covered since the take-off Aug. 27 from Harbor Grace, N. F., was 11,075 miles on their arrival here, more than half their proposed flight around the world.

The Pride of Detroit landed here at the Chinese Nationalist Government airdrome, 10 miles outside the international settlement.

Flyers Stand Trip Well.

The aviators were in good condition, and their plane had been functioning satisfactorily the, said on arrival here.

Brock and Schlee were in high spirits when they stepped out of the plane. Both declared the flight from Hongkong the most successful hop since leaving Detroit.

"All the way from Hongkong we experienced 30-mile head winds causing us to use up 11 hours in making the flight of 780 miles. However, there was no other trouble," Brock said.

The plane was refueled last night for the takeoff for Tokio at daylight today. The flyers said their engine was in perfect condition and needed no attention.

It is their plan to have the engine replaced with a new one at Tokio.

"Use Your Own Judgment," Mrs. Schlee Cables Husband.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 10.—Mrs. Leah Schlee, wife of Edward F. Schlee, round-the-world flyer, told the Associated Press today she had cabled her husband at Tokio advising him to "use his own judgment" in making the projected flight from Tokio to one of the small islands of the Midway group.

"I do hope he'll be sensible, though, and decide to take a boat to Vancouver," Mrs. Schlee said. "There is a boat scheduled to leave Tokio the 15th, and if he obtained another relief pilot after arriving in North America, there still would be a chance for him to break the record."

Mrs. Schlee declared she would not attempt to dissuade her husband from making the dangerous ocean flight.

"I know he has his mind set on breaking the record," she said, "and I don't want to be a hindrance. But I don't see how he and Mr. Brock could ever fly to the small Midway Islands adn find a safe landing."

NONE BUT AMERICANS MAY PICKET OHIO COAL MINES

U. S. Judge at Steubenville, O., by Injunction, Limits Number of Union Watchers and Prescribes Their Conduct.

By the Associated Press.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Sept. 10.—Only American citizens who speak English will be permitted to serve as union pickets around the properties of coal companies in five eastern Ohio counties under the terms of a preliminary injunction issued here today by Judge Benson W. Hough in United States District Court. Furthermore Judge Hough announced that he would recommend the deportation of any alien convicted of violating the injunction. The injunction is directed against officers and members of the miners' union.

The injunction, granted on application of four coal companies, specifies that not more than three persons may occupy one picket post that the posts must be at least 700 yards apart and not closer than 100 yards to any mining property.

Immediately after the injunction was issued, spokesmen for five other coal companies operating in the affected area indicated they would file an intervening petition next Tuesday seeking to enter the case as joint complainants in order to receive the protection of the order.

The injunction was announced after a conference held in chambers by Judge Hough, Adjutant-General Henderson of the Ohio National Guard, the county attorneys and sheriffs of Belmont, Columbiana, Harrison, Jefferson and Tuscarawas counties. Marshal Stanley Borthwick of the southern Ohio Federal judicial district and counsel for the operators and the miners.

The injunction states specifically that pickets will not be permitted to threaten working miners in any way or to use offensive language in addressing them. Several modes of address are specifically forbidden.

The injunction is based on testimony given at a hearing which ended Thursday. Witnesses for the operators testified that depredations had been committed against property and assaults made on non-union workers.

Coal operators expressed the belief that it would pave the way for re-opening the mines.

FEATHERED FLYING MACHINE FLAPS ITS WINGS AND FLIES

Motorless Device Is a Success, Inventor Says After Brief Hop From Florida Beach.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COCOA, Fla., Sept. 10.—This little city on the east coast of Florida has been marveling since Sept. 3, when a motorless device, called an ornithopter, belonging to George R. White of Stoney Brook, La., made a sustained flight of an eighth of a mile. The flight was made at Cocoa Beach, near here, where White has been conducting experiments several weeks.

The ornithopter has wings covered with feathers that beat like the wings of a bird. When the machine is in the air it looks like a giant eagle. It is said to be the first motorless device that has made a sustained flight of such distance.

Secrecy has surrounded the experiments of White and two friends he brought from the North. Asked what made the wings of the ornithopter beat like those of birds, he replied that it was simply an application of motive power. Experiments are conducted in the early morning before the beach crowds arrive.

FORMER U. S. AGENT CHARGED WITH MURDER IN LITHUANIA

Reported to Have Shot Surgeon—General Brundza Because of Jealousy.

BROCKTON, Mass., Sept. 10.—Former acquaintances here of John J. Roman, former United States Department of Justice agent, who returned to Lithuania, his native land, nine years ago, learned today from a newspaper mailed from that country that he was charged with the murder of Surgeon-General Anthony Brundza.

Since leaving this country, Roman separated from his wife, who was Miss Mary Osker of Lawrence. The shooting was said to have been the result of jealousy. Roman was an army lieutenant during the World War.

DUPONTS OWN FOURTH OF GENERAL MOTORS

Company Denies U. S. Steel Has Any Stock in Auto Concern.

By the Associated Press.

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 10.—The extent of the du Pont stock interest in the General Motors Corporation and disposition of the former William C. Durant holdings in the same concern are disclosed in a statement issued by Irenee E. chairman of the Finance Committee of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. The statement follows receipt by the du Pont company of notice from the Federal Trade Commission that relations between the du Pont company, General Motors and the United States Steel Corporation were under investigation.

The du Pont company now owns the equivalent of 1,966,244 of the total 8,700,000 shares of General Motors common stock. General Motors stock held by Durant, who withdrew from the company in 1920, was bought by the du Pont company, it was said, and in 1923 sold in turn to a managers' security company. This company was composed of "about 80 of the most important men occupying managerial positions in the General Motors Corporation."

The du Pont interests in United States steel were placed at 114,000 shares of common stock, or about 1.6 per cent of the total 7,116,235 shares of steel outstanding, by the du Pont executive.

The steel corporation holds no stock of the General Motors or du Pont companies, Du Pont said. He also said that General Motors owns no stock of the du Pont or United States Steel concerns, nor in any of their subsidiaries.

Intercompany sales and purchases by the three companies were estimated as only a small percentage of the annual trade of each by du Pont.

INHERITANCE TAX OF $127,376 ON ESTATE OF MRS. F. H. HIGBEE

Amount Said to Be Second Largest Ever Assessed in St. Louis; Valuation $1,159,174.

A State inheritance tax of $127,376.16 has been assessed against the estate of Mrs. Fannie H. Higbee, it was revealed in an appraiser's report filed in Probate Court yesterday. The tax was based in a valuation of $1,159,174.68 and was said by probate officials to have been the second largest estate tax assessed in the city. The largest inheritance tax on record was that assessed against the estate of David Sommers, capitalist, who died in December, 1925. His heirs paid a State inheritance tax of $287,062, 38.

Mrs. Higbee's estate, founded largely on holdings in the Burrough's Adding Machine Co., inherited from her uncle, the late William R. Pye, St. Louis dry goods merchant, had a gross value of $1,336,417.02, but it was reduced by general Federal and State taxes, administration expenses and other costs. Mrs. Higbee's interest in the balance of the Pye trust fund, valued at $182,982, was not included, since it has been tied up by litigation.

Mrs. Higbee died Jan. 18. Her chief heirs are a sister, Mrs. Louise H. Chapman of Detroit; two nephews, Benjamin G. Chapman of 58 Kingsbury place and Charles G. Chapman, and a niece, Mrs. Louise C. Bowen. She lived at 525 Clara avenue.

BEQUESTS TO FIVE BANKS MADE IN M'MILLAN'S WILL

Former Associates, Unable to Explain, Suppose Testator Had Come to Some Understanding.

WIDOW'S TRUST FUND TO PROVIDE MONEY

She Is the Principal Heir and Estate Will Be Distributed as Specified at Her Death.

Bequests to banks in Dallas, Kansas City and Galveston were an unusual feature of the will of Neill A. McMillan, chairman of the board of the First National in St. Louis, filed yesterday.

The largest was to the American Exchange National Bank of Dallas, for which $92,500 is provided. McMillan formerly was cashier of that bank. His associates in St. Louis could offer no explanation of the bequests, but thought that Mr. McMillan may have had some understanding with officers of the banks as to their use of the money.

Other specific bequests were $4000 to the First National Bank of Kansas City, $5000 to the Galveston National Bank, $1000 to the Middlesex Banking Co., Dallas and $1000 to J. G. Strean, cashier of the Metropolitan National Bank, Kansas City.

The bequests are to come from a trust fund of $125,000 set aside for Mr. McMillan's widow, Mrs. Mattie Caruth McMillan, and will be distributed at her death. She is the chief beneficiary of the estate.

Value of Estate Not Known.

There has been no accurate estimate of the value of the estate. Some of Mr. McMillan's associates thought it might run in excess of $1,000,000, perhaps as large as $3,000,000.

Other specific besuests were $3000 upon a sister, Miss Scotta McMillan, and $1000 each to two other sisters, Mrs. Flora Wallace and Mrs. Rosa L. Goodwin.

A specific bequest of the residence at 5327 Waterman boulevard and two residences in Dallas, Tex., to the widow is provided. One-seventh of the residue of the estate is to be divided among the sisters, 50 per cent to Miss Scotta McMillan and the remainder in equal parts to the other two.

Of the remaining six-sevenths of the residue, $125,000 is set aside as a trust fund for the widow, who is to receive the income from it.

John F. Shepley, Isaac H. Orr and A. McMillan Wallace are named trustees to sell property in Oklahoma of undetermined value, one-seventh to be divided among the sisters in the proportion that the one-seventh of the residue is divided and the remainder to go to Mrs. McMillan.

Codicil on Distribution.

A codicil, made the day following the date of the will, Aug. 18, 1926, provides for the ultimate distribution of the $125,000 trust fund and declares that Mrs. McMillan may select one or more religious or educational institutions to which to give $10,000.

Texas Bankers Puzzled at McMillan Bequests.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DALLAS, Sept. 10.—Officers of the American Exchange National Bank here are just as puzzled as are St. Louis bankers over bequests to that institution and others in the will of the late Neil A. McMillan. Among other bequests is $92,500 set aside for the American Exchange National Bank of Dallas.

Nathan Adams, president of the bank, said he knew nothing of the bequest. B. A. McKinney, vice president, believes details of the will reveal definite instructions. Royal A. Ferris and Sloan Simpson are other Dallas beneficiaries. Ferris, himself a banker, was surprised, but had no explanation.

COOLIDGE SPEAKS ON MORAL VALUE OF EDUCATION

Declares, in College Address, That Students Should Understand Spiritual Meaning of Science.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO PIONEER WEST

Makes No Reference to Farm Relief Program, Though Politicians Predicted He Would.

By the Associated Press.

BROOKINGS, S. D., Sept. 10.—Educational institutions were called on by President Coolidge today to give more emphasis to spiritual development in an address dedicating the Lincoln Memorial Library at the South Dakota State College.

"Our colleges will fail in their duty to their students," he warned, "unless they are able to inspire them with a broader understanding of the spiritual meaning of science, of literature and of the arts."

Stopping over here less than two hours on his way to Washington, Mr. Coolidge kept the silence he has maintained on the controversial farm relief problem since entering this agricultural region three months ago. But to the throng of South Dakotans who gathered under an overcast sky for the outdoor exercises, the President had another word of praise for this State.

"We cannot fail to stand in respectful admiration for a people whose courage and ability has been crowned with such remarkable accomplishments," he said.

Coolidge Gets Degree.

On completion of his address, Mr. Coolidge was given the honorary degree of Doctor of Science from the college by Charles W. Pugsley, president.

Senator Norbeck and Senator McMaster of this State, and Representatives Johnson, Williamson and Christophers were on the platform at the dedication exercises.

In conferring the degree, President Pugsley explained briefly that the faculty had recommended it "as a slight recognition of its appreciation of your services to the nation and to the State College on this momentous occasion." Mr. Coolidge then proceeded to another memorial in this State which is to bear his name, Coolidge Sylvan Theater, an outdoor theater on the campus. Here he and Mrs. Coolidge laid a memorial stone.

"I hope I do a better job than he does," Mrs. Coolidge laughed as she and the President were handed trowels with which to spread mortar at opposite corners of the stone. The crowd cheered as she finished first.

Although the weather was threatening a large audience stood before the outdoor speaking platform and crowds lined the streets from the station to the college.

Flowers to Mrs. Coolidge.

On behalf of the faculty womens' club, Betty Jean Peterson presented Mrs. Coolidge a bouquet of flowers and she received a gracious "thank you" and smiled in return.

Thanking the President for his address, Mr. Pugsley departed from the prepared program to present formally Mrs. Coolidge and John Coolidge. Each stepped forward smilingly on the platform as the audience extended its greeting with applause.

Politicians who had confidently predicted that Mr. Coolidge in speaking at an agricultural college would outline the farm-relief plans of the administration were disappointed.

"We have been excessively busy seeking for information that could be turned to practical advantage in the matter of dollars and cents, rather than for that wisdom which would guide us through eternity," Mr. Coolidge said. "Our higher educational institutions have turned their thoughts especially to the sciences, and our secondary schools to vocational training. * * * How poor and weak and generally ineffective we should be without these advantages can be at once seen by the most casual observation of those nations among which they have been neglected.

Says Lincoln Saw Need.

"This is by no means all that is to be expected from American education and American institutions. I cannot conceive that the object of Abraham Lincoln was merely to instruct men how to raise more corn to feed more hogs to get more

E. G. Lewis, Convicted of Fraud, Fed $10,000,000 of Other People's Money to His California Chimera

Promoter Who Developed University City Indicted Here, but Freed—Hears Sentence Monday.

E. G. Lewis, promoter of University City, who lately repeated in California, on a bigger scale, the get-rich-quick program which he developed in St. Louis 23 years ago, was convicted in Los Angeles Federal Court yesterday of misuse of the mails. He will be sentenced tomorrow, and his conviction, which was on 10 counts, makes possible a maximum total sentence of 47 years.

Liabilities exceeding $10,000,000 were shown by the collapse of Lewis' group of California enterprises, and while there were certain assets, the investors in his California schemes appear to have lost more than the $7,000,000 which was lost by the investors in his St. Louis concerns. Though indicted 12 times for his St. Louis dealings, Lewis has not been convicted before.

Lewis, chief aid, Henry L. Kramer, was convicted with him on nine counts of misuse of the mails and one count of conspiracy for such misuse, and will be sentenced at the same time. William Ahrens, a co-defendant with them, was acquitted.

The complaints were based on the sale of "life subscriptions" to a magazine printed in connection with Lewis' real estate development at Atascadero, Cal. The magazine suspended three years ago. The life subscriptions, by which Lewis raised about $850,000, were sold at $10 each, and carried the promise of profits from oil wells and almond groves. Most of the representations were false, the Government charged in the prosecution of Lewis and Kramer.

Is Exceptionally Persuasive.

Edward Gardner Lewis—usually known by his initials only—is 59 years old, and is unimpressive as to stature and features. His lack of physical "front" is more than made up by an exceptional gift of persuasive speech. This gift was used to the utmost in the shaping of his dazzling and dizzying financial program in St. Louis in the early years of the present century.

In their effect upon the investor, Lewis' schemes were like the many get-rich-quick frauds which the agencies of Government try to check with such indifferent success. The investors lost their money. The effect was aggravated by the fact that the investors were, in almost all cases, persons of small savings.

But Lewis, unlike most get-rich-quick promoters, did not strive to pocket as much as possible and make a quick getaway. It is even doubtful whether his primary object was to accumulate money for himself. Unquestionably, he sought power and prestige, and he was culpably indifferent to the welfare of his confiding investors. But he seems to have aimed at permanence, impossible as this was made by his unsound methods. He left behind him, in University City, substantial buildings and a monumental gateway guarded by bronze lions; and in California a residential development which in other hands gives promise of future value.

Can't Let Well Enough Alone.

Each time, Lewis showed a fatal inability to let well enough alone. The success he sought was not the success which comes from keeping everlastingly at it—that is, at any particular "it." One scheme, while still unmatured, was made the basis for a cluster of others, each of which, in turn, was pyramided in like manner.

"All his life," said a man who studied the Lewis enterprises, "he has been jumping from one cake of ice to another, like Eliza fleeing from the bloodhounds."

Another critic, a prominent St. Louisan who had large dealings with Lewis, declared on the witness stand that he did not think him an intentional swindler. "I prefer to say that Mr. Lewis had an Oriental imagination," he added.

In 1895 Lewis was selling insect powder in Nashville, Tenn. Sales were good for a time, and Lewis and an associate formed a company to extend the business to Memphis. Soon the concern was in the Sheriff's hands.

St. Louis was his next field, and Lewis sought to market an anti-perspiration foot powder and a tooth powder here, but this lasted only a year or so. A plan for selling watches on an endless chain system appeared in 1898, under Lewis' direction, and ran until a postoffice fraud order stopped it the following year.

The Winner (later Woman's) Magazine was then started in St. Louis. The National Installment Co. started as a jewelry sideline to the magazine. The Development and Investment Co. followed, and was a forerunner of the interlocking concerns soon started by Lewis.

LOWMAN FALLS AFOUL OF MELLON; MAY BE DROPPED

His Statement That Dry Service Is Full of Crooks Stirs Treasury Secretary's Wrath.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon hailed Assistant Secretary Lowman before him for an hour's heart-to-heart talk this morning and thereafter the report went around that Lowman would quit as the assistant secretary in charge of prohibition enforcement.

Mellon was described as having been considerably wrought up over the Lowman statement yesterday that the dry service was filled with crooks and that it would take at least 50 years to make the United States dry.

The Anti-Saloon League brought about the downfall of Lowman's predecessor, Gen. Andrews, largely because of a similar confession, and F. Scott McBride and other leaguers are no less vexed at Lowman, who came into office only six weeks ago over their protests, though they second his crusade to eliminate the crooks from the dry ranks.

Mellon's Ultimatum.

But the real trouble ahead of Lowman is inside the Treasury. Mellon and Under Secretary Mills are said to have landed heavily on Lowman and notified him that he was to make no more speeches and issue no more surveys such as that of yesterday.

His saying that the Treasury dry forces were shot through with corruption and incompetency and that his arm was wearing out signing dismissals sounded to them like a direct reflection on the Mellon regime in the Treasury. But this was not the first irritation. Mellon has always been opposed to having prohibition subordinates rush into print with flamboyant statements. Mellon read the Lowman bulletin late yesterday afternoon with plain signs of pain, annoyance and surprise, and immediately summoned the dry administrator to his office.

Only a few days ago he received Representative Boylan's heated protests against Lowman's upstate New York speech which pilloried Gov. Smith. The political advisors of the administration were extremely irritated by this speech. Mills, especially, was said to be determined to apply a gag hereafter to Lowman.

Piling Up Enemies.

Then, too, the Treasury did not like Lowman's recent "snooping" ideas, as they were construed. Altogether in six short weeks, the former Lieutenant-Governor of New York has succeeded in alienating both his superiors and the potent dry organizations, which never admit that prohibition has flaws.

In addition, the Anti-Saloon League of New York, offended by Lowman's removal of Maj. Mills and Orville S. Poland, has been accusing the Assistant Secretary of sacrificing efficiency to political expediency.

The hour's conference which Mellon held with the dry chief was in private, but all predictions are that Lowman is about to walk the plank in the same manner as his predecessors. The wets are call-

NEGRO KILLS TWO PERSONS AND WOUNDS TWO OTHERS

Jealous, He Shoots, Beats and Stabs to Death Mother of His Children in Division Street Grocery.

FATALLY SHOOTS WHITE GROCER

Storekeeper's Wife Shot When She Intervenes—Bullet Hits His Own Baby Daughter.

A jealous Negro shot, beat and stabbed a Negro woman to death in a grocery store at 1821 Division street last night, killed the storekeeper, Marcus Bass, a white man, and dangerously wounded Mrs. Bass, when they got in his way. One of his five shots wounded his own daughter, one year old.

The man, William Mosley, 52 years old, lived at 1820 Division with the woman, Mildred White, 32, and their four children. They had quarreled lately because a younger man had been seen in her company. About dusk the woman, carrying the baby, went across the street to Bass' store to get some food for supper.

At 7:15 Mosley, hungry and in a vengeful mood, followed her. He carried a cheap revolver, which he had bought since his jealousy was aroused.

"Why don't you come home?" he demanded as he saw her in the store.

"I'm not coming right now," the woman answered, and she stepped behind a counter.

"I'll make you," Mosley shouted, and drawing the revolver, he fired at her. The first shot appears to have struck her in the chest.

Shoots Storekeeper and Wife.

Bass, who was 53 years old, called to him to stop shooting, and stepped toward him, whereupon Mosley turned the revolver upon him, and as he turned away, shot him in the back. Mrs. Bass, who is 51, ran up screaming, and the next bullet entered her right breast.

Stepping over the prostrate bodies of the white pair, Mosley pursued the Negro woman, who had staggered into a rear room. There, by his own account, he beat her on the head until the revolver handle broke, and stabbed her repeatedly with a long knife which he had taken from the store counter.

The baby, Willa May Mosley, was found on the floor soon afterward, wounded in one leg.

Excited But Not Drunk.

Mosley, still carrying the knife, went toward his rooming place, but did not go in.

"I've been the death of two people," he said to a fellow-roomer in front of the place. He started to walk away, then ran as he saw a policeman approaching. He threw the knife away, and was caught on Seventeenth street, near Biddle. His revolver was found in the store.

At the City Hospital it was found that Bass was dead, and that his wife was in a critical condition. Mr. and Mrs. Bass lived at 2933 Dayton street. The Mosley baby, taken to City Hospital No. 2, is expected to recover.

Mosley said to policemen that he had worked steadily, and had never been arrested before. He appeared to be in a condition of great excitement, but said he had not been drinking.

Unidentified Negro Found Slain in Alley.

An unidentified Negro was found dead in an alley in rear of 2624 Papin street at 7:45 o'clock last night, with his head almost severed. He appeared to have been dead only a short time. Police expressed the belief his throat had been cut with an ax.

Police canvassed the neighborhood, but could find no clew to his identity or the circumstances of his death. No one had heard a disturbance, as far as police could learn.

He was described as about 25 years old, 5 feet 2 inches in height and weighing about 135 pounds. The body, clad in black trousers and blue striped shirt, was taken to the City Morgue.

PANAMA CANAL CONTROL ASSAILED BEFORE LEAGUE

Former Cabinet Officer of Panama Wants U. S. to Submit Its Claim to Zone to Arbitration.

ENGLAND JOINS IN ATTACKING WAR

Praises Briand's Pledge of Amity to Germany and Stresemann's Declaration for Peace.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 10.—Submission to an impartial Court of Justice of the dispute between Panama and the United States over the question of whether the Canal Zone is under the sovereignty of the United States or of Panama, was suggested to the Assembly of the League of Nations tonight by Dr. Eusebio A. Morales, former Foreign Minister of Panama.

The suggestion hinged on the inability of the United States to accept Panama's viewpoint in the controversy. Thus far the attitude of the United States towards Panama's viewpoint has been undetermined.

Negotiations for a treaty between the United States and Panama have been going on for some time. There was considerable agitation in Panama against the new treaty which provides that the armed forces of the United States shall have free passage through the country in time of peace and that Panama shall declare herself in a state of war "in the case of any war in which the United States should be a belligerent.

The treaty is to supplement that of 1903.

Opposes Subsidiary League.

It was inferred that Dr. Morales advocated referring the Panama controversy to the World Court of Justice at The Hague, because, in vigorously opposing the creation of a special League of Nations for the American continent, he advanced as one of his reasons that such a step would involve the establishment of a special American court, which, he held, would offer no greater guarantees of impartiality than The Hague Court of Justice, created under the auspices of the League of Nations.

Dr. Morales declared that Panama in order to permit the construction of the remarkable passage linking the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and granted to the United States in perpetuity the use, occupation and control of a zone 10 miles wide across her territory for the construction, administration, maintenance, sanitation and protection of the canal and the exercise of all rights, power and authority over the zone by the United States "as if the United States possessed sovereignty over the territory."

But, he explained, a serious question had arisen, in regard to which no compromise was possible, because it could not be settled unless one of the parties completely adopted the views of the other.

Dr. Morales insisted that in handing over certain rights to the United States Panama did not grant the whole of her sovereign rights over the Canal Zone, and expressed his confidence that the American Government, "whose friendship for Panama has always been sincere and cordial finally would accept Panama's interpretation that the real sovereignty remains vested in Panama.

After advocating submission of the dispute to a court of justice, he described the United States as a just country, a lover of peace and an enthusiastic supporter of international arbitration.

Relies on America's Justice.

"It is unthinkable, therefore," he added, "that in a dispute with a small weak country the United States should refuse to submit a matter arising out of the interpretation of a treaty to impartial judges, and still more unthinkable that the United States should attempt to impose its own interpretation by some extra-judicial means."

Answering the criticism that the Panaman-American treaty signed at Washington last year violates the covenant of the League of Nations, Dr. Morales admitted that Panama was committed to co-operation with the United States in defending the canal and to regarding herself as at war in any conflict in which the United States is involved as a belligerent, but under this provision Panama merely gave her assistance for defense of a part of her territory in which another country possesses vital interests.

"Panama maintains that she has not renounced or transferred to the United States the whole of her sovereign rights over the canal zone," he declared, "and that consequently if the Panama Canal is attacked by any other country it is Panama's right and duty to defend it."

League's Rights in the Case.

Defending his country against the criticism that Panama had not been true to the League, Dr. Morales contended that the stipulation to help the United States is purely a defensive provision in case of an attack on the Panama Canal, and did not refer to a conflict involving Panama as one of the principal parties. In such case, he contended, the usual League procedure of arbitration must naturally be resorted to.

Dr. Morales asserted it was false to say that the United States had forced Panama to accept this clause, which was actually proposed in its essentials by the Panama Government itself. Remarking that the controversy with the United States over the sovereignty of the zone had caused no rancor, the speaker expressed the opinion that all differences with the United States would be settled by arbitration or a court of justice.

Chamberlain Deplores War.

Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary, addressing the Assembly, joined Aristide Briand, French Foreign Minister, and Gustav Stresemann, German Foreign Minister, in what he called "the solemn resolution to choose the way to peace and eschew the paths to war."

He felicitated France for extending to Germany the hand of friendship, saying this greatly increased the strength of the League of Nations.

He repudiated any insinuations that the big powers were trying to run the council, declaring that all the members were on equal footing.

Failure of Naval Parley.

Referring to "the failure of the tri-partite naval conference," he said "even in the failure encouragement may be found," and emphasized that the relations and the friendship of the powers participating had remained unimpaired after the failure. He said the lesson of the failure of the conference was that there was inadequate preparation for it.

"My country," he continued, "desires to see a large and real restriction of arms. Our navy cannot be compared with the navy before the war. Our budget has grown less and less."

Sir Austen dwelt upon the heavy international burdens resting on the shoulders of the British Government but said he was ready in principle to accept the Finnish proposal which established an international fund to be available for the nation which becomes a victim of aggression."

He remarked that there seemed to be an undercurrent of opinion that Great Britain had blocked security and armament because she could not participate in all the League plans. In fact, he declared, "the British, in course of their history, had submitted to arbitration, a larger number of important matters than any other country.

Alluding to the British objection to the Geneva protocol he asserted the nations were asking the impossible when they asked Great Britain to guarantee the frontiers of all countries, just as she has the Rhineland frontiers.

"That would be asking for a disruption of the British Empire," he declared. "I am devoted to the League of Nations, but not even for the League would I destroy that smaller but older league which is the British Empire."

To extend the area of guaranteed boundaries now, he said, is "impossible" for his country, but added: "What is impossible today may be possible tomorrow."

Continuing his defense of the British Government against accusations that it has been adopting an anti-League policy, Sir Austen recalled that he personally had attended all the meetings of the council and the assembly.

"Don't forget," he said, "that no country can disregard the moral judgment of the League of Nations."

He added his conviction that the League, now an acorn, would grow to be a sturdy oak, helpful to the world.

Briand's Speech.

For the second time within 24 hours Briand today delivered an impassioned oration before the assembly, proclaiming France's passionate desire to be freed from the horrors of war.

In his speech today he voiced his conviction of the certainty that the rapprochement between France and Germany would continue to develop in the interest of world peace.

Briand began by praising Gustav Stresemann, the German Foreign Minister, who is representing Germany in the assembly. He alluded to Stresemann's announcement that Germany would sign the compulsory arbitration clause of the world court of justice and wanted to be a pioneer in the movement for peace. Briand declared that this "noble discourse came as a ray of light to dissipate the mist."

"France on her part," he declared, will dedicate her every energy to perpetuating the Franco-German friendship and world peace."

Briand resorted frequently to irony, evoking roars of laughter from his hearers. He ridiculed both the black pessimism concerning the League, and the charges that the so-called big powers were negotiating excessively in secret and trying to settle secretly problems which the League should handle.

The French statesman traced the history of the League's achievements and mentioned particularly the happy outcome of the difficult problem of getting Germany into the League under conditions satisfactory to all.

Declaring that France is ready to contribute to every element for assuring peace, Briand emphasized that disarmament is a vital element for peace, and he recalled that the League covenant demands that armaments be reduced to a point compatible with national security.

Briand admitted that he had foreseen that the tri-partite naval conference was doomed in advance to "non-success." He declared that a successful conference could be held only under the auspices of the League of Nations. He believed that this conference would come one day and refused to share the pessimism of critics who hold that the league's preliminary disarmament work had not been fruitful.

Referring to the destiny of the League, the speaker said that the public had not paid enough attention to the magnificent humanitarian achievements of the League—its work in reconstructing countries ruined by the war and its succor to millions of innocent refugees.

In conclusion, Briand expressed the opinion that peace could be perpetuated best by developing the judicial system for settling disputes, and added:

"Let us all turn our faces toward peace—peace by arbitration."

Stresemann's Pledge.

Stresemann yesterday pledged the German Reich to accept before the end of the month the optional clause of the Hague court statute providing for compulsory arbitration of disputes with other nations which have accepted it.

Sokol of Poland, despite the opposition of Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary, introduced a modified resolution declaring all wars of aggression are international crimes and are forbidden, that every pacific means shall be employed to adjust disputes and that members of the League shall consider it an obligation to conform to these principles.

Although Stresemann pointed out that his country has so far only accepted the compulsory arbitration clause in principle, and the Reichstag's official draft of acceptance is not yet formulated, his pledge means Germany will be the first big Power to ratify this clause.

"More than any country," the German Foreign Minister explained, "Germany needs security, if she is to support a growing population in a reduced territory. We are most anxious to be pioneers in accepting general peace, which is the ideal of the League."

Novelist on Trial for Murder in Court

TEN jurors had been selected on the third day of the trial at Rockville, Conn., of Leonard Cline, charged with killing his friend, Wilfred P. Irwin, last May 16. Two panels of 130 talesmen were exhausted in getting 10 into the jury box and the judge yesterday adjourned court until Tuesday to give time for summoning a new panel.

W. R. SCHNEIDER FORMALLY SEEKS GOVERNORSHIP

Speaker Pro Tem of Missouri House Issues Platform on Which He Will Stand.

By Curtis A. Betts

William R. Schneider, member of the Legislature from St. Louis, and Speaker pro. tem of the Missouri House of Representatives, yesterday formally announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Governor. His platform constitutes a challenge to the parasitic political job holders, and the for-revenue-only politicians.

The legislative leader in the movement to reorganize the State Government along thoroughly business lines over the opposition of most of the heads of State departments and the professional politicians of his party, Schneider made enonomy and efficiency in the operation of the State Government his platform. He appealed over the heads of the politicians to the taxpayers who pay the cost of government.

The campaign issue raised by his candidacy and platform was the most important matter before the last Legislature, where Schneider made a vigorous fight for the program of the Missouri Association for Economy in Public Expenditures, and it appeared he would win the fight until several State officials any many of their employes, seeking to maintain the spoils system at whatever expense, actively lobbied against the economy bill and defeated it in the House by only a few votes.

What He Faces.

Schneider cannot hope to attract the regular organization politicians to his support because his program if carried out would deprive many of them of jobs, would upset the system under which they are perpetuated in office and under which the affairs of government are conducted for the job holders without regard to the cost to the taxpayers. Undoubtedly he hopes to arouse an interest among those who pay the bills, and through them to overcome the forces of organized politics in the primary.

In his announcement, Schneider said:

"I believe that the great majority of the people of Missouri earnestly desire that their next Governor, with the aid of the Legislature, establish in this State the principles of budgetary government which I have been advocating as the tried and successful means of reducing to a minimum waste and inefficiency in State government.

"I believe that by reason of my experience as a legislator and the knowledge gained of the operation of the various State departments and the study I have made of the operation of governmental departments in other states, that I am best equipped to secure the adoption of budgetary government in Missouri."

"Deplorable Scandals."

Schneider called attention to the "deplorable scandals" in some of the departments under the "present administration as well as similar scandals of preceding Democratic administrations," saying they emphasized the need of a uniform system of accounting, central purchasing, a budget and the elimination of boards and commissions where centralization of responsibility is impossible.

As indications of the gross efficiency of the present system, Schneider said it was impossible for the Governor to estimate within $1,000,000 the State's annual income, impossible for him to tell the number of State employes, and impossible for the State Auditor to make a summary of receipts and disbursements.

He asserted that through the central purchasing system he advocated, the State of Massachusetts within three years had saved $6,000,000.

Without a budget, he said, it was impossible for the Legislature to appropriate money intelligently.

Useless Departments.

Advocating the elimination of useless departments, he said consolidation of related departments would mean greater efficiency and would result in responsible supervision.

"The savings which can be effected by these business methods, which have been tried and found succesful in other states, will enable us to give to education the much-needed encouragement which has long been desired by the people of Missouri," he said.

Schneider is 40 years old and has practiced law in St. Louis 16 years. He was born in Nebraska and received his legal education at the University of Michigan. As a Legislator, his principal work, in addition to the economy bills, was in sponsoring the workmen's compensation law, which was passed in 1925, and his opposition to the efforts of many special groups to obtain legislation authorizing pensions.

E. G. Lewis Convicted Of Misuse of Mails

which came to include the Lewis Publishing Co., American Coin Controller Co., University Heights Realty Co., United States Fiber Stopper Co., Bachelor Pneumatic Tube Co., World's Fair (guessing) Contest Co., People's United States Bank and People's Savings and Trust Co.

His Nashville partner was with him up to the middle of 1902. Lewis charged later that this man made the complaints which led to investigation of his enterprises by the postal authorities. However, the investigation was one which the postal officials could not have avoided, as Lewis depended almost wholly on use of the mails to attract investors.

The $1.25 Investment.

In the World's Fair period, the tall octagonal Woman's Magazine Building, at the head of Delmar boulevard a few blocks west of the city limits, was a show place which attracted about as many visitors as the adjacent Delmar Garden. Women's clubs, organized in various towns through the magazine, sent delegations to view the plant, with its big presses and its special trolley cars. Visitors were told that all they saw had grown from an investment of $1.25, through the genius of Lewis. They were told that they could put this genius to making money for them by buying the stock of the People's United States Bank. The greater number who did not come here saw photographs and read articles and were equally convinced.

The bank obtained its charter from the State Nov. 14, 1904. In less than three weeks more than 85,000 individual subscriptions to its stock had been received. William Marion Reedy, describing the enterprise in Reedy's Mirror, a few weeks later wrote:

"The concern's literature is 'con' talk. It resembles the patter of fortune tellers. It is full of philanthropic palaver. The promoter is full of love for the dear public. He is making more money than he wants. Therefore, he will take the people in—that's what he says. This bank (quoting Lewis' literature) 'should be the most powerful and prosperous bank in the world, and can dictate terms to the great railroads and corporations who must sell their bonds. Some very kind friends, men of wealth, who are joining me in the labor of creating our great bank, have offered to help me help you secure more of the stock than you could pay for at one time. They receive no interest or profit for doing this, but are placing at my disposal a vast sum of money in order to help each of thousands of you at least a little.'

"Now, if the sentences just quoted are not the very essence of 'bull con' and the green goods game, I must have put in 10 or 15 years as a criminal reporter to no profit whatever. It is the epistolary razzle-dazzle for the yap yearning to be done good and brown.

"Mr. Lewis is a pleasant-mannered gentleman, a little nervous, with a mind miraculously nimble. He deals with millions as if they were pennies. He is the ideal promoter, and his spiel is the most persuasive that I have ever heard, and I've met the best confidence crooks in the country in my day. He associates with bankers and financial moguls. He uses freely in conversation the names of the best-known capitalists. His career is typical of the pluperfect faker on a big scale."

Basis of Fraud Order.

Investigation of the Lewis bank and publishing enterprises by postoffice inspectors was in progress through the spring of 1905. At the end of May, the inspectors submitted a recommendation that a fraud order be issued. They set forth, in a detailed report, that the bank was not started from the profits of the publishing concerns, but was intended to provide money for their operation, as they were in debt.

They told of misrepresentations in many details, one of the most important being as to the personnel associated with Lewis in control of the bank. Lewis described his associate directors as "the strongest, ablest men obtainable—men who had made independent fortunes legitimately and honest, but were free from pull and intrigue." Actually, the directors were Lewis and four of his employes. The stockholders were required, it was shown, to sign away their rights in the management by naming Lewis as their proxy. Extravagant promises of profits, from sources not open to other banks, were reviewed.

The fraud order, stopping use of the mails by the People's United States Bank, was issued by Postmaster-General Cortelyou, July 6, 1905, and was made effective at St. Louis four days later. The bubble burst, and the ensuing receiverships showed the publishing, realty and banking concerns to be an almost hopeless tangle of wildcat financing. The ultimate loss to investors, mostly persons of small means, was $7,040,891.

Lewis complained that he was the victim of enemies, and he placed in bronze letters, on a tablet still conspicuous in University City, the statement that the People's United States Bank was "assassinated." A bulky book, "The Siege of University City," written in the same vein, was subtitled "The Dreyfus Case of America."

Prosecution Fails.

Lewis was indicted on charges of using the mails in a scheme to defraud. In the first trial, the jury disagreed. At the second, Federal Judge Riner took the case from the jury and directed a verdict of acquittal. A later prosecution was unsuccessful. Lewis sought to enjoin the Postoffice department against interference by a fraud order, but Federal Judge McPherson held that use of the mails is a privilege, not a right, and may be withheld by the Postmaster-General for reasons satisfactory to him.

Lewis remained in St. Louis for a few years, and continued to serve as Mayor of University City, having been the first man to fill that office. Of the buildings left behind by his concerns, the least showy, known as the art building, became the local high school. The towering magazine building was made a storage warehouse, and the odd-looking Egyptian building, home of the Woman's National Daily, was used for a time as a motion picture studio. Lewis' residence on Yale avenue is now the home of Montague Punch.

His California Operations.

The promoter, reported to be almost penniless, went to the Los Angeles region at a time when realty dealers and subdivision agents were as active there as they became later in Florida. He went into San Luis Obispo County, upcoast from Los Angeles, and chose a peach orchard as the site of the residential town of Atascadero. He had not lost his skill in enlisting financial backing, and he raised the nearly $800,000 needed for his promotion, and ran it into a profit said to have been $4,000,000.

Again the pyramiding began, and in the late summer of 1921 it was announced that Lewis would take over and subdivide the Palos Verdes project, a 16,000-acre tract between Los Angeles and the beach. Plans for a branch of the University of California, a monorail overhead line to the city, and many other improvements and institutions, were heralded, and companies were formed to build on Palos Verdes a residential city which should be "the acropolis of the Caucasian race." In less than 90 days $15,000,000 subscriptions were received. When large building enterprises had been placed under way, difficulties began to arise, and Lewis announced that the insurance and banking concerns which had been behind him had become inimical to his undertakings. But he also announced that oil had been found on the Palos Verdes properties, and that subscribers might soon expect a rich reward. Instead, complications multiplied. Creditors threw the Lewis concerns into bankruptcy, and a receivership showed the liabilities to exceed $10,000,000.

URSE, HELD, SAYS PREACHER KISSED HER; HE DENIES IT

nid, Ok., Rector Declares He Had to Repulse Her Advances and Ask Her to Leave His Home.

EAD GIRL'S BODY TESTED FOR POISON

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ENID, Ok., Sept. 10.—Symptoms were similar in the fatal illness of the wife and daughter of the Rev. Charles Bailey, rector of St. Matthew's Church here, County Attorney Mitchell announced today as he awaited the report of a chemist at Oklahoma City who is making an examination of the daughter's vital organs to ascertain whether she died from poisoning.

In each instance, the patient went into convulsions shortly before death, respiration was paralyzed and the pupils of the eyes contracted, according to statements credited to Dr. W. L. Kendall attending physician.

Pending completion of the chemist's analysis, Miss Mary Atkinson 26-year-old nurse and guest in the rector's home for the past several months, is held in the Garfield County jail. She was arrested following the death Thursday of Mary Jane Bailey, 18-year-old daughter of the rector. Mrs. Bailey died Aug. 26, presumably of apoplexy.

A death certificate attributing the death of Mary Jane Bailey to "poisoning of some kind" was filed today. Her funeral, which had been held up by lack of the certificate will be held tomorrow at the church of which her father is pastor.

The possibility of an effort to release Miss Atkinson, through a writ of habeas corpus was indicated upon the arrival here of Harry Atkinson, her brother, a sheet metal worker of Pawhuska, who said he would employ an attorney. Atkinson visited his sister in jail. They had not met since last February. County Attorney Dan Mitchell said that if a writ were sought, he would [illegible] murder charges against Miss Atkinson, to hold her.

Nurse Fond of Rector.

Miss Atkinson has admitted admiration and a fondness for the gray-haired 49-year-old minister with whom she became acquainted when he confirmed her last November in an Episcopal church at Gainesville, Tex.

The nurse has said that her sole purpose in coming to Enid was to be with the Baileys and she has offered a similar explanation of her recent trip to Colorado while the Rev. Mr. Bailey and his wife were there.

Miss Atkinson has told the County Attorney that in the course of her "platonic" friendship with him, the minister kissed and embraced her many times, and she has made no attempt to deny that letters found in her room following her arrest were ones the rector had written her and others she had written him but had failed to mail. Contents of the letters have not been made public.

Asked about a partly filled vial of poison capsules found in her room Miss Atkinson said she obtained the vial while in training at a Chicago hospital in 1920 and had administered some of the capsules to her sister following an operation several years ago.

Rector Gives His Version.

The Rev. Mr. Bailey, interviewed for an hour at his home, described his interest in Miss Atkinson as "fatherly," such as he might entertain for any member of his congregation. He denied having kissed and embraced her, but said he frequently had been forced to repulse her affectionate advances.

He said he asked Miss Atkinson to take up her residence somewhere out of his home last Thursday as he did not think it proper for her to live with the family following the death of his wife. She complied and he left Monday to take a small daughter to Trinidad, Colo., his former home.

Immediately after his departure the nurse returned to the Bailey home. Mary Jane, her sister and two brothers became suddenly ill Monday afternoon and their cases were first diagnosed as ptomaine poisoning. Miss Atkinson had prepared the meals. Mary Jane died. The other children have recovered.

Bishop E. Cecil Seaman of the Episcopal Church of North Texas arrived here today and after conferences declared "there is not the slightest evidence to involve Dr. Bailey," in anything improper. "I have complete confidence that Dr. Bailey will be cleared of every vestige of suspicion which may have been directed toward him," the Bishop said.

NURSE, HELD, SAYS PREACHER KISSED HER; HE DENIES IT

Enid, Ok., Rector Declares He Had to Repulse Her Advances and Ask Her to Leave His Home.

DEAD GIRL'S BODY TESTED FOR POISON

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ENID, Ok., Sept. 10.—Symptoms were similar in the fatal illness of the wife and daughter of the Rev. Charles Bailey, rector of St. Matthew's Church here, County Attorney Mitchell announced today as he awaited the report of a chemist at Oklahoma City who is making an examination of the daughter's vital organs to ascertain whether she died from poisoning.

In each instance, the patient went into convulsions shortly before death, respiration was paralyzed and the pupils of the eyes contracted, according to statements credited to Dr. W. L. Kendall attending physician.

Pending completion of the chemist's analysis, Miss Mary Atkinson 26-year-old nurse and guest in the rector's home for the last several months, is held in the Garfield County jail. She was arrested following the death Thursday of Mary Jane Bailey, 18-year-old daughter of the rector. Mrs. Bailey died Aug. 26, presumably of apoplexy.

A death certificate attributing the death of Mary Jane Bailey to "poisoning of some kind" was filed today. Her funeral, which had been held up by lack of the certificate will be held tomorrow at the church of which her father is pastor.

The possibility of an effort to release Miss Atkinson, through a writ of habeas corpus was indicated upon the arrival here of Harry Atkinson, her brother, a sheet metal worker of Pawhuska, who said he would employ an attorney. Atkinson visited his sister in jail. They had not met since last February. County Attorney Dan Mitchell said that if a writ were sought, he would file murder charges against Miss Atkinson, to hold her.

Nurse Fond of Rector.

Miss Atkinson has admitted admiration and a fondness for the gray-haired 49-year-old minister with whom she became acquainted when he confirmed her last November in an Episcopal church at Gainesville, Tex. The nurse has said that her sole purpose in coming to Enid was to be with the Baileys and she has offered a similar explanation of her recent trip to Colorado while the Rev. Mr. Bailey and his wife were there.

Miss Atkinson has told the County Attorney that in the course of her "platonic" friendship with him, the minister kissed and embraced her many times, and she has made no attempt to deny that letters found in her room following her arrest were ones the rector had written her and others she had written him but had failed to mail. Contents of the letters have not been made public.

Asked about a partly filled vial of poison capsules found in her room Miss Atkinson said she obtained the vial while in training at a Chicago hospital in 1920 and had administered some of the capsules to her sister following an operation several years ago.

Rector Gives His Version.

The Rev. Mr. Bailey, interviewed for an hour at his home, described his interest in Miss Atkinson as "fatherly," such as he might entertain for any member of his congregation. He denied having kissed and embraced her, but said she frequently had been forced to repulse her affectionate advances.

He said he asked Miss Atkinson to take up her residence somewhere out of his home last Thursday as he did not think it proper for her to live with the family following the death of his wife. She complied and he left Monday to take a small daughter to Trinidad, Colo., his former home.

Immediately after his departure the nurse returned to the Bailey home. Mary Jane, her sister and two brothers became suddenly ill Monday afternoon and their cases were first diagnosed as ptomaine poisoning. Miss Atkinson had prepared the meals. Mary Jane died. The other children have recovered.

Bishop E. Cecil Seaman of the Episcopal Church of North Texas arrived here today and after conferences declared "there is not the slightest evidence to involve Dr. Bailey," in anything improper. "I have complete confidence that Dr. Bailey will be cleared of every vestige of suspicion which may have been directed toward him," the Bishop said.

Patients at Crippled Children's Hospital Viewing Circus in Their Backyard

—By a Post-Dispatch staff photographer.

Circus Goes to Hospital To Make Children Laugh

Crippled Youngsters, Unable to Visit "Big Top," See Elephants and Clowns, After All.

That lively crowd of youngsters at the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children got a lot of laugh therapy yesterday along with their daily sun therapy.

Since they could not go to the circus, it came to them, set up a ring and a bandstand in the big, grassy back yard of the hospital, and trotted out the elephants, the clowns, the wild Westerners, the Indians, the lady bareback riders and the trick donkey.

The Hagenbeck-Wallace shows gave the show at the hospital, as it customarily does in cities on its circuit which have Shriners' hospitals.

Some people say a good laugh is better medicine than an apple or a bucketful of vitamins. But leave that to the after-dinner speakers—those kids had a circus in more ways than one.

Every child in the hospital saw it, even to little Lawrence Kurtze whose plaster cast was so arranged that his bed would not go through the door. He watched from a second floor window right above the ring.

Along about the hour for the daily sunbath the wheel chairs and beds were ranged out on the lawn. There was a lot of excited chatter, and a lot of excited silence, for many of the youngsters never had seen a circus.

All at once every pair of eyes stared in the same directions. Something was entering the rear drive. Then a crescendo, "Here come the elephants!"

"Elephants! I never saw a real live elephant before," said one girl, and, when the elephants temporarily were relegated to the background, she called out, "Oh, don't take them away."

Before the performance and after it there was plenty of noise from the children. A clown, tempted to an exchange of wise cracks by some particularly elfin, mischievous face, often got as good as he gave, or better. But for the 90 minutes of the performance, the children were still as mice, one moment all eyes and, the next, all one great, expansive, delighted grin.

All the vivid train of circus heroes shook hands with the children and told them good-by. Did they like it?—

"No lunch today," remarked a nurse to a little girl watching the performance from a wheel-chair, as noon approached. Her eyes never left the ring. "I don't care," she said.

LOWMAN FALLS AFOUL OF MELLON; MAY BE DROPPED

ing upon Lowman not only to fire the crooks, but to name them and threatening an investigation unless that is done.

Backing Lowman's Charges.

"We possess ample evidence to support Lowman's charges," said a statement today by Charles Cahert, who heads the Association Against Impure Liquor. "We are suggesting to Lowman that he name the grafters in the national prohibition service. We feel that each community of our country is entitled to know who are grafters and blackmailers in its midst. We believe that every corrupt prohibition agent should be brought to trial and the crooked operation from which the physician and the druggist are alone suffering should be exposed. We ask Lowman to name the crooks.

"We believe the incompetent and crooked prohibition agents should be made a matter of court record. We possess evidence, and we shall disclose that evidence before Congress to substantiate not only Lowman's charges, but our own charges that physicians and druggists have been imposed upon by fake or dishonest prohibition agents. We say, name the grafters. Mr. Lowman, do not merely fire them."

Senator Reed Congratulates Lowman on His Frankness.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 10.—Senator James A. Reed today congratulated Seymour L. Lowman, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement, for the statement that while there were "a lot of splendid, fearless men in the service," there were "many incompetent and crooked men, and bribery is rampant."

"Facts speak louder than words," said Senator Reed. "Everybody advised regarding the facts knows that in nearly all large cities of the United States liquor is sold at many places, publicly and in flagrant violation of law. I have not the slightest doubt any prohibition agent proceeding in good faith and with a reasonable degree of inteligence, could make hundreds of arrests within two weeks. While I have no personal or direct knowledge I am told it is a common thing for bars to be open and beer containing a high percentage of alcohol to be sold to virtually anybody who asks for it."

After recounting statements of the district attorney in New York concerning prohibition enforcement, Senator Reed said:

"With these thousands upon thousands of violations daily, it is no answer to say an occasional arrest is being made—probably one out of a thousand brought to the attention of the court. There must be some reason for this, and the new prohibition director probably has given the right reason. He is to be congratulated for at least having told part of the truth. Regardless of the merits of the prohibition question and regardless of whether one favors the Volstead act, every honest and decent citizen is shocked by the existence of a system of blackmail and graft existing anywhere in the United States."

SOURCE OF $2,000,000 OFFER FOR LEAGUE LIBRARY SECRET

Geneva Officers Neither Admit Nor Deny It Was Made by the Rockefellers.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 10.—League of Nations officers declined to admit or deny today that the Rockefeller foundation had donated the $2,000,000 offered from America to build and endow a library for the League of Nations. They said they preferred to await definite acceptance of the gift by the assembly before making any announcement.

The impression prevails in league circles, however, that either the Rockefeller foundation itself, or one or both of the Rockefellers, offered the gift. No conditions are attached to the donation, it is said. The league being entirely free to decide what proportion is to go to the construction of the building and what part to the endowment.

DIET OF "LIVE" CHICKENS CAUSES ARREST OF THREE

Negro Who Posed as "Wild Lady" in Carnival, Show Owner and Keeper Charged With Cruelty.

The "wild lady" of a traveling street carnival at 4600 Gravois avenue was stopped in midst of a feast on live chickens last night by a visit of officers of the Humane Society of Missouri, accompanied by two policemen.

The policemen pulled a wig from the ferocious looking exhibit and the "wild lady" stood revealed as a Negro youth, who gave his name as Lewis Ballard.

The owner of the show, the ballyhoo artist who described the "wild lady" and the keeper who stood over the "wild lady" with a whip to prevent him from becoming too wild and the "wild lady" himself all followed the policemen and Robert F. Sellar, secretary of the Missouri Humane Society, to the Mounted District Police Station to be booked on charges of "ill-treating and maiming and killing" the chickens, fed at the rate of four an hour to the voracious "wild lady."

15 BALLOONS SAIL FROM DETROIT IN BENNETT CUP RACE

Eight Nations Represented in Sixteenth International Contest, Which Starts Under Cloudy Skies.

By the Associated Press.

WHITMORE, O., Sept. 10.—Two ballons passed over here five minutes apart at 8:50 p. m., traveling southeast. Whitmore is about 65 miles from Detroit.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 10.—Bearing the colors of eight nations, 15 huge silken gas bags floated from the Ford airport here today and headed in the general direction of the Atlantic as the beginning of competition for the Gordon Bennett trophy in the sixteenth international ballon race.

Each of the crews was determined to remain aloft until the farthest possible distance from the starting point had been reached.

The race may last as long as three days, according to statements from the balloon pilots before they cast off ballast and took to the skies. The pilots went aloft prepared to brave rain. Most of the balloons were equipped with rubber boats in case they should be forced down over water.

Promptly at 4 o'clock, Maj. Enrique Maldonado and his aid, Maj. Benito Molas, threw off the ropes holding their huge bag, the Hispania, and rose into a cloudy, overhanging sky. A few minutes later the balloon was out of sight in the clouds. The 14 other entries followed at five-minute intervals.

Thinks Bags Will Go East.

The bags all followed a course directly east of Detroit, although it was believed they might be swept in a southerly direction before morning. C. G. Andreus, weather forecaster for the flight, announced at the start that, in all probability, the balloons would be seen over western New York and Pennsylvania in the morning.

An early report that three balloons had been sighted near Sandusky, O., however, led Andreus to believe the bags may have been swept into the path of a north wind, which would blow them through Ohio and into the Virginias. Sandusky is 55 miles from Detroit.

Winds were variable at the start of the race, and weather reports presented such uncertain wind charts that it was believed the race this year would be almost entirely one of pilots' skill in seeking "blinds" for the best wind current. The wind current shortly after the take-off averaged 16 miles an hour.

Henry Ford, wearing a raincoat, appeared at the airport before the balloons took off and witnessed the start of the race. Edsel Ford was one of the starters.

Before the first bag threw off ballast, 18 planes from Selfridge Field, Mount Clemens, under the command of Maj. Thomas G. Lanphier, commandant, flew over the field to entertain the crowd. As the Army, the United States entry, took off, the planes dipped in salute. The pilots of the balloon had received the good luck wishes of Major-General Mason M. Patrick, former chief of the Army Air Service.

As the balloons took to the air, a band played the national anthem of the country each represented.

It was reported the inflation of the balloons set a record. Inflation was begun shortly before 4 a. m. and by noon the work virtually had been completed.

There will be no official report from the balloons until they land. The winner of the race will be the pilot who reaches the greatest distance from the starting point.

Record Holder in Race.

Maurice Biename, who holds the record for distance in the international event, 1334 miles, was entered under the French flag in this year's race. France, Spain, Belgium, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, England and the United States are the other entries.

The contestants, in the order in which they took off, are:

MORE TRAFFIC POLICE NEEDED, CHIEF SAYS

Only 83 Men Available for Work at Intersections Throughout City.

An acute shortage of patrolmen is hampering the work of the Police Department in policing the city, Chief of Police Gerk announced yesterday, and particularly is the need of additional men felt in the traffic department, there being only 83 men available for duty in directing traffic at intersections. There are 69 motor cycle men, but they can give little or no time to intersection traffic work.

Chief Gerk pointed to the intersection at Twelfth boulevard and Olive street, where traffic is heavy during the day and the pedestrians' problem made difficult by the width of Twelfth and the present work of widening Olive. The traffic officer at this intersection comes on duty at 8 a. m. and remains until 6 p. m., but because of a shortage of relief men, he must serve as relief man for the officer at Twelfth and Locust, in which periods Twelfth and Olive is neglected.

"We have five or six hundred intersections in St. Louis that need traffic officers as badly as Twelfth and Olive," said Chief Gerk, "but owing to an acute shortage of men in the department we are compelled to neglect them and do the best we can with the 83 men available for this urgent work. The St. Louis police department has been increased only 150 men by the Legislature since 1907, while auto traffice has thereased by great bounds in that period."

He added that congested intersections are increasing at such a great rate that it now is necessary to shunt intersection officers all over the city at different hours to keep pace with the problem. The only relief Chief Gerk sees is by legislative action to increase the force to such numbers as will enable the department to cope with the situation.

PRISONER STABS POLICEMAN

Laborer, 73, Had Been Reported as Breaking Windows in Houses.

Patrolman George Erlacher of Central District was stabbed in the right forearm by a man he was attempting to arrest in an alley between Eugenia and Walnut streets, east of Twenty-first street, last night.

With his walking partner, Patrolman Edgar Mathews, Erlacher had gone to investigate a report that a man was in the alley smashing windows of several houses in which Negro families live. After the man had wounded Erlacher, he was subdued by Mathews. He gave his name as Fate Coffman, 73 years old, a laborer and said he had no home. The policeman's wound is not serious.

$2,000,000 LIQUOR SEIZURE

PHILADLEPHIA, Sept. 10.—United States Customs officials and City police raided a tramp steamer as it docked late tonight and seized a cargo of alleged Canadian whisky. Value of the shipment, officials said, was in excess of $2,000,000.

The vessel, known as the Bulko, was said to have sailed from a Canadian port. Five of the crew of 35 were arrested, the others, including the Captain, escaping.

U. S. SPEEDS TRADE TREATY NEGOTIATIONS

New French Tariff Schedules Causes America to Seek Conference at Once.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—New instructions authorizing the immediate openin,, of negotiations with France for a commercial treaty have been sent by the State Department to the embassy in Paris, where the negotiations will take place.

Under a tentative arrangement the detailed negotiations were expected to begin soon after Oct. 1, but because of the situation created by the application of new French tariff schedules, the State Department has instructed the embassy to undertake the negotiations without delay.

The Commerce Department has received expressions of concern from American exporting houses as to the possible bad effect upon their business of the tariff handicaps imposed under the French schedules.

Neither the State nor the Commerce departments is in a position to study the comparative status of German and American goods under present conditions, but that serious discrimination against American goods is involved was admitted today at the State Department.

France Increases Duty on Canadian Wheat 7 Cents a Bushel.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 10.—France has increased the tariff on Canadian wheat approximately from 20 cents to 27 cents per bushel, according to official advice received today. The higher rate goes into efefct immediately.

While Canada's export of wheat to France has fluctuated from year to year, the present change, on the basis of last year's export of 4,155,867 bushels, will mean an increase in the total French duty collected on Canadian wheat of nearly $280,000.

Canada, under the 1922 treaty between the two countries, enjoys a minimum tariff and "most favored nations" treatment on exports to France, and the increase now put into effect is due to the raising of the minimum tariff rate to all countries by France.

money, to buy more land, and so on in the expanding circle, as the story goes. Of course, he wanted to teach men to raise more corn, but his main object must have been to raise better men. We come back to the query that is contained in the concentrated wisdom of the ages, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?'"

"All of our science and all of our arts will never be the means for the true advancement of our nation, will never remove us from the sphere of the superficial and the cynical, will never give us a civilization and a culture of any worthy and lasting importance unless we are able to see in them the outward manifestation of a spiritual reality.

"Unless our halls of learning are real temples which are to be approached by our youth in an attitude of reverence, consecrated by worship of the truth, they will all end in a delusion. The information that is acquired in them will simply provide a greater capacity for evil. Our institutions of learning must be dedicated to a higher purpose. The life of our nation must rise to a higher realm.

"Many of our older universities were founded by pious hands at great sacrifice for the express purpose of training men for the ministry to carry light to the people on the problems of life.

"Unless our college graduates are inspired with these ideals, our colleges have failed in their most important function and our people will be lacking in true culture. Abraham Lincoln, who was the most spiritual of our Presidents, had a true appreciation of this principle.

"While he did not fail to place a proper emphasis on the cultivation of the physical world around us, he thoroughly understood that this must be supplemented by a cultivation of the intellectual and moral world within us. The human soul will always rebel at any attempt to confine it to the physical world. Its dwelling place is in the intellectual and moral world. It is into that realm that all true education should lead.

"Unless our scholarship, however brilliant, is to be barren and sterile, leading toward pessimism, more emphasis must be given to the development of our moral power. Our colleges must teach not only science but character. We must maintain a stronger, firmer grasp on the principle declared in the Psalms of David and re-echoed in the Proverbs of his son, Solomon, that 'The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge.'"

Referring to education, Mr. Coolidge said:

"The importance attached to it is signified by the large proportion of public money which is devoted to its support. In the country at large it is probable that well toward three-fifths of all local taxes are expended directly or indirectly for education. We hear very little criticism of the amount of money that is used for this purpose, but it is undoubtedly well from time to time to make a careful investigation of this very large item, not so much to attempt to reduce it as to make certain that all wastes are eliminated and that the community is securing full value in return for its large outlays.

"No progressive community can afford to neglect the education of its people. Considered on the basis of economics their development depends very largely on the scientific learning and skill with which their efforts are directed. The day of the rule of thumb is past. The day of the exact application of scientific knowledge by persons technically trained in all the affairs of life has come. Any neglect in this direction would mean at once stagnation, decay and failure. It is impossible for any community to hold its place in modern society unless it is fully equipped in the educational field of arts and sciences and research."

President Speaks to Crowds as Train Stops at Stations.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S SPECIAL TRAIN, EN ROUTE TO WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Homeward bound after three months in the West, President Coolidge approached the halfway point in his journey to Washington tonight, once more traversing the heart of the middle western agricultural region of America.

Shortly after dedicating the Lincoln Memorial Library at South Dakota State College, he crossed the State boundary line into Minnesota and as night wore on sped through Wisconsin toward Chicago.

On all sides of his line of travel, Mr. Coolidge saw evidences of the bountiful harvest that seems destined to reward this section of the country this year. He was carrying away with him the impressions gained from this long stay in the West and a vivid remembrance of real Western hospitality which has been extended to him and Mrs. Coolidge throughout their stay.

Waves to Groups at Stations.

In keeping with the touch of Western atmosphere which he has assimilated during his stay in the Black Hills, the President greeted with a smile and a wave of his hand: the groups of folk who came to the stations of various towns passed to watch the train go by.

Wherever operating stops were made, both he and Mrs. Coolidge appeared on the back platform to wave and say a word of good-by to the people of the West.

The train stopped at Madison, Wis., for about five minutes, about 10 p. m., and the President was greeted by Gov. Zimmerman of Wisconsin and a group of State officials, who boarded the train. The station concourse was crowded with 4000 persons, to whom Mrs. Coolidge, the President and their son, John, waved their greetings from the train.

Senator Norbeck of South Dakota and Mrs. Norbeck, along with some other South Dakota folk, said good-by to the President and Mrs. Coolidge at Brokings, S. D. Just before leaving the Senator said a word of appreciation to Mr. Coolidge for the warm praise the President gave Norbeck in an informal speech yesterday.

Words of Praise for Norbeck.

Wherever he spoke to people on the trip through South Dakota today, the Senator was congratulated for having drawn from the President the statement that he regarded Norbeck "as one of the great men of the nation."

As the dinner hour came, the President's train approached the Mississippi River and from there it was a seven-hour run to Chicago.

Mr. Coolidge did not plan to make an appearance in that city, the hour being late.

All of tomorrow will be consumed in traveling eastward through Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania to Washington, but the time schedule has been reversed from that of the westward trip so that many cities passed in the night last June this time will be able to catch a glimpse of the President and Mrs. Coolidge.

On his arrival in Washington, the President expects to confer immediately with members of his Cabinet and other Government officials in connection with the administration's fall program.

Sprinkler Lays Dust for President.

A sprinkler system had been attached to the engine hauling his train, and this, turned on when a city was being approached, enabled the crowd to see the President without his train blowing up clouds of dust.

The President made no speeches in Minnesota. He stood silently at the rear of his car at Tracy, Waseca and Winona, Minn., smiling down at the people who crowded around his car.

The trip across Minnesota was through some of the hottest weather Mr. Coolidge has experienced this summer. As evening wore on, however, it became more comfortable. The President spent the day reading and resting in his private car, going to the back platform whenever a town or city was passed. Orders had been issued to run slowly through the cities.

LOUISIANA TEACHER DRIVEN FROM HOME BY ARMED MEN

Sheriff Details Deputies to Escort Him Back to Tallisheck, and Guard Him.

By the Associated Press.

COVINGTON, La., Sept. 10. — Prof. George W. Wingo, principal of Central high school at Tallisheck, La., who with his wife and eigh months' old baby was driven from the community Friday night by 15 men, some of them armed, intends to return to his school Monday.

Sheriff Galastas of St. Tammany parish, ordered two deputies to escort Wingo back to his home, guard him and make a thorough investigation of the case.

"They gave me only 15 minutes in which to pack my belongings and get out," he said. "They said that if at the end of that time they returned and found me they would kill me."

The only reason assigned, he said was that some time ago he had had some difficulty with parents of some of the pupils who objected to his method of correction for infractions of school rules. He added that he was living with a family whose members were at feud with members of another family.

NORRIS WOULD SUPPORT WET PROGRESSIVE FOR PRESIDENCY

Prefers Such Candidate to Reactionary Dry—Says Al Smith Is Honest and Progressive.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 10.—United States Senator George W. Norris would rather see an honest progressive, though a wet, in office than a radical dry who is reactionary in everything else, the Omaha Bee-News quotes him as saying in an interview today.

A presidential candidate's party politics, religion, or views on prohibition, no matter what they may be, will not prevent Senator Norris from supporting him in 1928, provided he measures up to the Senator's Standard as a "sincere, fighting, honest progressive," he asserted.

Senator Norris would mention no candidate. He said this however: "Governor Al Smith of New York is of course handicapped by his religion and because he is a wet. I believe, however, that he is honest and that he is a genuine progressive. I am a protestant and a dry, yet I would support a man who was wet and a Catholic provided I believed he was sincere in favor of law enforcement and was right on economic issues."

By the Associated Press.

HURON, S. D., Sept. 10.—Senator Thomas J. Walsh, who presided over the Democratic National Convention in 1924, declared here today that Al Smith was the leading Democratic possibility at present and that William G. McAdoo is not an active candidate for the nomination. Senator came here to speak before the South Dakota Bar Association Convention.

Kolster
A broader conception of radio value

Demand more for your money. Radio values are feeling the whip of competition. And on this severe basis Kolster popularity is vigorously increasing.

You are not buying advertising or salesmanship but value in radio performance. Tone, is it truly natural? Selectivity, does it truly separate what you want from the rest? Range, how far and how good? Volume, is it generous? Appearance, are you proud of it? These to the maximum for every penny spent are the source of years of satisfaction in a Kolster!

Your dollars may be more appreciated today than you imagine, more powerful. Compare values.

Then . . . you . . . will . . . buy . . . Kolster.

M'CARL DECLINES TO RELEASE FUND FOR RIVER WORKS

Controls $2,000,000 of Regular Appropriation but Won't Use It in Mississippi Emergency.

HAS NO AUTHORITY TO DO IT, HE SAYS

Levee Repairs Up to States and Local Boards Anyway and They Have Been Negligent, He Adds.

Post-Dispatch Bureau
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—For the second time Comptroller General McCarl has turned down the proposal of Secretary of War Davis to use $2,000,000 of the current Rivers and Harbors appropriation for emergency flood control work on the lower Mississippi.

The $10,000,000 flood control appropriation will be exhausted by the end of this month, Davis pointed out in his first request to the Comptroller General. Unless additional funds are available for use during September and October to repair 250 crevasses in levees, caused by the recent flood, there is grave danger that the impoverished victims will be washed out again next spring.

McCarl said he fully appreciated the emergency and that he regretted that there was no way in which he could lawfully authorize the needed expenditures.

McCarl Explains Stand.

Davis had suggested that the general appropriation for Rivers and Harbors work was broad enough to include expenditures for flood control, but McCarl replied that this point had been considered before the first refusal.

"When a specific appropriation is made for a particular purpose it precludes the use therefor of a general appropriation that otherwise might have been available," McCarl wrote.

"There is for consideration the fact that the primary purposes of the two appropriations is essentially different, the former being to promote navigation and commerce—the development of navigable streams for use in interstate and foreign commerce, the movement of military forces, etc.,—purely a Federal proposition; the latter for protection of private property adjacent to the streams for which co-operation between local interests and the Federal Government has been provided—primarily a responsibility of the state or subdivision thereof.

Primarily Up to States.

"Thus, under the present arrangement, which has been fixed and determined by Congress, the primary obligation for protection of such private property rests upon the individual state or subdivision thereof within which the private property is located, the Government to aid and assist financially in connection with the maintenance and development of the river as a navigable stream, only in proportion to the amount made available by such state or subdivision thereof.

"It is a matter conclusively for the consideration of the Congress, and for determination by the administrative office, or by this office, whether the protection of such private property from floods shall entirely, or to a greater degree than heretofore authorized, also become the responsibility of the Federal Government.

The proportion of local aid to Federal aid to which McCarl refers is 1 to 2. For every dollar the local subdivisions put into levees the Federal Government supplies two dollars. From this proportion it would seem that the primary obligation rested on the Federal Government."

Blames Local Boards.

McCarl said he understood that the President and the Secretary of War particularly desired the proposal to be considered as an emergency plan, devised to save lives and property in the future. He replied that the present condition had been brought about "to some extent at least from the fact that he states involved have not complied with the statutory requirements necessary to authorize the use of the Federal funds."

"It is obvious," McCarl concluded, "that the gravity of the situation is for the consideration of the State Legislative bodies at least equally with that of the United States, and that the responsibility is not wholly upon the Government of the United States."

Davis has repeatedly pointed out that the local levee boards have not furnished funds for repair of the crevasses because they were impoverished. Much of the local funds has been expended to fight the present flood and to take care of the stricken families. Some districts were so impoverished that they will not be able to meet their obligations on bonded indebtedness and it is doubtful whether they will be able to supply additional funds for further levee work for many years to come.

WARRANT CHARGES DRY AGENT WITH DISTURBANCE OF PEACE

Man Claims He Was Wrongfully Accused of "Paul Revere" Ride to Warn Bootleggers.

A warrant charging Carrol Byrd, a Federal prohibition enforcement agent on the force headed by Group Chief Dillon, with peace disturbance was applied for yesterday at Clayton by Henry Paul, 22 years old, who resides on the Snyder Mill road, north of Creve Coeur Lake, as the result of his arrest last Thursday.

Joined with Paul in the action against Byrd are Miss Evelyn Sims, 20 years old; John Grier, 15, and Virginia Grier, 9 years old, who lived until Friday on the farm of Mrs. Addie Grier, for which Paul is caretaker.

It is alleged by the complainants that when Byrd and other agents raided the Grier farm in search of a still they wrongfully arrested Paul and accused him of acting as a "Paul Revere" in warning the bootleggers. Byrd and the other agents are charged with using abusive language in the presence of the ther complainants. Mrs. Grier, her two children and Miss Sims have moved to 5940 Theodosia avenue for the winter so the children can attend school.

LAST CONTINGENT OF LEGIONNAIRES SAILS FOR FRANCE

Gen. Pershing and National Commander Savage of Legion Head 1700 Ex-Soldiers on Leviathan.

MONSTER FAREWELL DEMONSTRATION

Vice President Dawes Is Among Thousands at Pier —Air and Water Craft Follow Liner in Harbor.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The liner Leviathan, flagship of the "Second A. E. F.," was far out at sea tonight carrying the last contingent of the American Legion to the Legion Convention in Paris. The sailing occasioned one of the most elaborate bon voyage demonstrations the harbor ever has seen. The contingent is made up of 1700 persons.

In sharp contrast to the secret departure of the same vessel 10 years ago when, with her sides a nightmare of camouflage, she carried thousands of the A. E. F. on a more serious mission to France, the Leviathan was dressed in her best today and steamed down the bay under an air escort that included the dirigible Los Angeles and a squadron of planes.

Vice President Dawes was at the pier, among crowds of relatives and friends of the Legionnaires, and Gen. Pershing was a passenger. As the liner entered the Narrows, three National Guard planes circled overhead and Army bombers threw a smoke screen about the big ship. The Los Angeles and the semi-rigid airship J-3 cruised in the rear of the faster units of the air convoy.

Navy destroyers and a score of tugs followed the ship and a fireboat tossed up jets of water which fell across the wa'e in cascades of rainbowed mist. From the municipal tug Macom, Vice-President Dawes shouted his last farewell to Gen. Pershing on the bridge of the Leviathan.

A few moments before he had sent from the Macom by radio to Gen. Pershing the message: "Your comrades who have to stay at home send you their love and wish you God speed."

In addition to the Legionnaires the vessel carried 154 ordinary passengers. Commander Hartley, master of the Leviathan, and also a member of the Legion, announced that all restrictions governing the use of first class accommodations by passengers traveling second class would be lifted for the voyage. All members of the crew of the Leviathan are Legionnaires.

Howard P. Savage, National Commander of the Legion, also was one of the passengers.

The Leviathan was the last of 27 ships to sail with members of the Legion and their families. Of these vessels, 18 put out for France from this port. Altogether, they carried 18,233 men, women and children bound for the convention.

FRANCE TO EXTEND OFFICIAL WELCOME

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—President Doumergue will appear and not fewer than five Cabinet Ministers will deliver addresses during the American Legion convention week, beginning Sept. 19, and virtually every member of the Government will attend one or more sessions of the convention.

Aparently some misunderstanding occurred at Cherbourg, where the local authorities announced today that the Government had refused to grant permission for a public manifestation and parade at Cherbourg on the arrival of the American Legionnaires aboard the Leviathan, Sept. 16. This immediately brought forth a denial from the Ministry of the Interior. The statement was made that all measures would be taken by the Ministry to insure that the program of the Cherbourg reception committee is carried out.

Arrangements for the Government's participation in the Legion convention were discussed today at a Council of Ministers held at Rambouillet. President Doumergue was announced, will attend tre opening session at the Trocadero Sept. 19, but will not speak —the French Constitution preventing him from doing so. The official representative of the Government on that occasion will be Louis Marin, Minister of Pensions.

The Government's official welcome to the Legion to France will be made by Premier Poincare at a dinner to the officials of the Legion by the Government on Sunday, Sept. 18. Tardieu will speak Monday evening at a banquet, while Painleve and Leygues, Ministers of War and Marine, respectively, will deliver addresses at a diner Tuesday night.

French Radicals Seek to Disrupt Cherbourg Welcome to Veterans,

Copyright, 1927, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, Sept. 10.—The ill-will of political radicals in France to the American Legion has caused the president of the reception committee at Cherbourg, Raymond Dorey, a World War veteran, to resign. Dorey wanted a public manifestation of welcome in Cherbourg, especially for the arrival of Gen. Pershing and the biggest group of Legionnaires, but the city council opposed it and the prefect agreed.

In his letter of resignation, Dorey declared he refused to limit the manifestation of welcome for the Legion because it displeased local radicals, and, although it was painful for him as a Frenchman to resign "under threats of revolutionaries," he saw no other way to get action.

Other members of the committee declare they also will resign if they cannot give a wholehearted welcome and ignore the opposition of Socialists and Communists. The Government is active tonight to settle the controversy.

The hostility of the radicals towards the American Legion is beginning to embitter French Conservatives as the day for the Legion's arrival en masse approaches, and many men feel like Leon Bailey, editor of the Intransigeant, who says tonight:

"Do these so-called international Communists presume they can make France show its fist to every other country than Russia? Comic pretension!"

The French Government may ask the recall of Ambassador Rakowsky. The question was discussed at a meeting of Cabinet Ministers, which was held at Rambouillet, the President's summer home, today. Briand being absent, no decision was made, but a majority of the Ministers agreed that Rakowsky's position as Ambassador had become untenable since his manifesto in Moscow calling soldiers to revolt in all but the Russian army.

5000 INVITATIONS TO BALL OF VEILED PROPHET THIS YEAR

Will Be Mailed Probably This Week for Event Oct. 5— Souvenirs Being Assembled.

More than 5000 invitations to the Veiled Prophet's ball, to be held in the Coliseum Wednesday night, Oct. 5, are being addressed and will be mailed, probably this week. Souvenir gifts, to accompany the invitations, according to the annual custom, are being assembled and will be sent out with or soon after the invitations.

While the number of those invited is said to be larger this year than ever before, that number will still be small as compared to the throngs which will view the Prophet's street pageant on the night of Oct. 5.

The subject to be depicted in the parade floats, and the detailed arrangements for the ball, are to be made known within a few days. The public is informed thoroughly in advance of all the facts about the Prophet's annual visit, except the one fact which is of the greatest interest—the identity of the young woman selected as Queen of his court. This is kept secret until the entrance of the Queen on the ballroom floor.

THIS ST. LOUIS COUPLE DOESN'T MOVE VERY OFTEN

Have Lived at Present Address 16 Years — He Has Been With Same Company 25 Years.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hartman of 3938 Arsenal street, who have resided at their present address for the past sixteen years are the latest prominent and well known St. Louis people to come out and publicly indorse the famous Herb Extract called Herb Juice which is said to be the greatest medicine of its kind on the market today, and has established a record in sales of better than two bottles per minute.

MRS. J. HARTMAN

A few days ago Mrs. Hartman called to see the Herb Juice Medicine Company representative and said that as she and Mr. Hartman had found Herb Extract, formierly called Herb Juice to be just as recommended, she felt as though she too could safely recommend it to her friends. In telling of their experience with Herb Extract, Mrs. Hartman said: "I was the first one to use it as I had suffered with constipation and a general run-down condition until I was completely worn out, simply felt lifeless, had no energy and was very nervous as I could not sleep or rest well at night. A neighbor of mine told me about your wonderful medicine, and since using it feel like a different person. Bowels act regular, and as I was relieved of the constipation that tired, worn-out feeling disappeared, nerves became quieted, and I could rest well at night, consequently when morning came I felt completely rested and refreshed. My husband was also troubled a great deal with his bowels, also gas and indigestion after eating. He, too, used Herb Extract and says he not only feels 100 per cent better, but is no longer troubled with this condition. I know that Herb Extract did all that was claimed for it in our case and feel safe in recommending it to others for the above trouble."

5000 INVITATIONS TO BALL OF VEILED PROPHET THIS YEAR

Will Be Mailed Probably This Week for Event Oct. 5— Souvenirs Being Assembled.

More than 5000 invitations to the Veiled Prophet's ball, to be held in the Coliseum Wednesday night, Oct. 5, are being addressed and will be mailed, probably this week. Souvenir gifts, to accompany the invitations, according to the annual custom, are being assembled and will be sent out with or soon after the invitations.

While the number of those invited is said to be larger this year than ever before, that number will still be small as compared to the throngs which will view the Prophet's street pageant on the night of Oct. 4.

The subject to be depicted in the parade floats, and the detailed arrangements for the ball, are to be made known within a few days. The public is informed thoroughly in advance of all the facts about the Prophet's annual visit, except the one fact which is of the greatest interest—the identity of the young woman selected as Queen of his court. This is kept secret until the entrance of the Queen on the ballroom floor.

THIS ST. LOUIS COUPLE DOESN'T MOVE VERY OFTEN

Have Lived at Present Address 16 Years — He Has Been With Same Company 25 Years.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hartman of 3938 Arsenal street, who have resided at their present address for the past sixteen years are the latest prominent and well known St. Louis people to come out and publicly indorse the famous Herb Extract called Herb Juice which is said to be the greatest medicine of its kind on the market today, and has established a record in sales of better than two bottles per minute.

MRS. J. HARTMAN

A few days ago Mrs. Hartman called to see the Herb Juice Medicine Company representative and said that as she and Mr. Hartman had found Herb Extract, formerly called Herb Juice to be just as recommended, she felt as though she too could safely recommend it to her friends. In telling of their experience with Herb Extract, Mrs. Hartman said: "I was the first one to use it as I had suffered with constipation and a general run-down condition until I was completely worn out, simply felt lifeless, had no energy and was very nervous as I could not sleep or rest well at night. A neighbor of mine told me about your wonderful medicine, and since using it feel like a different person. Bowels act regular, and as I was relieved of the constipation that tired, worn-out feeling disappeared, nerves became quieted, and I could rest well at night, consequently when morning came I felt completely rested and refreshed. My husband was also troubled a great deal with his bowels, also gas and indigestion after eating. He, too, used Herb Extract and says he not only feels 100 per cent better, but is no longer troubled with this condition. I know that Herb Extract did all that was claimed for it in our case and feel safe in recommending it to others for the above trouble."

CORONER'S VERDICT OPEN AS TO WHO KILLED PALAZZOLO

Italian Gunman Known to Have Quarreled With Russo and Spicuzza Over $1500 Debt.

HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR THEIR MURDER

Police Seek Relatives of Pair on Theory That They Know Who Shot Down Their Betrayer.

Failure of police to solve the assassination of Alphonse Palazzolo at Tenth and Wash streets was indicated yesterday when little tangible evidence developed at the inquest, and a Coroner's jury returned a verdict of "homicide at the hands of two unknown parties."

Nevertheless, the roundup of suspects, chiefly relatives and friends of Palazzolo's enemies, continues. Police think they know who killed him and why.

The right-hand man of two brothers engaged in wholesaling supplies to moonshiners, Palazzolo was an unusual combination of business man and gunman. He was 30 years old, and had been in St. Louis about 10 years, coming from Pennsylvania where he had worked in a section gang. One police officer described him as the head of a blackhand ring, but proof is lacking.

"Smart" was the tribute paid to Palazzolo, even by his enemies. He played a large part in the organization of the moonshining industry on the East Side. When Cuckoo gangsters preyed on the moonshiners, Palazzolo hired Tony Russo and Vincent Spicuzza to form a defense gang. Thirteen men were killed and 14 wounded in the warfare that ensued.

One of these killings was charged to Palazzolo himself, and he was under bond when killed. He was charged with killing a Syrian linen peddler and wounding a second peddler in University City when he mistook them for Cuckoos with designs on the life of John Giannola, wholesale grocer, who lived nearby.

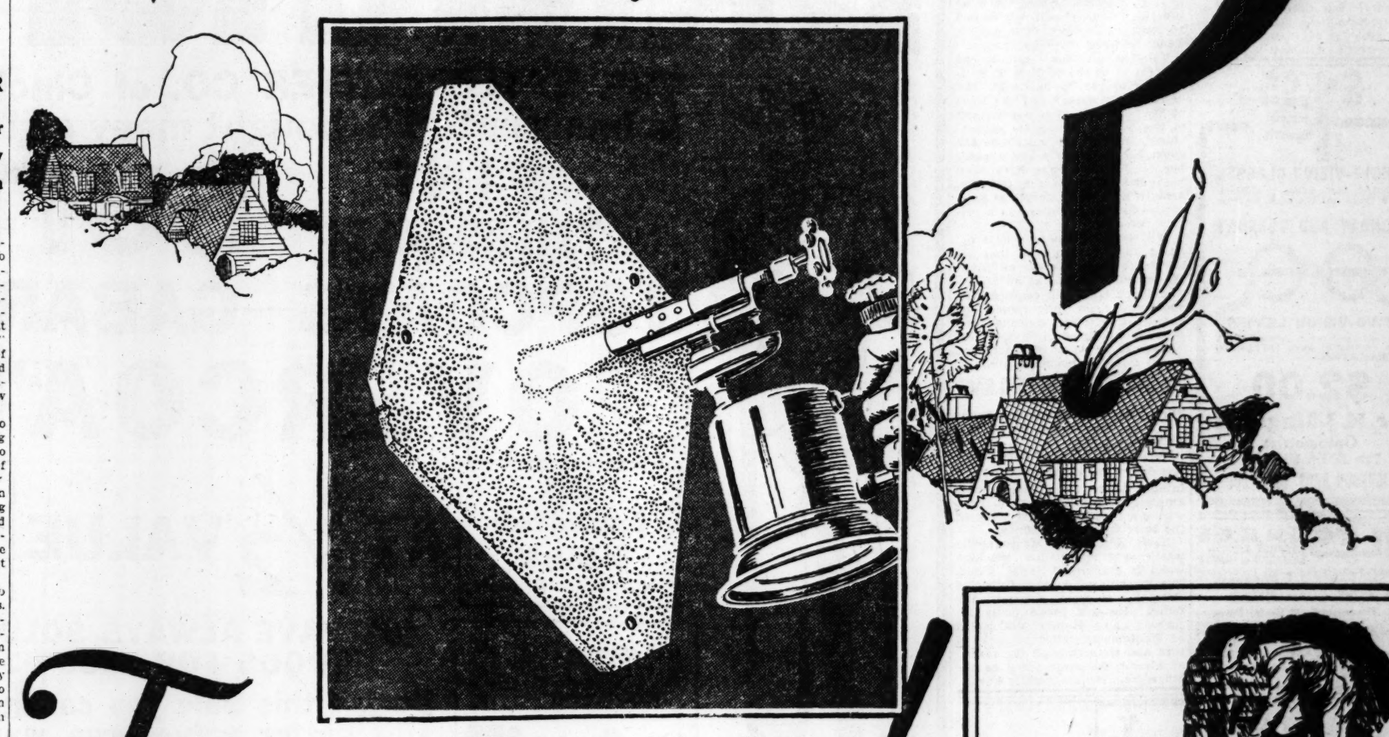
When the increasing intensity of the Italian-Cuckoo feud last autumn threatened to disrupt the moonshining business, Palazzolo was among the saner minds that effected a truce. Peace reigned for a while, and then Palazzolo made his big mistake.

He quarreled with Russo and Spicuzza, the "hard-boiled" members of the Italian faction, over $1500 he owed Spicuzza. He realized the danger in having them for enemies, and so, according to underworld gossip, he lured them to Chicago, where they were shot to death Aug. 9.

Exactly a month later, he himself was killed. He had parked an automobile at Tenth and Wash streets Friday and was passing in front of a poolroom at 1006 North Tenth when brought down by pistol and shotgun fire.

One witness, a boy, wounded by a stray bullet, said a man jumped from an automobiel and fired a pistol at Palazzolo and was assisted by one of three men still in the car, who fired a shotgun. Other witnesses told of seeing two men leave a green car and shoot Palazzolo—hence, the reference to "two unknown parties" in the Coroner's verdict.

The Answer to the shingle question is:



Try an' burn it!

These shingles are fire-proof. They will last forever. The blow-torch proves it

DEMAND a fire-proof shingle — not only for its safety, but because it will actually save you money. Before you choose a shingle, "Try an' burn it!"

Even the white-hot flame of the plumber's blow-torch cannot harm these beautiful Johns-Manville Rigid Asbestos Shingles. They are more than "fire-resistant," or "fire-safe." They are absolutely fire-proof.

That's the kind of roof that Johns-Manville now offers you at little more than the cost of ordinary, flimsy shingles. A shingle that means complete protection against roof-communicated fire! A shingle that should never need a cent for repairs. A shingle that you will never need to replace as long as your home stands.

You will like the interesting, broken line beauty these hexagonal shingles give your roof. They may be laid either side to the weather, exposing the cool gray of one side or the blended autumn colors of the other.

Get this beauty, economy and protection for your roof at little cost. Every dealer listed on this page can give you full particulars.

Re-roof for the last time
—right over the old roof
with these everlasting shingles

Leave the old roof on. Lay these beautiful everlasting shingles right over it. No fuss, no dust, no litter of torn-off shingles on the lawn. No danger from rain while the work is in progress.

Then forget your roof. It will be everlasting—no costly repairs. It will be fire-proof—you need never fear flying sparks. You re-roof for the last time when you re-roof with Johns-Manville Rigid Asbestos Shingles.

JOPLIN CAPITALIST VANISHES; HIS ABANDONED AUTO FOUND

Friends Fear Wallace Kane Was Robbed and Murdered; Empty Purse in Machine.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLINTON, Mo., Sept. 10.—The fate of Wallace Kane, Joplin capitalist, who disappeared while in Windsor Monday night, still is unsolved. Kane, who as a boy lived in Clinton, came here Sunday, hired an automobile and went to a farm he owns 22 miles east of here where he leased the farm to L. O. Thomas. He was seen at Windsor Monday and telephoned his wife at Joplin to tell her he would be home Tuesday.

Tuesday morning Kane's car was found at the M-K & T Railroad station at Windsor. In the front seat were found the lease of his farm and other papers, and in the back seat was his pocketbook, empty. He had about $50 when here. His wife and a number of Joplin friends have been here directing a search for him, assisted by Sheriff Markle of Henry County and deputies and a private detective.

It is feared Kane was held up, killed and robbed, and that his assailants drove the car to Windsor, where they caught an M.-K.-T. freight train and escaped. The speedometer on the rented car showed a greater mileage than Kane was believed to have driven.

Kane is president of the Locust Grove Bank at Locust Grove, Ok.

WOULD COMPEL USE OF UNION LABOR ON CITY CONTRACTS

Ordinance Prepared by Building Trades Council for Submission to Aldermen.

A proposed ordinance, requiring that all public work let by contract by the City of St. Louis be done by union workmen under union wages and working conditions, is being prepared by the Building Trades Council.

The measure is directed chiefly at street, alley, sewer and bridge construction. Much of this work is obtained by contractors employing nonunion labor. Due to the fact that nonunion workers are paid approximately 40 per cent less than union members would receive on these jobs, contractors employing strictly union labor are unable to present successful bids for the work, Maurice J. Cassidy, secretary of the Building Trades Council, said.

For the same reason a nonunion contractor was able to obtain a subcontract on the new Howard's Bend waterworks now under construction in the Missouri River, according to Cassidy.

An attorney had been employed to draft the ordinance, which is expected to be ready for presentation to the Board of Aldermen about Jan. 1.

CHARGES PAVING COMBINE EXISTS AT KANSAS CITY

Grand Jury, Unable to Complete Inquiry, Recommends Further Investigation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 10.—Charges that a paving combine is restraining "trade in the construction of public improvements in Kansas City at the expense of the taxpayers" were made yesterday in a minority grand jury report to Circuit Judge Ben Terte. The grand jury, the report stated, was unable to complete its investigation in the short time it had. A full investigation by the next grand jury was recommended.

"We have reason to believe a combination among the paving and sewer contractors in restraint of trade in the construction of public improvements exists in Kansas City at the expense of the taxpayers, but owning to the short time allotted us we are unable to complete our investigation and would recommend the next grand jury go more fully into the matter," the report said.

Today is the last day of the present term of court. The September term will open Monday and a new grand jury will be empanelled. The report was the result of three days' investigation.

MAN ARRESTED FOR KIDNAPING SON RELEASED ON WRIT

Salesman Will Not Be Forced to Return to Ohio to Face Wife's Charges.

Lee E. Foley, a salesman, of 3510 Hartford street, who was arrested at Clayton Friday for authorities of Bellefontaine, O., on a charge of having kidnaped his son, Robert, 4 years old, was released yesterday by Circuit Judge Wurdeman on a writ of habeas corpus, filed in his behalf by attorneys. Foley's attorneys contend he has legal custody of the child.

Foley was arrested on a fugitive warrant, as he was eating lunch in a Clayton restaurant. Gov. Baker had issued extradition papers, but Foley had failed to surrender on a bond of $1500, signed by his mother. The kidnaping charge, brought by Foley's wife because he had brought their son to St. Louis, now will be dropped and Foley will not be forced to return to Ohio for trial.

HEART ATTACK CAUSED DEATH OF WOMAN IN HOTEL ROOM

A Coroner's autopsy disclosed that the death of Miss Dorothy Drew, 22 years old, at a party Friday night, was caused by chronic heart disease with nephritis as a contributing cause.

Miss Drew and Miss Marie Morris, with whom she lived at the Rappahannock apartments, 710 North Ciara avenue, were with Fred Ramsen in his room at the Lindell-Plaza Hotel, 4300 Lindell boulevard, when Miss Drew collapsed, fell from a chair, and died. A fourth member of the party was a man who said he was Fred Metkamp, 705 Olive street. Police reported the men and women had met at Grand boulevard and Olive street.

SAFE BURGLARS GET $1900

Burglars entered the James Ramsey Market at 6123 Easton avenue Friday night, moved a large safe from the front of the building to a rear room and there, after failing to knock off the combination, used "come along," pulling out the combination and escaping with $1900.

COSGRAVE CALLS ON DE VALERA MEN TO GIVE UP THEIR ARMS

Irish Government Head Says He Will "Forgive and Forget" as Means to End Turmoil.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Sept. 10.—President Cosgrave, head of the Irish Free State Government, who has addressed scores of meetings in the provinces in the last few days in the general election campaign, has just made a notable declaration with a view to terminating the political turmoil.

"I am prepared to forgetg and forgive, difficult as that is," he said, "but on certain condition, one of which is that the majority will of the people must decide all issues.

"If the De Valera party will surrender the arms they dumped when fighting ceased in 1923 there will be no necessity to put the public safety act into operation. We insist that the State must have control of all the arms in the country."

President Cosgrave's offer to Eamon de Valera, however, is not taken very seriously. It is pointed out by Cosgrave's opponents he knows de Valera has no control over arms, and the arms section of the Republicans long ago repudiated the authority of de Valera and the political section, and that, therefore, de Valera would be powerless to surrender the arms.

The child was taken to City Hospital, where the wound was dressed. His condition was said not to be serious.

The intervening period was one of rising prices and a depreciated dollar, so that the saving was wholly due to the benefits of consolidation, among them "removal of the inability of local companies to command competent engineers; removal of the impossibility of economical financing by small units; creation of a more diversified demand when a larger territory is served."

CHICAGO FIGHTS GASOLINE TAX

Counsel Holds City Government Is Exempt from Levy.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—The municipal government need not pay the State gasoline tax, the corporation counsel's office today notified the City Controller, declaring that the law was unconstitutional. The opinion contended the law was inoperative because of its appropriation features.

Citing the clause providing for the passing on of the tax to the consumer by the distributor, who collects it, the opinion said the city cannot be classed as a distributor and cannot be taxed under the law.

Train Carries Own Ice Machine.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—"The Flying Scotsman" express has its own ice-making machinery aboard. The try-out has proved so successful that cars on other lines are to be similarly equipped. The refrigerator plants are in the diners' kitchens. During the summer it has been found that nearly 200 pounds of ice melt during a 400-mile journey, and it was decided to experiment with ice making en route. Power to operate the ice-making apparatus is generated by an electric motor driven by a belt from the restaurant car wheels.

NO SIGNS OF A FINANCIAL UPSET NOW

Nothing to Indicate Higher Money Rate Is Permanent —Stocks Hold Up and Busines Shows Active Trend.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review says:

"Yesterday's advance in the call money rate to 4 per cent for the first time since Aug. 4 set the financial district to wondering whether permanently dearer levels are on the way and if so how the stock market would stand up under that handicap. Everybody admits that the unseasonable ease in funds since early July has accelerated the market in shares and the bulls had hoped that the market might be pushed on higher this fall with the aid of a continued flow of cheap money. The concerted move from a 4 to a 3½ per cent level for rediscounts by the Federal Reserve Banks fired that hope. How so unprecedented a stock market as the present one might respond to a firming tendency in money remains, as does its behavior from every other standpoint, a mystery. A violent change in money plainly would put the market to a supreme test but nothing now on the horizon indicates anything more than a possible and normal seasonal rise in rates.

Banks at Odds.

"Interest turned for a moment to the squabble between the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago when the former forced the latter against its will to drop its discount rate to 3½ per cent in line with other banks. It was not to have been expected, perhaps, that an interior institution at an interior point like Chicago would be so ready as New York to inconvenience itself for the benefit of a policy largely foreign. The authorities differ in their views of the proper jurisdiction for final action. Equally good spokesmen can be found to support the supremacy of the Board and the banks in the adoption of a particular rate, but everywhere bankers regret injection of the dispute into politics at this time. The quarrel at any rate so far is exciting primarily only as a quarrel and not for any new light that is shed upon the money trend. It does not even indicate necessarily that the board intends to hold the present 3½ per cent for the remainder of the year.

"As the time draws near signs multiply that the recent mild recession in business has about run its course and that the months immediately ahead will bring improvement. Virtually all of the recognized prophets forecast the arrival of better before poorer days. Some even venture the prediction that a mild boom in business will develop late this year or early next. Opinions on the future of the stock market do not fall so nicely into one category. The favorable outlook for business and the plethora of investment funds provide a firm foundation for high security prices, but how high, is the question. All the more baffling does the question become to investors when it is noted that the spectacular upward movement represents improvement in the stocks of recognized merit. Unquestionably the time has come, at least, when shrewd discrimination must be made between the good and bad issues which, fortunately, most investors presumably are seeking to make.

"It may seem like something of a paradox that the financial district should become more enthusiastic over a short than a long crop, but that is exactly what happened this week when the Government forecast a 1927 cotton crop of 12,682,000 bales, as against a 17,977,000 harvest last year. The statisticians in Wall street figure that the 100 per cent rise in cotton since December will more than make up to the farmer his enormous loss in production. They reckon roughly that a 12,692,000 bale crop at 23 cents a pound should bring $1,495,550,000, whereas presumably last year's crop of 17,977,000 bales at 13 cents brought near $1,168,505,000. Certainly the 1927 upturn in prices provides a substantial basis for renewed confidence in our extra prices."

WEEK'S STOCK ADVANCES ONLY SLIGHTLY CHECKED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Stiffening money rates finally checked the rise in stock prices this week, but not until after the general industrial average had been carried to record high levels. Wall Street was frankly puzzled by the length and breadth of the advance, particularly in view of the large quotas of unfavorable trade news, but easy money rates and the growing optimism over the fall business outlook appeared to be the dominating factors.

There was a marked increase in so-called "public participation" reported by the leading commission houses, due to the return from vacations of many large and small traders. Pool activity, however, was believed to be largely responsible for the establishment of several score new high records during the week.

The steady demand for such high grade industrials as American Can, American Smelting, Baldwin Locomotive, General Electric, General Motors, International Harvester, International Telephone, Postum, U. S. Steel Common and Woolworth, all of which established new peak prices during the week, undoubtedly represented at least in part, accumulation for investment purposes. Investment trusts and insurance companies were reported to be large buyers of high-grade, seasoned dividend-paying stocks.

August steel production was above the level for July, but fell below that of the corresponding month in 1926 and 1925. U. S. Steel Common was heavily bought, however, with the Dupont interests again reported as large buyers. Gulf States Steel Common sank to a new low level for the year on the omission of the quarterly dividend, due at this time, but Bethlehem Steel forged steadily ahead on the belief that dividends on the common stock would be resumed within the next six months.

Curious cross currents of prices ran through the motor group with rather more attention paid to such issues as Nash, Studebaker, Chrysler and Hudson. The plans of Henry Ford continued to be a source of much rumor, the activity in some of the accessory issues being based on reported Ford contracts.

Oil shares continued rather sluggish in reflection of the unsettled trade position, although strong spots cropped out now and then. Mail order and farm implement shares were strong in anticipation of increased business though higher grain and cotton prices. Leather and textile issues were in better demand in reflection of the reported improvement in those industries. Distribution of a few large railroad equipment orders also helped that group.

New York Theater Guild To Send a Company Here During Coming Season

St. Louis Included in First Road Tour of Organization—"Countess Maritza" to Start Ball Rolling at Shubert in Two Weeks

THE first definite announcement of the opening of the theatrical season here comes from the Shubert-Rialto Theater with the word that "Countess Maritza," an operetta, will come to that house on Sunday night, Sept. 25, for a stay of two weeks. The first dramatic offering at the Shubert will be "The Shanghai Gesture," starting Oct. 9, with Florence Reed in the role which she created.

So far the American has announced no opening date. The motion picture, "Old Ironsides" remains another week after the present one and there is a possibility that it will be followed by another movie, "The King of Kings." The first show booked in was Richard Bennett in "The Barker," but this has now been set back until some time in October and George White's "Scandals," also booked for an early showing originally, will not reach here until November.

PLAYGOERS who have been demanding real "art" for the local theaters should find considerable satisfaction in the announcement that the most sedate of theatrical institutions, the New York Theater Guild, is taking to the road. Following in the wake of countless troopers who have been diminishing at an accelerating rate in the last few years, a touring repertoire is to carry it to scores of cities, towns and villages over the country.

Following the decisions of the Guild to send the acting company to Chicago, with a stopover at Cleveland, a second touring company also was placed in rehearsal to carry a repertoire program to St. Louis and many other cities.

It is no ordinary cast of players this troupe will have, for its roster includes such names as George Gaul, Florence Eldridge, Horace Alden, Erskine Sanford, Molly Pearson, Dorothy Fletcher, Lawrence Cecil, Frederic March and Leonard Loan. Their repertoire will have four plays, "The Guardsman," "Arms and the Man," "The Silver Cord," and "Mr. Pim Passes By."

Although the touring company will play in such cities as St. Louis, Detroit, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Rochester, Buffalo, Toledo, Toronto, Atlanta and Kansas City, it is also booked for many smaller towns such as Chickasha, Ok.; Ripon, Wis.; Denton, Tex.; South Hadley, Mass., and Williamsport, Pa. Playing in such small towns, the problems facing the Guild managers are many and at times they will be forced to transport the company by busses and similar means. Besides there are the usual problems of inadequate stage facilities, uncertain living accommodations and other handicaps which managers of road shows know only too well. Not only will the company play in theaters, but it also is to present its repertoire on lyceum platforms and in high school and college auditoriums. Permanent plans are being made, as it is the intention of the Guild to maintain a touring company during succeeding seasons.

THERE hardly will be any complaint of "second company" as the Guild's touring cast includes names which have been very prominent in New York productions. Miss Eldridge will be recalled as the leading woman in "Ambush." Mr. Gaul has played in "Back to Methusaleh," "The Chief Thing," "Goat Song" and "The Brothers Karamazov." Mr. Sanford is the original Mr. Pim of the Guild company, and Miss Pearson, who is new to the Guild company, ap-

"Second Thoughts — on — First Night

By Alexander Woollcott

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.

EVEN in this age of movies and tabloids there do remain a scattered few who can read a whole page of print without laming their lips or collapsing from the fierce mental concentration required. And among such vestigial traces of an earlier civilization there are some of us who get a good deal of placid pleasure out of meeting Samuel Pickwick again when, to the winding halloo of distant coach-horns and the friendly jingle of Christmas sleigh-bells, his ol sed, begaitered counterfeit trots blandly into the White Hart Inn which the indifferent stagehands reared last Monday night on the boards of the late Mr. Frohman's Empire Theater. It is the same dramatization of "The Pickwick Papers" which Boston, Washington and Philadelphia saw last spring.

I DO not know how else you can meet him nowadays outside the pages of the book itself. That faithful Dickensian, G. K. Chesterton, points out that by no feat of the imagination can you possibly think of Sam Weller and Mr. Pickwick as having died and therefore assures you solemnly that if you go in the right spirit any night now to an inn at some English crossroads and sit you down over a mug of ale, as like as not the door will swing wide and in will come Mr. Pickwick, spectacles, neckerchief, gaiters and all.

Now I have tried this invocation in many an out-of-the-way English inn, have sat me down, ordered mine ale in prodigious quantities and heard at last the festive commotion of arriving guests. "This," I confided to the depths of my tankard, "must be Mr. Pickwick." And the door would swing wide on 18 school marms, from Iowa, grimly zooming through Warwickshire in a body, with Baedeker in one hand and American Express checks in the other.

THIS "Pickwick" which Cosmo Hamilton and Frank C. Reilly have compiled and wherein, thanks to the actors, engaged, the roles of Alfred Jingle and Sergeant Buzfuz come magnificently to life, is, of course, by no means the first stage version of "The Pickwick Papers." Nor will it be the last, for the temptation to summon Sam Weller and Jingle and Mrs. Bardell out of the wings has persisted for generations, though each dramatist knows that in laying hands on the masterpiece he will be always a little like the fellow who proudly scoops up a bucketful of salt water and comes ashore crying "Behold, this is my version of the Atlantic."

THE most recent version was a musical comedy staked in New York some 20 years ago, with the lanky De Wolf Hopper scrouging down behind the spectacles and gaiters of Mr. Pickwick in a desperate and doomed attempt to suggest a benevolent cherub. The most famous was that earlier dramatization which triumphed because the role of that exuberant rascal, Alfred Jingle, was played by the sardonic Henry Irving, a rich performance so fondly remembered after half a century that only the other day, when George Belcher wanted to make a portrait of Jingle, he did not feel his model had just the right lean and hungry look until he dressed him up in the same seedy green costume which Irving used to wear when he strode nightly into the courtyard of the White Hart Inn.

THE earliest stage version was a piratical comedy called "Sam Weller: or the Pickwickians," which was running in the Strand when "The Pickwick Papers" was among the latest novels, 90 years ago. It made free use (without thanks or payment to Mr. Dickens) of whatever seemed amusing in the book and departed from it ad lib, introducing, as a topical climax, the arrival of Sam and Mr. Pickwick at the Coronation of Victoria, then young and sweet and frightened on an ancient throne.

This piece of dramatic larceny was carried out openly and proudly by one William Moncrieff who was so furious at Dickens for resenting it that he hurried a "Nich-

Schumann-Heink to Open Concert Season

MADAME SCHUMANN-HEINK, veteran concert and operatic artist will start the ball rolling for the musical season of 1927-28 with a recital at the Odeon, Monday evening, Oct. 10, to her falling the privilege of opening the rehabilitated and newly renovated Odeon which has served the St. Louis public as a concert hall for many years.

Schumann-Heink's visit to St. Louis will be the second year of her Golden Jubilee tour planned to celebrate her 50 years on the concert platform. Seventy concerts are on the schedule this season, as many as last year and a third year will be required to fill all the engagements and visit all the places where she is in demand and where she has sung in the past.

Work on the Odeon is being pushed and many changes are being made to bring the hall within the scope of up to date requirements.

CLOSE-UPS OF THE STARS

Behind the Screens OUT IN HOLLYWOOD

By MARGARET POST NIEMEYER.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 10.

AFTER spending as many days on the blistering Sahara and adjoining desert countries as I have recently while visiting Bebe Daniels, Gary Cooper, Jetta Goudal and others who are working in that vicinity it was indeed a delightful change to find myself on the Grand Canal in Venice with charming Florence Vidor for company.

For the making of "Honeymoon Hate," a story of Venice and its canals, of romance and moonlight, and in which Miss Vidor will play the stellar role, one entire end of the big lot has been transformed into a miniature Venice. One sees the Grand Canal, bordered on both sides by its palaces and residences, and into this run the endless little canals spanned by their arched bridges. Even the tipsy looking barber poles—at least they always look like that—in front of the houses to hold the gondolas, have not been forgotten. And, of course, there are plenty of gondolas with their high, curiously shaped bows, canopied tops and luxuriously cushioned seats. To give the effect of the "blue Adriatic" they have even poured quantities of Indigo into the water.

My last personal recollection of Venice is at low tide and the water was not blue but it WAS filled with garbage thrown from the Venetian kitchens. In some ways I think I prefer director Reed's Venice to the original.

THERE was a magnificent hotel on the Grand Canal and I sauntered in the lobby and was admiring the tapestries, rugs and Florentine mirrors which adorned it—and they are genuine by the way—when glancing out I saw a black and gold gondola piloted by a tall, pointed mustached boatman, in broad brimmed hat and gay sash, gliding up to the landing. The concierge, or his Italian equivalent, gorgeous in gilt braid as only European head servants can be, hurried forward to meet it, and out stepped Florence Vidor, radiant in gray fur trimmed coat and tiny black hat. Effie Elsler, her companion, who will be remembered for her portrayal of the part of Esther Ralston's mother in "Old Ironsides," and a quantity of luggage followed Miss Vidor out. On the steps to meet her were two friends who amusingly play wife number one and number two to the same man though neither is his wife at present. Corliss Palmer, that alluring blonde as one wife was lovely in gray chiffon while the other was equally smart in beige and gold sport frock. They all came into the hotel, the director shouted "that's great," and we all began to talk and act natural.

I wish I could have stayed longer in Venice for at a little distance, I saw San Marco, with the flock of pigeons out in front, fluttering about among the tourists and just beyond the Palace of the Doges, and I've never seen half the treasures of either. But I had an engagement to see James Collins, head make-up man, give a lady a black eye, so regretfully I bid adieu to the winged lion standing guard on his high column, and with a farewell glance at Venice and its charms I hurried around the corner to London where I saw a most interesting operation.

FOR picture purposes it was necessary for Olga Baklanova, the Russian actress, who is playing in "The Street of Sin," to have a black eye, the gift of Emil Jannings, the star of the piece. So to make it a practically painless affair Mr. Collins stuck a piece of onion skin on Mme. Baklanova's orb, giving it a drawn and puffed appearance and then artistically painted the skin in bruised shadings. So when you see "The Street of Sin," remember that circumstantial evidence is sometimes wrong, and that although Mr. Jannings may appear to be the guilty party it was really Mr. Collins who is responsible for the lady's damaged eye.

A LITTLE later I found myself on what I believe to be the loveliest and most realistic indoor set of an outdoor setting I've ever seen. It was that of the swimming pool and surrounding garden adjoining the palatial home of "Daniel Wade," railroad magnate and father of Olive Borden in her new picture called "Pajamas." At a little distance from the stately house, and completely surrounded by a pergola, was an enormous white tiled swimming pool, with its spring boards, diving towers and slides. On the velvety green lawn, separated from the pool by a wide black and white tiled border, stood inviting tea tables spread under gay colored umbrellas, and carved marble benches in vine-

"The Way of All Flesh" A Truly Great Picture For Low and High Brows

A Film Which Reaches the Heights, but Proves That Good Movies Can Really Be Made to Please Everyone.

By NIE.

THERE came to the Ambassador Theater yesterday afternoon a motion picture which is, in this captious critic's estimation, easily the best film offering of the year and quite one of the best movies of all time. It is "The Way of All Flesh" and it has that splendid actor, Emil Jannings, as its star. This is Mr. Jannings' first effort in a made-in-America film but the star of "Variety" repeats his tremendous success in that German made play. "The Way of All Flesh" has anything but a happy ending. Surely a greater part of the audiences will leave the theater in tears but they will know that they have seen a worthwhile screen offering.

In the story, Jannings is August Schiller, home-loving, God-fearing, honest and exacting in his demands for the good conduct of others. Sent to Chicago to sell some bonds, he meets Phyllis Haver, the Mayme of no conscience and fewer morals. Innocently, he tells Mayme of his mission.

She plays on his vanity and has him shave off the huge beard that is a part of his life. He comes from the barber shop a changed man, a boy out for a good time. He has it in a night of drunken revelry. Consciousness comes to August the next morning.

Realizing what has happened, that his money is gone and his reputation with it, he rushes to a cafe. He finds Mayme there and demands his money. She laughs and Kohler, the "steady" lover, hits him with a chair. Kohler's gang carry August to a railroad yard. As a farewell gesture, they decide to take his remaining money and jewelry. August's eyes opened just as thieving fingers tug at his watch. With the strength of madness, August grapples with Kohler just as a train comes rushing down on them. The gangster's body is terribly mangled.

Horror stricken, August later sees the hand of fate in this situation. Next day, the papers report that August Schiller died a hero's death trying to defend his employer's trust.

Years pass. August—old, feeble, broken, is a derelict. One night he chances to read a flaming poster—"August Schiller, World Famous Violinist, in Concert Tonight." It is his oldest son, the little boy whose first music lessons were taken during the evening concerts at home.

Night after night August spends his little hoard of savings for a gallery seat. After the concerts he goes to the stage door, there to peer around a corner for a closer glimpse of his boy. One night he hears the son tell his manager to buy tickets for the Christmas trip home. August determines to follow.

On Christmas day, the family goes to church. At the cemetery, they decorate the graves of the two boys who fell in their country's service, and their beloved father's tombstone. The old man follows them home and looks in at the window. A tree is lit; presents are being distributed. Outside, it is cold; the snow is falling. A policeman sees the old man peering in through the frost-covered pane. He is about to arrest him for loitering when Mrs. Schiller and her children come out. They beg the officer to let his prisoner go. Why? "It is Christmas." The old man, released, starts to shamble off. Only his oldest boy follows, asking, "Have you no home?" And the white olas Nickleby" play onto the boards before the serial had run its course, before even Dickens had finished writing it, and then defied that wrathy genius to think up as good an ending as he himself had contrived. Moncrieff had the law and a considerable tide of opinion on his side for it was generally felt throughout the theater that it was pretty selfish and churlish of Dickens to claim any proprietary right in the tales he spun.

SECOND THOUGHTS ON FIRST NIGHTS

Dickens resented all these stage versions hotly, raging at the spectacle of Oliver Twist played by a bulbous and portuberant soubrette and, at one performance, indulging in the dramatic criticism implied when he took one horrified look at the first scene and then lay down on the floor of the box until the performance was over.

THE first success of the new season—draining the ticket-rack of the Plymouth at once and playing to suffocated standees, even on the Saturday night before Labor Day when, according to the papers "everyone" is out of town—is this sentimental and firmly pathetic romance called "Burlesque," which Arthur Hopkins produced (and helped to write) for his own theater. If at its first performance last week it seemed less good to me than to many others in the house, it was, perhaps, because in my mind it was not shining by contrast with the earlier treasures in the August playbills.

It is a tale of true love behind the scenes along the burlesque wheel, and from first to last the Hopkins touch in production so refined it that all the rowdy, earthly vitality of its possibilities had vanished before ever the curtain rose. I felt as if I were reading the adventures of the Duke and the King in "Huckleberry Finn," rewritten in the cloisonee prose of Elinor Wylie. I felt as if I were seeing "Lightnin'" played by Forbes-Robertson. I felt as if I had come upon a panting of a prize fight and where I looked naturally and hungrily for the thud and sweat of a Bellows, I found only the dainty, sheer suavity of a Coles-Phillips.

"BURLESQUE" has two or three fine individual performances (notably that of Barbara Stanwyck as the comic's bride), several moments of endearing charm and some patches of delightful banter. There is one enchanting minute in the second act, when, at a noisy gathering of burlesque folk in a hotel suite, an awkward outsider asks the girl to sing "In the Gloaming." It is in an embarrassing and aching hush that Miss Stanwyck's throaty voice distills that old, sweet song. I wondered then how many old-timers in the audience remembered another play 40 years before, when another young actress sang that same song in the firelight of a long-forgotten act.

THEN there is that delightful moment in "Burlesque" when the comic describes another outsider as at once so ignorant and so suspicious about the theater that she would want to know if Klaw and Erlanger were really married. "But what does it matter?" asks one drunk, querously coming to in time to hear the question. "What does it matter, if they really love each other?"

The Vamp---In Person

"WAY OF ALL FLESH" WITH JANNINGS IS MAGNIFICENT FILM

bearded patriarch backs away with a sweet smile lighting his entire visage. "Yes," says he, "I have a home."

THAT is all. He does not fall into his son's arms and you know that he is on his way to die of old age and starvation. The temptation must have been great to end it with a hurrah in true American fashion but someone, maybe it was Jannings himself, had the temerity to do it as it should have been done.

Now "Metropolis" was a great moving picture as a technical triumph but it did not appeal to many theatergoers who wanted a story more than magnificent photography. Perhaps "Chang," which is to come later, will not be an enormous success for the same reason, but "The Way of All Flesh" has everything. It will appeal to those who want their pictures told in words of one syllable as well as to those who have been demanding better things on the screen. See it by all means.

WHETHER or not you care for "Old Ironsides," in its second week now at the American Theater you will be delighted with Wallace Beery, who has one of the best roles of his long career as the bo'sun in the picture. Beery and his brother, Noah, were born on a farm in Western Missouri. Noah went on the stage and became a singer. Wallace joined a circus and became an animal trainer, specializing in elephants. One summer Noah made the discovery that Wallace's voice was as good as his, so he induced him to give up circus life and go on the stage.

Wallace got a job in the stock company in which his brother was appearing. Later he appeared in musical comedy under the direction of Henry W. Savage, the New York producer. He started in motion pictures in the Essanay Studio in Chicago, and appeared in a long series of films. It is difficult to imagine the Wallace Beery of today as a Swedish housemaid in two-reel comedies—but nevertheless that was his initiation into film comedy. He went to Los Angeles with Mack Sennet and continued under his banner for some time.

Beery attracted Marshall Neilan's attention and was cast in "The Unpardonable Sin," his first dramatic feature, and that was the real beginning of his unusual reel career.

LEW CODY, the eminent male vamp of motion pictures will appear in person, as headliner on the bill to be presented at the St. Louis Theater, all week starting today, with the photoplay attraction being "Paid to Love," with George O'Brien and Virginia Valli. Cody, who is leaving the movies temporarily, comes here direct from Hollywood, accompanied by his wife, Mabel Normand, to begin a 10-week tour of the vaudeville circuit. He will present his own act, a monologue, and act as master of ceremonies of the entire show.

Jewish Star at Shubert Wednesday

The Jewish romantic actor and singer, Michal Michalesko with his cast from the Glickman's Palace Theater of Chicago, will appear for one performance only at the Shubert-Realto Theater, Wednesday evening, Sept. 14, in his success "His Great Love," written for him by Louis Freiman and Simon Wolf.

The latter finds himself olutely friendless, but in the face everything, sticks to his story refuses to give up Kit, as he s the baby. BEHIND THE SCREENS IN HOLLYWOOD covered arbors while covering the entire pergola was a mass of wisteria with its long lavender clusters hanging everywhere in profusion. In this pool, swimming, diving and playing were Olive and her friends, who in this picture typify modern youth of untold wealth doing as it pleases regardless of consequences. It was not the pool, nor the friends, nor even good looking Lawrence Gray the young leading man, however, that interested me. It was just little Miss Borden in her white collared, sleeveless bodiced, hip skirted, black and white bathing suit, with an interesting little row of white buttons all down the front.

Miss Borden weighs just 95 pounds and the only way I can describe her is as 95 pounds of sparkling personality. She is very young, hardly 18 I should judge, and totally unspoiled. I met her again later in the day in the Wardrobe Department consulting with Kathleen Kay, the studio modiste, as to some costumes. At this time she was dressed in a sheer little white frock with a double "apron" flounce edged all around with the daintiest of cross stitch flowers, in pastel shades. Her enormous white faced black velvet hat made a perfect frame for her dark hair and lovely, long lashed eyes, and heavy gold hoop earrings accentuated her gipsy-like charm.

AFTER Miss Borden left Miss Kay showed me all over the wardrobe department which occupies an entire building. There is a dressmaking department, in which are life-size models of all the stars. Then there is the hat-making shop, and also a regular department store, where yard goods, trimmings, furs, feathers, beads, in fact everything pertaining to costumes may be had, and a large force of workers is always kept busy. It was interesting to see the way the costumes are cared for during the making of a picture and until it's final release. They are hung each night in a certain case, that they may be had on an instant's notice in case a "retake" is necessary—as it often is—of any part of a picture. After that they are sorted out and put under their proper classifications as to "evening wear," "sport attire," "costume play," or whatever they are, until some future use may arise for them and often of course they are remodeled. What a pity it is that the beauty of color and texture does not show in the ordinary picture, for so much time, money and thought are spent on them and they are so exquisite. For instance Miss Kay showed me a tulle dress worn by Miss Borden in "The Secret Studio." It was made entirely of tiny flounces shading from deep red to pale pink and giving the effect of a flame, and there was a similarly shaded ostrich feather wrap to go with it. A rose velvet, chinchilla banded evening wrap worn by Alma Reubens in "The Heart of Salome" was another gorgeous affair, while a creation of gossamer-like beauty was a green tulle and silver fluff of a thing worn by Dolores del Reo in "My Wife's Honor."

There were other rooms full of the costumes for extras, where on a moment's notice they can equip several hundred sheiks, the population of a large Spanish town, the evening crowd at a Parisian cafe, or a thousand soldiers, it's all the same to them.

SURVEY ORDERED TO GET THE FACTS FOR ROAD NO. 61

State Highway Commission Postpones Decision Following Criticism of Chairman Matthews.

ENGINEER DUBIOUS OF WESTERN ROUTE

Cutler Says Preliminary Investigation Indicated Way Through Sikeston Was Better.

The plan which critics charged to Chairman Matthews of the State Highway Commission, to rush through at a meeting of the Commission in Jefferson City Tuesday a location of Federal Highway No. 61 through Sikeston, Matthews' home town, and through a district in which he and members of his family have large realty holdings, has been abandoned.

After Commissioners Davis and McGrew visited Scott and New Madrid counties, through which the road will pass, and had conferred with Matthews, the Commission announced yesterday that action on the routing of Highway No. 61 would be postponed until the October meeting of the Commission. By that time Commissioner Stephens, who is in Europe, will be able to be present.

The action will permit Highway Department engineers to make complete surveys of two routes, each of which has its supporters, and will enable those favoring a western route through the two counties to prepare their case for presentation to the Commission. Through the West Route Association, which they organized, they severely criticised Matthews, accusing him of attempting to obtain adoption of the eastern route in the absence of Stephens, and without giving the west route advocates an opportunity to present their arguments properly.

The controversy over the routing of this road, which is a part of the through highway from the Iowa-Missouri line along the eastern edge of Missouri to the Arkansas line, has become very bitter in the southeastern counties during the past months, but attracted no State attention until last Friday, when the Post-Dispatch gave a comprehensive review of the situation.

Commissioners Davis and McGrew with Chief Engineer Cutler and Attorney Lozier of the department, visited the counties, and in addition to conferring with Matthews, talked with representatives of the West Route Association.

Cutler, who was in St. Louis yesterday, said that before the October meeting, he would have complete surveys made of the two routes, and that they would be ready in ample time for consideration by all interested persons.

One complaint the West Route Association made against Matthews was that no survey had been made of the west route, and that apparently the east route was to be chosen without definite knowledge of what a west survey would show. Cutler today said he would assume the responsibility for the failure to survey the west route. He said that a preliminary inspection had convinced him that the east route should be built and that he opposed the west survey.

Police Chiefs Not Seeking Funds.

The Association of Chiefs of Police of Missouri has not authorized any solicitation of funds for pensions for policemen, or for any other purpose, and is in no way connected with such solicitation, it was announced at a meeting of Unit No. 1 of the association at Osage Country Club Thursday evening. The unit comprises the chiefs of police of St. Louis and St. Charles, Jefferson, Franklin and St. Louis Counties.

TILDEN AND JOHNSTON BOTH LOSE IN SINGLES

Lacoste Conquers 'Big Bill' and Cochet Downs 'Little Bill' to End America's Seven-Year Reign.

By ALAN J. GOULD
The Associated Press Sports Editor.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10.—The Davis Cup, most highly prized of tennis trophies, passed today from America to France for the first time in its history.

In a dramatic uphill fight to victory at the Germantown Cricket Club, France's youthful stars broke through the defense of America's veterans, captured both of the remaining singles matches this afternoon and won the challenge round by the close but nevertheless decisive margin of three matches to two.

American hopes had been buoyed high by the sensational comeback of William T. Tilden in two previous days of victorious play that had put the defenders in the lead. They faded suddenly, however, when Big Bill today "cracked" under the strain and fell before the machine-like onslaught of Rene Lacoste. They vanished entirely when Little Bill Johnston, although making a gallant as well as unexpected stand, yielded to the superior stroking control of Henri Cochet in the final match.

The End of a Long Reign.

Lacoste, scoring his second victory of the series, outstroked, outgeneraled and easily outlasted Tilden, upon whose previous brilliance high hopes had been placed. The French stylist won by scores of 6—3, 4—6, 6—3, 6—2, and his victory was as decisive as these scores indicate.

Cochet faced a plucky Johnston who showed a remarkable recovery from his disappointing form when the American lost in straight sets to Lacoste. But the result, even though postponed through Little Bill's gallant stand, was inevitable. Cochet won, also in four sets, by scores of 6—4, 4—6, 6—2, 6—4.

Thus the two veterans who, together, brought the famous tennis cup back from Australia in 1926 and played the leading role in defending it ever since, passed from their long-held heights before an impetuous, indominatable youth which would not be denied. With the ending of the dynasty that this two Bills set up seven years ago, the most successful in tennis history, France has established a new regime of control.

Hardy Wins on Irish Pal and Smiling Gus

Gravois Handicap Decided in Stretch; Big Day for Durnell

Crowd of 11,000 Get Real Thrill When Smiling Gus Comes From Fourth Position—Sweep Net Runs Out of the Money.

By Dent McSkimming.

C. E. Durnell, whom the turf fraternity designates "Boots," owns and trains race horses. He will own and train horses for several years to come and he will win a lot of races, but it is doubtful if Mr. Durnell will ever experience so interesting a day as he had at Fairmount Park yesterday afternoon, when his Irish Pal won the St. Louis Country Club Handicap and his Smiling Gus captured the next race, the Gravois Handicap, in a smashing finish, beating Kentucky Cardinal by a head.

Sharing Durnell's pride in a day's successful racing was apprentice Jockey Lee Hardy, who rode both Irish Pal and Smiling Gus and to whose rare skill and fine judgment in regulating his mount's pace much credit was given by the crowd of 11,000 which enjoyed the spectacle.

Smiling Gus Provides Thrill.

Of the two feature races, that in which Smiling Gus (he does not smile at all, but runs and runs) caught and passed two leaders in the stretch, was probably the more thrilling.

To those who were interested in the success of Hardy's mount, it appeared that he had waited too long before bringing the whip down to get a move out of Gus. They were on the far turn after having traversed three-quarters of a mile, Broad Axe was leading and Kentucky Cardinal was second and Scimitar was third.

Hardy tried to force Gus to move up but he got no response. Then down came the whip. Gus moved. He was on the rail. At the stretch turn he had only two before him and they were less than a length in front. But a length at the head of the stretch is usually an insurmountable gap.

Hardy Wins the Race.

Hardy made himself part of the horse as the pair came on, cutting out from the rail and pushing up between the two leaders. For the next hundred yards it was a three-horse race with the three only noses apart. As they came in full view of the grandstand it appeared that they would finish in a dead heat, so closely were they grouped, but in the very last stride Smiling Gus proved himself a game horse and a great horse by shoving his head in front of his two rivals.

Kentucky Cardinal was beaten by a short head, Broad Axe was only one length back and Scimitar, going faster than any of the others, was only a nose behind.

Scimitar was off poorly and suffered loss of ground in bumping. From seventh place this fellow came with a grand rush and all but got into the money.

Irish Pal Easy Winner.

The victory of Irish Pal was not so stirring because the champion 2-year-old pulled away fast in the U. S. POLO TEAM BEATS BRITISH IN FIRST TILT, 13-3

Tommy Hitchcock Leads Americans to Sensational Victory in Opening Match; Shoots 150-Yard Goal.

By the Associated Press.

WESTBURY, N. Y., Sept. 10.—The United States polo team, uncovering a brand of co-ordinated play which surprised even its friends and shocked the challenging British team, rode away to a 13 to 3 victory today in the first game of the international challenge cup series before 40,000 spectators.

Tommy Hitchcock, leading the terrific drive of the winners, showed the way by scoring six goals. Until late in the game, when he seemed to think that he could leave well enough alone and rest on his laurels, he was everywhere, driving the amazingly long shots which have made him famous, many of the smashing wallops ending their flight at or near the goal.

Shot 150-Yard Goal.

The sensational Hitchcock has been sick of late and his indisposition had kept him out of much of the play preliminary to the international matches which caused spectators to suggest that if he is sick his opponents would do well to hope that he would not play on one of his well days.

Two of Hitchcock's drives for distant goals brought the crowd up standing. He scored one goal from the neighborhood of 150 yards away.

Close behind Hitchcock was Devereaux Milburn, veteran captain of the Americans, whose hard riding and clever work, both on defense and offensive caused Lord Cowdray of Hurlingham Club where polo has been played since 1873 to remark: "It's the Milburn of 15 years ago."

Malcolm Stevenson and J. Watson Webb could not keep up with their fast moving colleagues. Possibly no two polo players could have kept the pace, but they play-

DREWES PLAYS BROWN TODAY IN NET FINAL

Final District Tennis Match Is Scheduled for 2:30 This Afternoon on Triple A Courts.

By DAVISON OBEAR.

Wray Brown, Missouri Valley champion, will oppose Theodore Drewes, National Public Parks titleholder, in the final round of the men's singles event in the St. Louis District tennis championship at the Triple A Club this afternoon. Brown is the present champion, while Drewes is a former district titleholder. The match will start at 2:30 p. m. and will be the best three out of five sets.

While Brown is favored to retain his title he may find strong opposition from Drewes. Drewes is playing probably the best tennis of any season since he won the Central States title 10 years ago. The O'Fallon Park star is putting more speed into his strokes and during the past week has made a number of remarkable placements. Except for his defeat at the hands of Junior Coen, Kansas City youth, in the Central States tournament last July, Brown has been playing a game equal to that of 1925 when he was placed No. 10 in the United States ranking.

Drewes Defeated Josties.

Drewes entered the singles final by defeating Fred Josties in a four-set match in the semifinals last Friday. Brown won from Charlie Barnes in the other semifinal yesterday. In the first set the games went to 3-all. Brown's superior drives with good finish at the net gave him the set, 6—3. Barnes tried to force his shots in the second set and became erratic. Brown won this set easily, the score being 6—2. Barnes played his best tennis in the third set. He was steadier and had more depth to his

Walter Hagen Captures His 4th Western Open Links Championship

Score of 281 for 72 Holes Is Four Strokes Better Than That of Two Nearest Competitors, Bill Mehlhorn and Al Espinosa, Who Tie for Second—Held Ties for Seventeenth.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Never relinquishing a lead he obtained with a par 70 on the first round, Walter Hagen today won the Western Open Golf Championship for the fourth time with a score of 281 for 72 holes over the course of the Olympia Fields Club, four strokes ahead of his nearest competitors, Al Espinosa of Chicago and William Mehlhorn of New York.

The champion, defending the title he won last year with 279, increased his lead from one stroke on the first day to six on the second by setting a course record of 67 for the No. 1 links and to nine strokes on the third round today with a 69 on No. 4 course. The titleholder slipped for the first time on the final circuit, taking 75, while some of the pack in pursuit shot spectacular golf in a vain endeavor to overhaul the leader.

Al Espinosa made the most sparkling display, scoring 67, or three under par, and equaling the course record set by Hagen two years ago in the finals of the pro-

MRS. MALLORY WINS MIDDLE STATES SINGLES TITLE FOR EIGHTH TIME

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10. — Mrs. Molla Mallory, New York, won the singles title in the women's middle states tennis championship at the Philadelphia Cricket Club today, defeating Kea Bouman, Holland, 6—4, 6—4. Immediately afterward, the champion paired with Miss Bouman and won the doubles crown by defeating Sarah and Mianne Palfrey, Boston, 7—5, 6—3. This was the eighth time Mrs. Mallory has held the middle states title.

CHAMPIONS ONLY ONE GAME BEHIND GIANTS; HAFEY SLUGS BALL

Outfielder Crashes Out Home Run, Triple and Single in Four Times at Bat—Vance Retires After Being Pounded in Sixth—Alexander Scores Nineteenth Victory.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Grover Cleveland Alexander romped through nine innings of baseball against the Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday afternoon, scored his nineteenth victory of the season, 5 to 2, made Dazzy Vance look like an ordinary bush league pitcher and moved the Cardinals a game nearer second place, thanks to the defeat that the Collapsible Cubs administered to the Giants.

Alexander has battled hard for some of his 19 triumphs but the second game of the series with the Flatbush team was just a breeze for the Old Master. The Great Vance made the mistake of giving Old Pete a one-run lead in the first inning, walking three men, forcing one over the plate and the veteran was so good that the single tally probably would have been enough.

Vance Blows in Sixth.

Vance, however, irked by the inability of the Dodgers to do anything for him in the matter of run production, faltered in the sixth, gave Chick Hafey a fast one through the groove and Chick, belting a homer into the left field seats, started a rally that removed all doubt as to the outcome and made the rest of the game a mere matter of routine for Alex, the incomparable.

Ernest Orsatti followed Hafey's homer with a whistling line drive to right center for a two-base hit and scored when Lester Bell cracked a single to center. Schulte forced Bell, but Schuble singled to right and Holm singled to center and Schulte scored—the third run of the inning, giving the Cards a four-run margin.

Alexander relaxed with that lead and the Dodgers, held to two hits in six innings, managed to score two runs in the seventh. With one out Hendrick singled to right and was forced by Barrett. Partridge singled to center, Barrett stopping at second and Butler's single to left scored Barrett. DeBerry punched a single to right scoring Partridge and on Orsatti's fumble Butler went to third. Jake Flowers was sent to bat for Vance and Alexander decided the Dodgers had enough cake for today and struck out the pinch hitter.

Hafey Triples and Scores.

Hafey's triple off Plitt and wild pitch gave the Cardinals their fifth run in the seventh inning and that was all the scoring. Partridge singled with one out in the ninth and after two were out DeBerry beat out a grounder to Schuble. Patridge moving to third, but again Wilbert Robinson made the mistake of sending a pinch hitter against Alexander.

Pittsburg Pirates retained their two and a half game lead by blanking the Phillies, but they will be idle this afternoon and the Cardinals will have a chance to reduce that margin to two games if they can make it three straight over the Dodgers.

FRANKHOUSE HURLS TODAY

Recruit From Houston Likely to Oppose Bill Doak in Third Game of Series—10,000 Fans Witness Second Contest.

ABOUT 10,000 persons saw Alexander hang up his nineteenth triumph of the year. Fred Frankhouse, whose side-arm delivery beat the Cubs in the former Houston hurler's first start as a Cardinal, will pitch for the world champions this afternoon in the third game of the series with the Dodgers. Bill Doak is due to work for the visitors, though Petty and Elliott have rested since Wednesday, with the exception of the inning Petty hurled Friday.

Hank O'Day put Babe Herman out of the game in the first innings and the Cards were not sorry. The Babe has been parking them in the seats with dangerous regularity of late. He thought he had beaten out a grounder to Schuble and voiced his opinion in terms that irked Sir Henry.

Felix took Herman's place in the batting order, but went to left field, Hendrick shifting to first base.

Reports From the Patients.

Tommy Thevenow worked out in fielding practice before the game, stopping a few grounders, making throws to first and taking pegs to second. Tommy bobbled noticeably and the impression among the fans was that there was slight hope of his returning to duty soon.

Rabitt Maranville was still limping. Dr. Weaver, the club osteopath, expects the shortstop to be ready before the Giant series ends.

Bob O'Farrell's swollen right hand, injured when Hack Wilson slid for the plate and kicked a ball out of Bob's paw, is improving, but the manager will be forced to rest for several more days. He may be ready for the Giants.

Statz Fails to Hold One.

Statz made a brilliant try for Orsatti's line drive to right center in the sixth, but couldn't hold the ball and it went for a double.

Lester Bell certainly has come back. What he needed most probably was a few base hits and he is getting them.

Vance beat Sherdel the last time he faced the Cardinals. The score was 5 to 3, the game having been played at Brooklyn.

By Babe Ruth

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.

WHEN I picked my first all-America team six years ago I worked on a sort of clubhouse hunch that perhaps such a selection might prove interesting. But I had no idea that such a team would work up so much popular interest as these selections have—or that the job would become so hard and so complicated.

This year's team offered plenty of worry, and still offers much room for argument. To select a team that will please everyone is, of course, impossible. Not this year, nor in any other, are there 10 players who stand out so prominently that they can be chosen unanimously and without argument.

This year as in other years I had the benefit of the opinions of a committee of baseball writers representing each city in the two major leagues. These men have done their job well. And through their eyes I have been able to see more closely certain National League stars with whose work, naturally I could not be quite so familiar.

Naturally the team I have selected will create arguments and differences of opinion. But it is an honest difference—for in naming the players with the aid of the Writer's Committee, I have absolutely put personal feeling in the background and have tried to name the men best fitted for the honor. The men chosen for places on the team are selected because I feel that they are absolutely entitled to the honor.

Rogers Hornsby Ousted.

You will find some new names on the list. That is to be expected in a game where new players are coming up to crowd the older stars out of the limelight. Naturally certain old familiar faces are missing. Among these is that of my friend Rogers Hornsby. For five years, Rogers has held a place on the All-America. He is still a great ball player. There are plenty of fans to argue his superiority over the man named. But in the opinion of the baseball writers' and in my own judgment, Rogers this year is overshadowed by Frankie Frisch, the man named to replace him.

The Committee of Baseball Writers who assisted in the selection of the team follows:

James Robbins, New York World; John E. Wray, St. Louis Post-Dispatch; Edward Reynolds, Boston Post; Tom Swope, Cincinnati Post; Kirk Miller, Washington, D. C., Times; Warren Brown, Chicago Herald-Examiner; J. C. Isaminger, Philadelphia Inquirer; Bert Walker, Detroit Times; Stuart Bell, Cleveland Press; Ralph Davis, Pittsburg Press.

Each writer selected his own team, and with his pick gave his reasons. That the task was a tough one is best proved by the differences of opinion which prevailed among the writers themselves. Here, for instance, are teams named by writers in widely separated cities:

Philadelphia.	Pos.	Detroit.
Gehrig	First base	Gehrig
Frisch	Second base	Gehringer
Traynor	Third base	Traynor
Boley	Shortstop	Wright
P. Waner	Right field	P. Waner
Simmons	Center field	Simmons
Hartnett	Catcher	O'Farrell
Vance	Pitcher	Ruether
Pennock	Pitcher	Root

Four Unanimous Choices.

The same difference of opinion will, very naturally, exist among the fans. In some instances friendship and local pride is permitted to sway judgment. In other cases fans can present perfectly sound and logical reasons why certain other selections might have been made.

As concerns the 1927 selection it is interesting to note that for four positions the vote was unanimous. Lou Gehrig at first, Pie Traynor at third base, Al Simmons in center field and Paul Waner in right field were given unanimous votes. These men stood out in their respective positions.

The tabulated vote for players and positions by the Writer's Committee follows:

First base—Gehrig, 10.
Third base—Traynor, 10.
Right field—P. Waner, 10.
Center field—Simmons, 10.
Second base—Frisch, 8; Lazzeri, 1; Gehringer, 1.
Catcher—Ruel, 2; Hartnett, 3½; Schang, ½; O'Farrell, 1; L. Sewell, 1; Cochrane, 2.
Pitcher—Root, 6; Lyons, 5; Pennock, 2; Vance, 1; Hoyt, 1; Benton, 1; Haines, 2; Ruether, 1; Kremer, 1.
Shortstop—Jackson, 4 Wright, 3; Bancroft, 1; Lazzeri, 1; Boley, 1.

The 1927 Babe Ruth All-America Team

Babe Gives Reasons for Selections; Gehrig Best Youngster He Ever Saw

First Base

Lou Gehrig, unanimous choice for the place, needs no explanation. Lou is the most improved ballplayer in baseball today. His hitting has been phenomenal; his fielding has been almost perfect. He has driven in more runs this season than any man in either league. At the bat he is the most dangerous hitter I know. He is one of the greatest young ballplayers to come along since I've known anything about the game.

Second Base

Frankie Frisch's selection may create some surprise. The fact that Rogers Hornsby wasn't mentioned by any one of the 10 writers on the committee will cause even greater surprise. Frisch has had a remarkable year. In the field he has performed stunts almost beyond belief. His base stealing record stands alone. In hitting, he is only a stride behind Hornsby. His team spirit has been one of the greatest factors in keeping the Cardinals in the race.

Without taking anything away from Hornsby, we feel that Frisch has been his superior this season in virtually every department of the game. On his record this season, Fordham Frankie rates as one of the truly great second basemen of all time—a player without a weakness. But the selection is made, not on an all-time record, but on accomplishments in 1927.

Shortstop

In selecting a shortstop for an All-America team I hit upon Jackson only after careful consideration. Jackson lacks something of Bancroft's knowledge and experience, but he makes up for that in youth and enthusiasm. As a double-play man, he is without equal in either league. His arm is one of the best in baseball, and he is a dangerous hitter at all times. The fact that he was out of the game during a part of the season can be discounted. Men like Hornsby and Frisch, both of whom have played alongside Jackson, tell me that he is a perfect running mate for any second baseman. He can range far to the left or right with equal ease, and he is deadly on slow hit balls that require accurate fielding and a quick throw. Wright looms as a real contender, but I feel that the honor belongs to Jackson. In allround play Jackson seems superior.

Third Base

Third base, like first base, is a settled issue. Pie Traynor was the unanimous choice of the Writers, and I see no reason for disagreement. There are other great third basemen in the game. Willie Kamm is one. So is Ossie Bluege of the Senators. But Traynor is having one of his best years, and his hitting and fielding have put him in a class by himself. There's no more dangerous man on the whole Pirate club than Pie when he's up at the plate in a pinch, and his fielding has been steadily sensational. He is a standout.

Left Field

Here is real cause for argument. "Fat" Fothergill, Goose Goslin, Bib Falk and Bob Meusel are all great left fields. Some of them appeal to the fans more than Meusel.

Bob is, primarily, a ballplayer's ballplayer. The average fan doesn't appreciate his real worth. He's a great hitter, he has one of the best arms in baseball. He's fast and covers a lot of territory, and he's always at his best when the going is toughest.

Bob's long, loping stride fools lots of fans as well as players. He appears to be loafing. But he isn't. There's no outfielder in the business who can go further after a fly ball, and none who are more dangerous up there at the plate. There are few better base runners in either league than Meusel. As a "money player" put to the test in a pinch, Bob Meusel comes near being 100 per cent. He gets my vote even over such great outfielders as Fothergill, Goslin, Barnhart, Falk and all the rest.

Center Field

Al Simmons was the unanimous choice of the Writer's Committee which ought to make it official. A good many fans, no doubt, will criticise the selection on the ground that Simmons has been out of the game. But he showed enough during his period of play to stand out as the greatest center fielder of them all.

Simmons is one of the toughest men in either league to pitch to and he hits consistently. There's nothing spotty about his performance. Al is one of the best fly chasers in the business, with a great pair of hands that seem to be equipped with burrs the way they cling to a ball. He has baseball instinct, and never makes a bad move.

That he has been out of the game so long is the toughest blow the Athletics have suffered this year, but even with his absence taken into consideration, he still stands out as the class of center fielders—the ideal fly chaser. On the bases, at bat or in the outfield, he has unquestioned class.

Right Field

Here again we find a new man, and one who is unanimously selected. That's Paul Waner of the Pirates. He is the leading cog in the Pirate offensive machinery. He has driven in more than 100 runs and is leading his league in hitting. He possesses a sure fire arm, covers his position well, and has instilled wholesome respect throughout the league. Waner, despite his slight build, is of sturdy construction and is not easily injured.

His record, taken in every department, is one of the best ever compiled by any major league player anywhere. You can't keep him off an All-American team.

Catcher

Here is the one place I've gone against the judgment of the baseball writers to name Muddy Ruel over Gabby Hartnett. And I feel that I am right. Hartnett is great—but so is Ruel. Muddy is one of the smartest catchers in the business. Old-time pitchers like Walter Johnson agree that Ruel has the best judgment of any catcher they ever pitched to and 1927 has been his best year. In other years his hitting has been weak. This year he is pounding the ball for an average plenty over .300 and has been particularly effective in the pinch.

His throwing to second is both accurate and fast. As a receiver he stands without a peer, and despite his slight build he is one of the best catchers at blocking runners from the plate I have ever seen. Hartnett can do all these things too. So can O'Farrell. But in all around catching shrewdness it seems to me that Muddy gets the call. No catcher I can recall ever has had better luck in getting high grade work from mediocre pitchers. And that, it seems to me, is a true test of pitching greatness.

Pitchers

Charley Root is a standout. It has been his work more than any one factor that has kept the Cubs up in the race. His record of victories cannot be overlooked. More over Root has proved himself a giant for work—having appeared in more games than any other pitcher in either league.

Ted Lyons his running mate, is to my mind, the best right hander in the American League today. Other pitchers have great records. Waite Hoyt of the Yankees is one of these. And Jess Haines of the Cardinals. But here's something to remember. Lyons has piled up his list of victories as a member of a second division club, without the hitting and fielding support that has been given to Hoyt and Haines. As a hitter who has faced Lyons in numerous games I can testify that he has everything that any pitcher can have—and knows how to use it. He is a tireless worker enthusiastic and careful.

Only Five Correct Answers In Three Years Received By Babe Ruth Contest Editor

Thousands of Entries Submitted From All Over the Country; 3000 Letters Received in Last Two Days; Selection of Ruel Comes as a Surprise.

The Babe Ruth All-America team contest, just concluded, has attracted a record number of entries, with a high water mark for a single day of 1600. In the final two days approximately 3000 entries were mailed to the Post-Dispatch.

The fans' communications came from fully half the states in the Union and some from extremely remote points, indicating widespread interest in the All-America.

However easy it may seem to select the winning team of 10 from among the outstanding players of the major leagues, the difficulty of picking 'em right is shown by the returns for the past three contests.

In three years only five answers coinciding with Ruth's selections have been received by the Post-Dispatch. Three of these came this year and one each in 1925 and 1926.

Surprise When Bluege Was Named

Each year the Ruth nominations have contained at least one unexpected placement. In 1925 Ruth amazed fans by putting Oscar Bluege on third base when two or three real third sackers were available, with Traynor apparently standing out. Only one fan picked Bluege. The same year Ruth conducted a side contest open to sports writers of the country and to members of the Ruth committee as well.

Not one of the experts in the country had the exact list named by Ruth. Two Post-Dispatch writers, J. Roy Stockton and J. E. Wray, led the sports writers of the country finishing first and second, respectively, but neither having Bluege in his list.

In 1926 Ruth again sprang a surprise. Whereas a majority of the experts and fans were almost unanimous in naming Bob O'Farrell ("most valuable player," that year) Ruth picked Hargrave, whose fine batting average swung the tide in his favor. Ruth also cramped the experts style by naming Joe Sewell shortstop that year.

This year the surprise was in the selection of "Muddy" Ruel, a St. Louis lot graduate, as catcher, when Hartnett was out in front as a popular choice.

Ruth, in making his choice, is not guided entirely by his committee but uses his own judgment. Last year, after the season had been completed, Ruth admitted that he had probably made an error in naming Hargrave over O'Farrell. Had the contest closed after the full season's returns were in, Ruth would likely have named the world's champions' receiver.

MUNICIPAL TITLE SERIES BEGINS TODAY

Morgans and Chevrolets Meet at Fairground No. 1 at 3 O'Clock — Winner Will Play Cincinnati.

The Morgans and the South Side Chevrolets are scheduled to meet today in the first of a three-game series to decide the championship in the Municipal Baseball Association. The game will be played at Fairground Park No. 1, starting at 3 o'clock.

Walter Wolff, southpaw pitcher for the Chevrolets, who held the Pants Stores to four hits in a semifinal game last week, will take the mound, with John Hasmer as his opponent.

R. W. Tapperson of the Municipal parks and recreation department announced Saturday that the winner of the championship will play the Sieblers, champions of the Greater Cincinnati Amateur Baseball Association in an intercity series. The St. Louis team will journey to Cincinnati for games on Sept. 24 and 25, and the return games will be played here Oct. 1 and 2.

Last year the Fenwicks of Cincinnati held the Pants Stores, local Muny champions, to an even break in an intercity series.

The Freidens and the Triangle A. C. are scheduled to meet in the second of the series for the Intermediate championship as a preliminary to the Morgan-Chevrolet game on the Fairground No. 1 diamond. The preliminary will start at 12:45.

New Record For Two-Mile Bike Race Set

Ted Becker of Chicago Clips 10 Seconds Off Junior Amateur Mark at National Meet.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 10. — Ten seconds were clipped from the junior amateur record for a two-mile bicycle race here today when Ted Becker Jr., of Chicago, covered the distance in four minutes, 46 1-5 seconds. Though forty-four states were represented, other youths from the middlewest shared the limelight with Becker in the opening events of a two-day championship meeting conducted by the amateur bicycle league of America.

Becker and August Benson, another product of the Windy City, tonight had narrow leads in the contest for the two national titles left undefended by last year's winners. Becker piled up 10 points in the junior class, limited to boys less than 16 years old, while Benson topped the senior competitors with seven points. The 15-year-old Becker youngster was the only rider able to win three events, none of his competitors being able to outride him in the two final and one elimination races in which he was entered.

In finishing first in the two-mile race Becker bettered a mark set up 16 years ago in Hicksville, N. Y. The new record was established under unfavorable conditions the course being slow and slick because of rain which fell for more than an hour just before the first race.

Babe Ruth Contest Winner

Jefferson City, Mount Vernon, Mo., and St. Louis contestants awarded Post-Dispatch cash prizes for All-America selections nearest to Ruth's.

Three Missourians led more than 10,000 rivals in winning the Post-Dispatch cash prizes offered in connection with the annual Babe Ruth All-America Team contest. The winners are:

First prize, $100—Peter Kunkel, of St. Louis, now No. 28,923, State penitentiary, Jefferson City, Mo.

Second prize, $50—Walter Hardy, R. F. D. No. 1, Mount Vernon, Mo.

Third prize, $25—Frank W. Engels Jr., 1709 Locust street, St. Louis, Mo.

The successful fans were the only ones out of more than 10,000 contributors to have the exact lineup chosen by Ruth (printed elsewheer on this page).

One of the stipulations in the rules was that each contestant accompany his selections with a letter of explanation which would afford a basis for discriminating between ties.

The judges of the contest were: J. G. Taylor Spink, publisher of the Sporting News; R. J. Collins, a realtor, formerly sports editor of the St. Louis Republic, and R. L. Mathews, director of athletics at St. Louis University.

They unanimously agreed on the respective awards after consideration of the explanations which accompanied each of the three successful fans' selections.

One of the queer features of the result is that only one of the three successful contributors had a chance to see baseball games played by big league teams. The winners of the first and second prizes did not see any major league contests during the campaign.

Kunkel, who is serving a six-year sentence in the penitentiary for robbery, is only 23 years old. Before being sent to Jefferson City his baseball experience and his interest in the game was limited. He played as a small boy, but never with an organized team. He had only seen a few big league games in all his life.

In the penitentiary he encountered fellow convicts who had baseball experience. In an adjoining cell were Matthew Spalding, St. Louis, who is the convict-manager of one of the penitentiary baseball teams, and Michael McHale, St. Louis, an outfielder on the penitentiary first team.

Convicts in the State prison are allowed to play baseball on the recreation grounds of the penitentiary on Saturday afternoons and from 9:30 a. m. to 2 p. m. on Sundays.

His friends talked baseball to him all the time. The radio sets that carried the big league games by play also aided from time to time, although work in the factories kept him busy daily until 5 p. m.

Most of his information on the major leagues was obtained from newspaper reports of the games and from the batting records of the two big leagues. Kunkel's prize letter follows:

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 14, 1927.

Babe Ruth Contest Editor,
St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

My All-America Team.

First Base: Gehrig should lead it on his hitting alone; best all-round baseman in the game today.

Second Base: Frisch is playing a better game than he ever did and leading Hornsby in everything except runs scored and homers. (Note—At the time Kunkel wrote this letter the statement was correct).

Shortstop: Jackson is a great batter and a better fielder than Wright and is having his best year with the Giants.

Third Base: Traynor is everything a third baseman can be. No doubt here, he wins in a walk.

Center Field: Simmons has no on Speaker and should get the choice. Good batter and good fielder.

Right Field: Paul Waner. The best player to come up in Hornsby started to lead the league in batting.

Catcher: Ruel. The best in the American League. Throws faster than Hartnett and better on base runners.

Pitchers: No. 1, Root. It would be hard to leave him off if Chicago wins this year. No. 2, Lyons. I picked him over Haines and Hoyt because of the club he is with.

Yours respectfully,
PETER KUNKEL.

Game Deuced Six Times.

Cochet had service in this eighth game, but Johnston, playing largely on his nerve and courage, won after a sensational fight in which deuce was called six times. It was a forlorn battle, with the score standing 5-2 in Cochet's favor at the time, but it whipped the excited gallery of 12,000 into the greatest outbursts of enthusiasm. There was continuous and thunderous applause despite pleas of officials as Johnston won the long duel and then, in the ninth game, captured his own service at 40.

One more "break" would make it a deuce set. "Come on, Bill," the crowd implored, as they thronged courts. Little Bill himself gritted his teeth and shook his racquet at his foe. He gained a momentary advantage in the tenth game, but his reserve was slipping fast. Thirty-three years seemed to weigh heavily now on the slight Californian's shoulders. His "punch" was still there, but it was gone. Under Cochet's forcing he made three straight errors, driving the ball into the net for the point that decided the match and the battle for the Davis cup.

Little Bill, even though it was his second setback, was a hero in defeat. He had done all that could be done against an opponent whose resources in youth, variety of stroke and in control were far superior. His ready smile was there when he congratulated the victor. Getting Cochet on the back in fatherly fashion, but afterward, in the dressing room, he was heartbroken.

Dove Season Is Open.

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that mention has been made several times concerning the opening of the dove season in Missouri, a great many hunters have the idea that the season is still closed. There are others who are under the impression that the killing of doves is contrary to the migratory bird treaty act. For the benefit of those of our readers who are not posted on the game laws, we give the dates when the different game and fur-bearing animals may be taken legally.

Doves may be killed from Sept. 1 till Dec 15. The bag limit is 10 in one day, and not more than 15 in possession.

Ducks, geese and other water fowl may be killed from Sept. 15 till Dec. 31. Bag limit is 15 in one day, and not more than 25 in possession. It is now legal to shoot water fowl one-half hour before sunrise.

(Wood duck; protected for an indefinite period.)

Quail season opens Nov. 10 and closes Jan. 1. Bag limit is 10 in one day and 15 in possession.

Wild turkey may be killed from Dec. 1 till Dec. 31, both dates inclusive, only between sunrise and sunset. Bag limit is one per day and not more than two in possession at any one time. No person shall kill more than four wild turkeys in one season.

The season on deer is closed till 1930.

Woodcock may be killed from Nov. 10 till Nov. 30, in accordance with the Federal law, although our Missouri law allows them to be killed until Dec. 31.

Federal Law Comes First.

Hunters should remember that when State laws conflict with the Federal laws, the latter hold good, and a Federal Warden has the right to arrest anyone violating the laws set forth by the migratory bird treaty act and a conviction will be the result.

There is no open season on pheasant, either native or imported, but if the experiment in pheasant raising which was started this past season proves successful the outlook so far looks very promising) the distribution of eggs will be increased next spring, and it will be only a few years until we have an open season, such as is enjoyed in several states today, where only a few years ago the pheasants were introduced. The few prairie chickens we now have in Missouri are protected, and it is not likely that we will ever have an open season on those birds.

Observation Towers in State Parks.

THE Game and Fish Department now has two steel observation towers, one in Pershing State Park and the other in Indian Trail State Park.

These towers are about 75 feet high and are erected on the highest point of ground in each park and are used to detect trespassers on the property and to aid in the detection of forest fires.

Each tower is equipped with a steel room for the accommodation of the observer, who is supposed to be on duty constantly.

$1,000,000 for Game Propagation.

The Game Commission is planning a big campaign for the coming year and has outlined a program calling for the expenditure of $1,000,000, which includes the protection and propagation of game and fish, increasing the number of sanctuaries and by educating the youth of the State along the lines of true sportsmanship.

Education will accomplish more than arrests and convictions, but it will take some time to show the public at large just what protection of game and fish means to everybody, and in the meantime we must continue to enforce the law by arresting and convicting the violators.

There are still some people who believe that they are trying to "keep up the game fund," but this is not the case, for all the money spent by the department is raised by the sale of hunting and fishing licenses.

In the column of July 10 mention was made of the increase in the price of nonresident hunting licenses in Illinois, but since that time the Governor has signed the bill and the price remains the same as before, $10.50.

It was through the efforts of the Southern Illinois Game Protective League that prompted the Governor neither to veto this bill that was quite unpopular.

France Is Fourth Nation to Win The Davis Cup

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10. France is the fourth nation to win the Davis cup since it was put into competition in 1900 by Dwight F. Davis.

Previously three nations—America, Great Britain and Australia—have monopolized possession of the famous tennis trophy. Through the seven-year stretch of triumph engineered by Tilden and Johnston, the United States took the lead and has won the cup 10 times. Australia held it six times and England five.

It has been 15 years since the trophy last went to Europe, in Britain's hands through a victory over Australia in the 1912 challenge round.

In 1913 Americans won the trophy back, with Comet McLoughlin going at his top speed. In 1914 Brookes and Wilding, a great pair, took the trophy to Australia, where it remained until 1920.

...published what no other nation has been able to do since 1914. ...thirteen years ago Maurice McLoughlin tried to check Australia's rule handed but failed in spite of his gallant efforts. Today Tilden, having already been the principal figure in two previous triumphs—one in the singles over Cochet and the other in the doubles with Frank Hunter—also tried to settle the issue alone. But the strain was too much. At 34, Tilden had whipped himself to the peak of his game for two victories but his system didn't have the reserve to gain a third against such an impenetrable defense as Lacoste put up.

Lacoste, emerging as the chief hero of the French victory through the two singles triumphs, removed whatever doubt remained of his standing as the world's foremost singles performer. Already the holder of the American and French titles, he gave two of the greatest exhibitions of his youthful career in downing the two famous Yankee veterans.

Neither of today's two deciding battles was as inspiring as the previous three contests of the challenge rounds. Whatever drama they boasted, beyond the fact that they settled the fate of the Davis cup, was confined chiefly to Johnston's gallant uphill fight against heavy odds. Where Tilden's downfall was as complete as had been Johnston's mastery of stroke previously, Johnston exhibited an astonishing reversal of form.

"Counted out" almost before he started, Johnston revived America's faltering hopes by the gritty way he fought for victory. For two hours he played France's most brilliant stroke artist to a standstill, although losing the third quickly and slipping further behind in the fourth, Little Bill fought heroically to the finish. As it turned out, all he was able to do was prolong the issue, but for a few moments, at least, Johnston was again the "mighty atom" of the courts as he deserted defeat twice in the eighth game, when only a point separated Cochet from victory.

Wray Brown and Fred Josties easily defeated Arthur Niemoeller and Charles McMillin, in one of the semifinal matches of the men's doubles yesterday. The score was 6—2, 6—2, 6—0. In the other semi- final Drewes and Serrano, present champion, eliminated Charles Barnes and Karl Kammann in straight sets, 6—4, 6—2, 6—0. Drewes and Serrano played almost perfect tennis while Kammann was erratic and Barnes appeared tired from his previous singles match against Wray Brown.

REPORT BARNARD WILL HEAD LEAGUE; EVANS MANAGE CLEVELAND

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—E. S. Bar- nard, president of the Cleveland Americans, will succeed Ban John- son as president of the American League in November, according to reports in baseball circles today.

Barnard has accepted a three- year contract at $40,000 a year, these reports said.

Neither President Johnson nor his secretary, William Harridge, would confirm the reports, how- ever.

The same rumors said that Alva Bradley, a Cleveland capitalist and banker, would head a syndicate of Cleveland interest to purchase the Cleveland Club from Mrs. Jame C. Dunn, Chicago, holder of the majority stock.

It was reported that Billy Evans, for 25 years an umpire in the American League, would be- come manager of the club, with Tris Speaker succeeding Barnard as its president.

KREMER HOLDS PHILS, PIRATES RETAIN LEAD

Grantham, Traynor and Paul Waner Star With Fine Fielding in 4-0 Shutout Triumph.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 10.—Ray Kremer, backed by sensation- al fielding, shut out Philadelphia, 4 to 0, today, and Pittsburg held to its slim lead in the National League pennant flight.

Kremer kept the eight Phil hits scattered.

The work of Grantham, Traynor and Paul Waner afield smothered every threat the Quakers made. Waner snagged Thompson's bid for a home run in the ninth inning with a brilliant one-hand catch.

The Pirates scored in the second inning when Wright singled, ad- vanced on Traynor's out, and got home on Grantham's safety. Lloyd Waner doubled in the fifth and scored on a sacrifice.

The Pirates made victory more certain in the sixth when Grant- ham tripled to drive in Traynor and Harris sent out a long liner to score Grantham.

WRAY'S COLUMN

"Feed Box" Info.

PIERCE MATHEWS, once a fighter tougher than even the redoubtable Bat Nelson, although not so famous, now an evangelist, whom St. Louis and East Side followers will remem- ber, visited his friend Jack Dempsey at Lincoln Fields and writes thereof as follows:

"Have seen Dempsey work, most every day. He is in won- derful shape. He told me that he is in the best shape he has been in since he fought Wil- lard.

"I talked with three other fighters who looked over Jack and none gives Tunney a chance. They say Tunney can't possibly go over eight rounds. Personally I think Dempsey will K. O. Tunney, sure.

"That stuff about Jack's legs being bad is the bunk. Dempsey sure is right."

"PIERCE G. MATHEWS."

If Pierce spent as much time at Tunney's camp he probably would find three fighters who could see nothing but Tunney.

Picking the winners is a mat- ter of friendship, or prejudice, or both, in many cases.

Facts reviewed at long range give a better perspective than too close a contact.

The fact that stands out is that Tunney made a monkey of Dempsey once; and that good and sufficient reason why he should not repeat has not yet developed.

Observation vs. Figures.

THE fact that one does not necessarily have to have a personal view of athletes or ath- letics to form an accurate opin- ion about them is clearly shown in the case of the Post-Dis- patch's Babe Ruth contest, in which thousands of young men and women sent in their opin- ions as to what players deserve a place on the All-America team of 1927 and why.

In this contest there were only THREE persons who matched Babe Ruth's lineup ex- actly!

Of the three, one was a con- vict, one was a resident of a small Missouri town and the third was an indoor employe for a big oil concern, in this city.

Of the three, only one had any opportunity to see ball games, and that one only on Sundays!

All deduced their selections from reading about the players and from the box scores and averages.

Evidently here is an instance in which the figures didn't lie.

Give Him His Due.

IF Tunney defeats Dempsey again, the world should flock to his door and apologize for the indifferent opinion it has held of him. For some peculiar rea- son, Tunney today is not appre- ciated, although he easily de- feated a champion recognized as one of the greatest fighters of all time and one who, only a few weeks ago, proved that he was NOT a "has been."

In defeating Dempsey Tunney showed superior boxing and su- perior mentality. He did a fin- ished job according to a thought- out plan. If he backed away from Dempsey, it was because that was the right way to beat Jack with the weapons Tunney owned.

Gene "did his stuff." Full credit is due him. But he has not been given it. Probably that is due in part to the fact that the mob thought Tunney was high-hatting them. No doubt, too, the crowd did not like Tun- ney's style of fighting. But if he wins again they must be won to it and to Tunney. Because, this time, Dempsey will have no ex- cuses. Not even age, for he is only three or four years older than Tunney. Both are in their prime.

A Better Influence.

THOSE who are interested in the permanency of boxing are pulling for Tunney to win again, not from prejudice against Dempsey, but because they be- lieve Gene represents a better and sounder influence on the game. Tunney is the man to whom one might look to restore to pugilism the lost arts of gen- eralship and boxing skill, lately crowded out of the limelight by the naked brutality of the wal- lop.

Australia Hears Fight Radio.

BROADCASTING half around the world is an accomplished fact, and it was a fight story that took the hop from New York to the heart of far away Australia.

Undoubtedly the radio broad- cast of the coming championship between Tunney and Dempsey will be heard in Melbourne and Sydney, almost as well as in St. Louis.

In a letter to Charles G. Ross of the Post-Dispatch editorial staff, a correspondent in Sydney, Australia, writes in part as fol- lows:

"For the first time in history people in Australia, 10,000 miles away from New York, were able to listen to a running description of a fight (the Dempsey-Shar- key battle) round by round, broadcast from the ringside. With the co-operation of the Farmers Broadcasting Station (2FC) an American short-wave station was picked up at La Perous and re- broadcast throughout the whole of Australia.

"It is a wonderful thing to think that right in the heart of Australia, hundreds of miles from the nearest railway station, the words of the broadcaster came clearly. The first message came through at 12:30 o'clock, Sydney time, and the people in Sydney streets were able to pur- chase newspapers with the result of the knockout in a very few minutes after the people in the stadium at New York had seen the result."

Literally half the world will listen in on the big quarrel at Soldier's Field, Sept. 22, indicat- ing that the sport that had to keep a step ahead of the Dep- uty Sheriffs, only a few years ago, has at last gained inter- national recognition.

It's Coming to Him.

BILLY O'CONNOR, a familiar figure in St. Louis and na- tional sport affairs, until the Bell Telephone Company took him from the Post-Dispatch, has gone on up another step. O'Con- nor has accepted a New York offer which gives him a bigger and better field for his talents —and they are many.

O'Connor will long be remem- bered by St. Louis University alumni, not only for his keenly humorous and witty writing, but because of the fact that as mas- cot for St. Louis University he christened the eleven with the name it still bears—the "Billi- kens."

That was in 1906, the day of Eddie Cochems, the coach who brought fame to St. Louis with his then novel "projectile" for- ward pass.

As the "Billikens," Coach Matthews' improved 1927 eleven will again seek fame. The beat- ific looking god of things as they ought to be, is about due to bring back the successes of Co- chems and his mascot, O'Connor.

MRS. HURD WILL BE CANDIDATE FOR GOLF TITLE

Has Five National Championships to Her Credit — Women's Tourney Will Start This Week.

By Francis J. Powers,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

Copyright, 1927.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 10.—When the women of the bunkered clan go forth in quest of the na- tional golf championship at Cher- ry Valley, Long Island, next week, one of the strongest candidates for the title will be Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd of the Merion Cricket Club.

Mrs. Hurd deserves to be rank- ed as one of the really great golfers of all time. She was a champion before many of the youngsters who will contest against her on the Long Island links were born and she still plays a game that is strict- ly of championship quality.

Twenty summers ago, when the Gibson girl rather than the Zieg- feld girl represented the Amer- ican ideal of pulchritude, Miss Dorothy Campbell of North Ber- wyck, England, began to climb the championship heights—which she subsequently has scaled more often than any other woman golfer. Twenty years is a long time to re- main in championship class in any sport but Mrs. Hurd still plays as close to par as many of the spright- ly girls who are many years her junior.

Has Won Title 5 Times.

Five times Mrs. Hurd has won a national championship—two of her victories being scored in Great Britain and three in America. This is more championships than any other woman ever has held. It to the record of Cecil Leitch, the great English player, by one. As Miss Campbell, she first found her way into the record books in 1908 when she went to the finals of the British championship and was beaten by a Miss Titterton at St. Andrews.

The following year she not only won the British title but also in- vaded America and took home both the United States and Canadian championships. She won the Brit- ish crown at Portrush, Ireland, and the American at the Merion Crick- et Club—her present golf home. She repeated at Homewood in 1910 and then in 1911 went back to En- gland to win the British title for the second time, at Portrush. Then came a long interim before she achieved another championship, but in 1924, after her previous ex- ploits had almost been forgotten, she won again at Providence.

Glenna Will Be Favorite.

Miss Glenna Collett, twice cham- pion, probably will be the favorite when the championship starts. The Providence girl is by all odds our best golfer, but frequently her putting touch goes astray. Were Miss Collett as good a putter as Joyce Wethered, she would be the finest woman golfer in the world.

Mrs. G. H. Stetson will be on hand to defend her title but few champions are able to repeat in this age of the sport and there are so many fine young players that the odds favor one of them breaking through this year.

In addition to these players, Maureen Orcutt, Bernice Wall, Helen Payson, Virginia Van Wie, Marie Jenney, Marion Turpie and Mrs. Wright Goss, runner-up last year, may be expected to go a con- siderable distance in the fight. Miss Orcutt is bound to break through in the near future, and it may be at Cherry Valley. She has a pow- erful game but a tendency toward unsteadiness that cost her many matches. But when in a scor- ing mood she is almost unbeatable.

Pennant Progress

By defeating Brooklyn for the second time in a row yester- day, the Cardinals advanced to within one full game of the sec- ond place Giants who lost to the Cubs. Pittsburg won and remains two and a half games ahead of the Champions.

If the Cardinals win again to- day and New York loses, the Champions will be tied for sec- ond place with the Giants and a victory will enable the Cardinals to gain a half game on the Pi- rates for they are idle.

To pass the Giants the Cardi- nals will have to win twice while the Giants are losing twice and to pass Pittsburg the Cardinals will have to bunch three victo- ries with three Pirate defeats.

Standing of the four contend- ers after yesterday's games:

Club	W.	L.	Pct.	Win	Lose
Pittsburg	78	53	.595	.598	.591
New York	76	54	.585	.588	.580
Cardinals	75	55	.577	.580	.572
Chicago	77	58	.570	.574	.565

Women Complete First Round of District Tourney

Fourteen Matches Decided in Tennis Championship—Doubles Start Today.

The St. Louis District tennis championship for women players opened yesterday afternoon with an entry of 53 in the singles event. Doubles play will start this after- noon. Mrs. Melicent Baehr, pres- ent champion and practically all of the leading women players of the district are participating.

All of the 14 first-round matches were decided. Of this number there were only three defaults. With one exception all the singles contests played were decided in straight sets. Bernadine Lutz was forced to three sets by Marcella Krause. The score was 2—6, 6—1, 6—4.

Catherine Beutel, St. Louis Coun- ty champion defeated Mrs. Bene- dict Farrar in the feature match of the first round. The score was 9—7, 6—4. There were a number of long rallies in this match. Miss Beutel was steadier.

Mrs. B. K. Brouster, tournament chairman, was given a surprise in the first set of her match against Louise Diestlehorst who had a 3 to 2 lead but was unable to retain it. The set was won by Mrs. Brouster, 6—4 who also took the second, 6—1. Mary Dowling played some good tennis to win from Mrs. O. C. Berghaus in a what may be con- sidered the first upset in the tour- nament. This match required a good portion of the afternoon be- fore Miss Dowling won, 6—4, 6—3.

Play this afternoon will start at 2 o'clock. The seven remaining first-round matches and all of the second-round contests will be com- pleted this afternoon.

OH SUSANNA IS VICTOR IN THE ILLINOIS HANDICAP BY A NO

T. S. JORDAN IS BEATEN AFTER GREAT EFFORT

Little Cyn Takes Third Place, in Close Race for the $5000 Prize—Winner Pays $5.16 in Mutuels.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—J. N. Camden's 5-year-old mare, Oh Susanna, with McDermott up, won the $5000 Illinois Handicap at six furlongs for 3-year-olds and up, the feature event on this afternoon's program, before a crowd of 12,000 turf fans. T. S. Jordan finished second and Little Cyn, third.

T. S. Jordan, with Oh Susanna, led the procession to he stretch where Oh Susanna took command to win by a nose. Little Cyn steadily moved up from the rear to take third money.

Oh Susanna was coupled with Rothermel. Her time was 1:12 1-5 two-fifths second slower than the track record. The race carried a net value of $4210 to the owner of the winner and the Camden entry paid $5.16 in the mutuels.

Odds-on Favorite Wins.

Wildrake, 7-year-o.d odds-on favorite. Allen up, was an easy victor by one length in the opener, a six furlong affair for all ages, after making every post a winning one. Cream Puff took place money by half a length over Sturdy Stella.

Chicory, 2-year-old filly from the Nevada Stock Farm, and ridden by Jenner, set the pace all the way to win the second, another six furlong sprint for all ages, by one length. Ball Gee was second throughout while five lengths back Everlasting finished third.

Vellas, Steinhart up, was the victor in the third, the Parkridge Claiming Handicap, at a mile and a furlong, over Marlboro, Marlboro, with Vellas second, led to the stretch where the winner came to the front to win easily by three lengths. Profiteer was third throughout.

Second Victory for Allen.

Jockey Allen scored his second victory of the day in the River Forest Handicap for 2-year-olds, the fourth race and secondary feature on the card, when he piloted Gen. Grant across the wire a nose ahead of Misster, the odds-on favorite. Fair Anita was third. The winner established a new track record of 1:05 3-5 for the 5½ furlongs route.

Margaret Gaut, ridden by Depremaa, was last to leave the post, but steadily moved to the front and won the sixth at one mile with a length and a half to spare. Betty Elvira was second all the way and Red Pennant finished third.

SPORT SALAD

by J. Copp

The Paper Champions.

FRANKIE FRISCH was picked for second base
On Babe's great aggregation;
And was entitled to the place
In expert estimation.
While Hornsby played most clever ball
According to the letter,
The expert choosers nearly all Thought Frankie Frisch was better.

Of course exceptions some will take,
And with the experts differ;
Which after all will serve to make
The competition stiffer.
I know of many who could choose
An all-star combination,
That in a life time wouldn't lose
To Babe's great aggregation.

The people of St. Louis frown
On Brother Ruth's selection.
They do not see a single Brown
In all of the collection.
And just for that we're here to say,
To pay them for that caper
We'll never go to see them play
A game of ball on paper.

Quite So.

However, with Frankie Frisch playing second and Muddy Ruel, a native son, doing the catching for Babe Ruth's team, we didn't fare so badly.

While it takes lots of time and much thought to assemble an all-star team on paper it can be torn apart in a minute's time.

We notice that Babe in rounding up his champions never goes to the minors for any of his talent although major league magnates have been known to pay as high as $100,000 for a bush league star. And Babe could get 'em for nothing.

An all-star team could be picked from the Class A minor league teams that could be sold for an average of $15,000 a head on the open market and maybe more if there happened to be a couple of $100,000 birds in the bunch.

The Delayed Summer.

IN August there was little summer
But boy, September's been a hummer!
'Twould not surprise us after all,
If we should have a falless fall,
And jump direct without an interRegnum right smack into winter.

How True?

The man on the sandbox says the more he sees of weather the more he is convinced that the law of averages will be served.

Eventually.

THAT though the seasons overlap
It really doesn't mean a thing;
The same amount will be on tap of Winter, summer and of spring.

The only thing we ask of the Weatherman is that he will hold Jack Frost in leash until after the world series has been played.

While we may not be as vitally interested in the w. s., as we were last year we are still hoping.

NIMBA EASILY WINS LAWRENCE REALIZATION

By the Associated Press.

BELMONT PARK, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Before a good-sized crowd, Marshall Field's Nimba, well played at 4 to 1, easily won the Lawrence Realization Stake which featured this afternoon's race program here. She galloped along in front and ran the mile and five furlongs in 2:45 flat, which was a creditable effort. She earned $29,470.

F. Johnson's Brown Bud was second and Flippant third. Six colts and one filly comprised the field and Valorous was made the betting choice.

Nimbo, displaying a wonderful burst of speed, rushed to the front and as they swung into the back stretch she was leading by a length, with Valorous second and Chance Shot third. In the run down the back stretch, Nimba increased her advantage and was leading by four lengths at the far turn. She was just galloping along under a steady pull. She was going the easiest of the lot and it was apparent half a mile from the finish that she would win barring accident.

She turned into the stretch with five lengths to the good over Brown Bud and at the finish Thurber, who had the mount, was looking back at his field. She won by three lengths and Brown Bud beat Flippant a like distance for the place.

W. Ziegler's Polydor, well played, won the first race, a five and one-half furlong sprint over the Widener course in a romp, with False Modesty second and Corsican third. Polydor led from start to finish, winning by four lengths. A length separated second and third.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Jolly Roger scored an easy victory in winning the Brook steeplechase. Jolly Roger won $11,000. Lorenzo was second and Coronation third. Jolly Roger took the lead easily and won by four lengths. Lorenzo was running strong when he was bothered. He recovered and finished second by a head over Coronation.

Oh Say won the fourth event with Prate, the favorite, second, and Excalibur, coupled with Prate, third. Oh Say, showing rare gameness, held on to win in a drive by a head. Prate beat Excalibur three lengths for the place.

IRISH PAL AND SMILING GUS WIN FAIRMOUNT FEATURES

stretch after coming from far off the pace to overtake the others. In this case Joyous was the early leader and Martie Flynn made a move as if to assume the lead at the head of the stretch. It was then that Hardy brought out everything Irish Pal had and was putting yards of daylight between himself and the others in the last 100 yards.

In three starts at Fairmount, Irish Pal has won each time in rather easy fashion. He has gone to the post seven times in his career and he has won five times and finished second twice. He has been beaten by Mickey D., and Wellett, both times at Raceland. The colt was purchased recently by Durnell from B. B. Rice for $15,000.

Smiling Gus Wins Thriller.

The most thrilling race of the day and one which will be remembered with all the vividness of a derby by those who witnessed it was the Gravois Handicap, in which Smiling Gus, the star of C. E. Durnell's stable, came from fourth place at the head of the stretch to catch Kentucky Cardinal and Broad Axe at the very finish.

Lee Hardy, who leads America's jockeys in percentage of victories this season, gave Smiling Gus all the inspiration of a well-timed and energetically conducted ride. A $2 ticket on the winner paid $5.12

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The Browns lost to the Yankees for the twenty-first time this year in a tight pitching duel in which Wilcey Moore defeated Wally Stewart by a score of 1 to 0. this afternoon.

After pitching seven scoreless innings against the Yanks, Stewart weakened in the eighth when Bob Meusel led off with a double, advancing to third on Tony Lazzeri's sacrifice and scoring the only run of the game when Mike Gazella sent a sacrifice fly to E. Miller.

Wally Gerber, the Brownie shortstop, and Stewart were the only ones to find Wilcey Moore easy. They got five of the seven hits that Moore allowed. Stewart making three hits in three times up at the plate.

The Browns allowed the Yankees to establish a new American League record for victories against one club in a single season.

The former record was held by the Boston Red Sox, who won the 20 out of 22 from St. Louis in 1911. The Yankees also tied the National League record held by the Chicago Cubs, who, in 1919, won 21 out of 22 against Boston.

Earl Combs of the Yanks, by batting in the fifth, made his two hundredth hit of the season, being the first American Leaguer to accomplish this.

This was also Wilcey Moore's seventeenth victory for the Yankees. Most of his victories have been as a relief hurler, the aged rookie pitching but five complete games to his credit.

It was a tough loss for Stewart as it was one of his best games that he has pitched. Any pitcher that can hold the Yankees to seven hits and one run will win most of their games.

Wild Second Loses Bout for K. O. Frisbie

Poke at Referee Brings Verdict of Foul

No. 23—A Fighter's Letters to His Manager

By Walter Davenport.

DEAR PATSY: The reason I did not see you after my fight with Liverpool Lumpke the big Englishman brought over to this country by Lord Cowslip was that I had to go and find out what was happening to Ralph Alps who I am body guard for and from what happened at the fight I decided there was no time to be lost and I was right.

When I took the job of being body guard for Ralph Alps at the request of his father who owns a lot of railroads I did not know that he never slept more than three hours a week and all the rest of the time was out hunting up new places to get in trouble in. All his father said was that he was a little wild and ought to be looked after. Between you and I he ought to be looked into also.

He and I are out here in Chicago now and the only reason he ain't in more trouble that the Marines is he never stays still long enough in once place for much to happen there. The trouble always gets going in what you could call a big way about a hour after he is gone to somewheres else.

I do not mind this so much as you will think because it gives me a lot of road work which I am paid for doing by his old man and I get my sparring partners free because there is always somebody to sock when Ralph is around and if there ain't anybody Ralph goes out and digs one up. And you do not have to pull your punches when you are working like this. If you hire sparring partners like Leo Gates and Bud Gorman and Marco Polo you got to pull your punches because if you do not they will take a dive the first time you bear down and you got to pay a lot of dough for doing it. Anyway you know what I mean.

Ralph is such a busy young fellow as they say I have not found out the truth about why it was he jumped into the ring while I was making a chopping block out of Liverpool Lumpke and lost me the fight as you saw.

The Argument Starts.

ALL he told me was he got tired sitting down there in the crowd looking on and talking to Lord Cowslip about the English dames while they was a fight going on in the ring. He says he had to get nearer the fighting and the only way to do it was to jump in the ring and get in it. He did so as you saw and as he was one of my seconds it lost me the fight on a foul.

It is very hard to tell what happened when Ralph Alps is in it, but all I get out of him is that him and Lord Cowslip was talking about a big English woman named Lady Scruboak and if she had a hair lip or something. As I get it Lord Cowslip who is manager of Liverpool Lumpke ought to been watching the pasting his boy was getting from me but wasn't because he was busy arguing with Ralph who I was foolish enough to let be in my corner.

"My dear young sir," said Lord Cowslip, "Lady Scruboak hasn't a thing in the world the matter with her lip because she is not the sort of a woman who would stand for anything of the sort. She would not tolerate it for a minute because the Scruboaks are a very old family."

"Listen," said Ralph, "I will bet you a thousand bucks she is got a hair lip because I met her in London."

"What has that got to do with her having a hair lip," said Lord Cowslip.

"What," said Ralph.

"You being in London," said Lord Cowslip.

"Who said I had anything to do with her having a hair lip," said Ralph.

"Anyway what of it," said Lord Cowslip. "She hasn't got one after all."

"Well the Lady Scruboak I met has a couple of hair lips," said Ralph. "What do you think of that?"

"I think there is something wrong," said Lord Cowslip. "Lady Scruboak has a hair brain not a hair lip. She is not the kind of woman to stand having a hair lip or even two of them. Maybe she was only kidding you."

"If you have a hair lip," said Ralph, "you can't kid anybody. You got one yourself."

Hooch Out of an Iron Tank.

That started an argument which is one thing that Ralph can't stand and the result was that he drank a lot of Scotch and jumped into the ring and took a poke at the referee which made me loose my fight on a foul. The last I saw of him he was leaving with Lord Cowslip and that is why I did not see you after the fight because old man Alps does not want Ralph to go to Europe because there is too much drinking going on there and for all I knew Ralph and Lord Cowslip were on their way to England to give Lady Scruboak a looking over as they say but they didn't.

I found them together in a place uptown and they were talking to a young lady who said she was wronged or something. It was a very good thing I got there because about the only thing that could do a wrong to this young lady as far as I could see would be a taxicab or maybe a freight train because she was a very wise girl of the world and knew her stuff.

"Why ain't you in there fighting Liverpool Lumpe," said Ralph to me when I tried to tell him.

"That is what I was doing when you jumped into the ring and lost me my decision if not a knockout," I said."

"Let that be a lesson to you," he said, "and never interfere with what is going on."

He ordered another bottle which the bartender filled out of a iron tank because the way he makes his hooch it eats its way right through a bottle if left standing in it for more than half an hour and I decided it was time for me to begin earning my money by taking Ralph home. It was pretty hard work but I did it as ordered and the last I saw of Lord Cowslip he was telling the young lady how much she looked like Lady Scruboak which is very funny because Lady Scruboak would not think of looking anything like this young lady if what Lord Cowslip says is true.

Do not get me any more fights with boys like Liverpool Lumpke because it is a waste of time to slap any of Joe Beckett's pupils stiff until they have learned all that Joe knows. This boy does all Joe's stuff except the diving and I guess he must of quit before Joe had a chance to show him how to fall down. I had him knocked stiff and he did not know what to do about it such as falling down.

What is the matter with Jack Sharkey. From the way nobody is hearing a squawk out of him maybe he swallowed his tongue as they say when Dempsey hooked him on the jaw. Or maybe his pride was fouled too. Ralph Alps is going back to college to practice football next week and you will hear from me later.

Yours truly,
K. O. FRISBIE.

Patsy Fears Colleges.

DEAR FRISBIE: If I had as much sense as a salmon which haven't I would tell you you got to choose between me and this hurdling halfwit called Ralph Alps because my business is managing fighters and not a size six and seven-eighths one-ring circus.

I got just sense enough to know that one of these nights you and Ralphie are going to fall apart from each other because after two intellects like yours and Raphie's collide a couple of times there is going to be a divorce which is the way nature takes care of such things.

I was talking to a fellow who knew Ralphie ever since he was 10 years old not that he's grown much since except lengthways and he tells me that they used to amuse themselves all afternoon throwing a ball to Ralphie when he wanted to go home or go somewhere else.

When he would turn to go away they would holler at him and throw him the ball and he would always catch it and throw it back. They would keep this up for hours so that Ralphie who wasn't brilliant enough to think of not catching the ball could never get away. Of course the other boys couldn't get away either because they had to be somebody to throw the ball to Ralphie Alps but the other boys did not mind because it was a lot of fun listening to Ralphie cry and tell them he had to go home so please stop throwing him the ball.

I am glad Ralphie is going back to college. If you feel that you ought to see him that far be sure and leave him at the door. Don't go inside. Colleges are making all kinds of expriments these days and you are educated enough. I do not think you could stand any more.

Mind what I tell you and keep out of that college. Your fight with Liverpool Lumpke was one of those accidents which happen every now and then in this game. So are you so don't worry. It can't be helped.

Your manager,

TUNNEY BOXES WITH PATCH ON EYE, PUNCHING TWO OPPONENT

Champion Shows Fine Judgment of Distance—Dempsey's Day Broken Up by Visit of Indians.

By the Associated Press.

LAKE VILLA, Ill., Sept. 10. — The peace and quiet that had reigned through Gene Tunney's training camp for the past three days due to the injury to his right eye, were broken today when the world's heavyweight champion resumed training, boxing five rounds with two sparring mates.

The champion's judgment of distance, timing of punches and general execution were almost perfect. He missed occasionally with a right cross, but his left was working perfectly and his denfensive work was almost impregnable.

The lay-off in training had no effect on the champion, because he was more impressive today than he was in either of his two previous public workouts. Gene had a white patch over his damaged right eye when he climbed into the ring, and it was still there when he left. He will work again tomorrow with the public admitted for the usual $1.10.

The champion boxed two fast rounds with Jackie Williams, Chicago heavyweight, and three with Billy Vidabeck. Williams, boxing for the first time with Tunney traded wallops with Gene in the first round, and for a few seconds gave more than he received, but Gene finally got the range and just before the round closed, connected with a straight left to the jaw, following it with a right cross that sent Jackie down to one knee.

Tunney handled Vidabeck about as he pleased. Before beginning his boxing, Tunney worked four rounds with the punching bags.

The heat which Tunney encountered here after his arrival from Speculator, N. Y., has enabled him to reduce weight easier than he expected.

By the Associated Press.

CRETE, Ill., Sept. 10.—Just as a bolt of lightning ripped across the Lincoln Fields race track and a clap of thunder shook the stands, Jack Dempsey today settled the feathered head-piece of the Blackfeet Indians on his brow and became "Thunder Chief" of the Pikuni Tribe from the Glacier Park reservation.

Twenty-seven Indians, headed by Chief Two-Guns-White-Calf, who posed for the head on the buffalo nickel, joined in the dance about the former heavyweight champion while the leader solemnly girded Dempsey's bronzed throat with a necklace of eagle claws.

Dempsey joined in the war dance, mixing the ceremony a bit at times to do a little shadow boxing. Tex Rickard became "Little Chief" and Jim Jeffries, heavyweight champion of other decades, was crowned "Big Bear Chief."

The Indian ceremonial delayed Dempsey's training until late in the afternoon. Jack worked out for seven rounds, boxing four after sessions at the bags and shadow exercise.

Dempsey's opponents were Rocky Russell, a Milwaukee amateur middleweight, whom he knocked out in a minute; Allentown Joe Gans, Charles Schear, Benny Krueger and Osk Till. After finishing Russell with a volley of left hooks to the chin, Jack practiced evading left jabs the remainder of the drill and everyone else escaped heavy punishment.

Hagen Wins Fourth Western Open Title

fessional championship and Bill Mehlhorn chalked up a 69, only to find that he, like Espinosa could do no better than cut Hagen's lead to four strokes and tie for second place at 285.

Laurie Ayton made a similar bid in the third round, scoring 68, with a record 32 on the second half, only to slip on the ultimate circuit and finish third with 286. Eddie Held of St. Louis, who had held second place at the end of the first two rounds, fell off today and finished in a tie for seventeenth place.

Chick Evans, the only man who ever won the national amateur and open titles in one year, likewise not only failed to cut down the seven strokes between him and Hagen at the start of today's double round, but with a 77 this afternoon lost four more strokes and finished with 292 in a tie for seventh place with Craig Wood of Long Branch, N. J.

Chick's Putter Fails.

Evans, continuing his comeback after a three year slump, played excellent golf aside from the fact that his putter "sour dough," would not work on short putts, and he missed an average of four to the round, or 16 in all.

A third amateur finished among the 21 prize winners, Rudy Knepper of Chicago, tying with Eddie Held, Leo Diegel and Gene Sarazen at 297. Just ahead of Evans and Wood, Mike Brady of New York, who once tied with Hagen for the National open and lost the play-off, by scoring a fine 69 on the third round, tied at 291 with Frank Walsh of Appleton, Wis., for fifth place.

In all, par was broken six times today and equaled twice in spite of a rather slow course, due to a heavy shower at daybreak and another during the afternoon round. The tournament also was marked by a record of 69 on No. 1 course set up by Eddie Held and the quick bettering of this figure by Hagen with a 67. There was also a record of 32 for the first nine of No. 4 by Gunnar Nelson, who had the in and out scores of 34-45—79 and 32-44—76 for a total of 155 that crowded him out of further competition by one stroke.

Makes Eagles Scream.

Hagen started right out to win the tournament and made the Eagle scream on the very first hole he played, getting a three on the 515 yard hole. He shot another eagle on the 18th hole of No. 1 course to make his record 67, sinking from off the green as in the first Eagle score, and bagged, in all, nine birdies. He was one over par on 12 holes, but scored the other 59 holes in par. His total of 281 was 7 under fours for the 72 holes and one under par.

The victor would have beaten his record score of 278 for the event handily, but for a slight slump during the rain when the wet grass and a scampering gallery bothered him, and his comfortable lead apparently caused him to let up in his determined battle with par.

The courses used in this tournament will likely be the ones used next year in the national open. All the professionals agreed they were not easy, in spite of the fact that nearly a dozen scores under 70 were made on them. The play was super-excellent like Bobby Jones' when he scored well under 70 in a couple rounds at St. Andrews in winning the British open.

There are no expansive greens where putts of 100 feet can be made, and Butterfield Creek crosses the fairways many times while the Swilican at St. Andrews transects only two fairways. Then there are tight fairways through the woods with steep bluffs and many traps; but all the difficulties were smoothed out by the masterful shots of the leaders, more particularly the champion.

GEORGE BLAEHOLDER BOUGHT BY BROWNS FROM TULSA CLUB

George Blaeholder, who has been a frequent passenger on trains between St. Louis and Tulsa, ever since Jimmy Austin brought him from the wilds of California several years ago, will make the jump back to the Brpwns once more. Business Manager Bill Friel, in a telegram from Columbus, O., last night informed the Post-Dispatch that Blaeholder, a pitcher, had been purchased from the Tulsa Club of the Western League. The Browns will pay cash and three players, the telegram stated.

Blaeholder was a great prospect when he first joined the Browns but each year was sent back to Tulsa. He has the mechanical stuff and if he has learned enough he may be a great hurler in the American League.

ed great polo nevertheless. Stevenson, started with a rush while Webb, under way a trifle slower, was in his full stride at the close.

British Team Stunned.

With two goals in the first chukker and two more in the third to one for the British, the second period being scoreless, the challengers seemed fairly stunned as the Americans ran out three in the fourth and rode away for the half intermission leading seven to one.

The British total stood at one through the fifth and sixth chukkers while the United States was adding four more, but in the last two periods the play was even, each team scoring one each in the seventh and eighth.

Major Eric G. Atkinson, captain and back of the British bore the brunt of the burden for his team in the early stages of the game. Captain Roark, sensational Irish player, could not keep up with Tommy Hitchcock until near the end of the game when he got the range and was showing [illegible] play when the final bell [illegible] tilities.

Gay Winter Season Assured With Names of 45 Debutantes Already on Party Lists

INTRODUCING the debutantes of 1927-28 to readers of the Post-Dispatch, a bit of retrospection might be interesting, and also serve to substantiate the statement that it is by all odds the largest group presented in a single season in recent years, if not in the history of St. Louis. Old Plan Restored For Prophet's Ball

Committee to Abandon Last Year's "Island" Throne Which Prevented General View.

ACCEDING to the requests of a majority of last year's spectators at the Veiled Prophet ball, the committee in charge has been induced to revert to the old order of things so far as floor plan is concerned, for this year's function, to be held the evening of Oct. 5 at the Coliseum.

Instead of the elaborate "island" built in the center of the ballroom for the Court of Honor, where the beautiful gowns and jewels of the maids and matrons, to say nothing of those of the Queen herself, and the coronation ceremony were hidden from all but the few guests fortunate enough to have boxes, the stage again will be constructed at the south end, in full view of the entire assemblage. Decorators are now at work, devising a new feature for its arrangement.

The Prophet's commands in his immediate court, 75 maids and an equal number of matrons, were dispatched Friday, and the first undercurrent of excitement is apparent among the debutantes, for the bids are tangible assurance that the season is opening, and they soon must make their official bow to society. The entire bouquet of this season's bids is included in the maid of honor list, and the latest information is that the matrons will represent the younger married set more largely this year than formerly, because the dowagers have signified their desire to give their places to the younger women.

Conjecture as usual is rife concerning the identity of the debutante to be crowned Queen of Love and Beauty.

R. H. Dyer Marries Miss Huntington

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Sept. 10.

MISS ELIZABETH HUNTINGTON, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Henry B. Huntington of Brown University, Providence, R. I., and Randolph Harrison Dyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Chouteau Dyer of 39 Lenox place, St. Louis, were married in Grace Church, Amherst, Mass., at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. James O. S. Huntington, superior of the order of the Holy Cross of West Park, N. Y., an uncle of the bride, assisted by the Very Rev. Philemon Fowler Sturgis, dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Boston, formerly rector of Grace Church, Providence, which the bride attends.

The bride wore a white satin gown and an old family lace veil. She carried a bridal bouquet of lilies of the valley and white roses. Her sister, Miss Arria S. Huntington, was maid of honor, and J. Raymond Dyer of St. Louis served his brother as best man. The bridesmaids were the Miss Clarissa L. Dyer and Miss Ethel C. Dyer, sisters of the bridegroom, and Miss Eliot Chace of Providence. Miss Elizabeth H. Mason of New York, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Mary H. Huntington, a sister of the bride, were flower girls. The young women were gowned alike in yellow satin with hats to match and carried bouquets of vari-colored flowers. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The ushers were Lebaron R. Barker Jr., Benjamin A. S. Thorndyke and Kenneth Woodworth, of Boston, and George P. Huntington, a brother of the bride, of Providence.

The bride has been engaged in occupational therapy work in the Providence General Hospital. Mr. Dyer graduated from Harvard University in 1925 and is completing his studies at the Harvard School of Business Administration.

A reception at the old Huntington homestead, on the banks of the Connecticut River between Hadley and North Hadley, followed the ceremony. The bride is a great-granddaughter of the late Bishop Frederick Huntington, whose great-grandfather built the family Huntington mansion in 1755. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Dyer will reside at 32 John street, Providence, R. I.

Tournament for Werner Tennis Trophy Opens

THE annual women's district tennis championship tournament, which opened yesterday at the Triple A Club, is proving an interesting diversion. This is the first year that the tournament has been entirely in charge of women, and all matches will be under the direction of a committee, of which Mrs. Harold J Brouster is chairman.

There are 53 entries, and play in the women's singles will be for the trophy presented last year by Mrs. Joseph Werner, wife of the president of the St. Louis District Tennis Association. It is known as the Elise Werner trophy. The reservation of four courts each day will make it possible to complete the tournament in one week.

Among the entries are Mrs. John C. Talbot, Mrs. Marian Brokaw, Mrs. Benedict Farrar, Miss Catherine Beutel and Mrs. Festus J. Wade Jr.

Mrs. Werner has been chosen as honorary referee.

Season at Michigan Resorts Ends and St. Louisans Leave

HARBOR POINT, Mich., Sept. 10.

AUTUMN has claimed Harbor Point and the greens of summer have been transformed into the tranquil colorings of fall. In the main part one can say St. Louis has gone home for the winter. There are a few more days left before the Harbor Point clubhouse closes and there have been occasional farewell parties in the club parlors.

St. Louis is playing an active role in the new winter sports movement that is claiming the interests of the entire north of Michigan. A number of well known St. Louisans at Harbor Point have expressed their intention of returning to their summer places in February to take part in the sporting events planned on the bayou and in the hills above the village. Seventy-five men of the nearby resorts gathered at the Wequetonsing casino to talk over the winter sports prospects.

The chief speaker of the evening was William H. Barnett, who has been spending the summer at "Weque" with his mother, Mrs William Barnett. Other speakers of the evening were Duncan I. Meier and William H. Edison, both of St. Louis.

One of the final events at Harbor Point was the recent banquet of the Yacht Club. Frederick Schlafly Jr., presided, and presented the principal speakers: Commodore-elect Cecil Gamble and Vice Commodore-elect Sterling Morton Jr. Duncan Dobson and Miss Corrine Gamble, skippers of the victorious "prune" boat, commented on the success and enjoyability of the summer boating season.

Wood-Leavitt Wedding

The marriage of Miss Anne Elizabeth Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Wood of 5243 Theodosia avenue, and Maurice Nash Leavitt, 5603 Cabanne avenue, took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at St. Philip's Episcopal Church, the Rev. H. S. Ablewhite officiating. The bride had no attendants and David F. Leavitt was his brother's best man. Mr. and Mrs. Leavitt left last night for Colorado. Mrs. Leavitt has been active in Girl Scout work. The groom is the suburban field executive of the Boy Scouts.

Walsh of 24 Portland place, at their cottage at Jamestown, R. I.

Mrs. George Robertson of Edinburgh, Scotland, sailed yesterday for this country to visit Mrs. Robertson's sister, Mrs. Isaac Lippincott of 5944 West Cabanne avenue. A number of social affairs will be given for Mrs. Robertson and her daughter.

So they slenderize and rely on Farr's as the safest way to restore the natural, original color whenever a gray spear appears.

Farr's is a common sight in the dressing rooms at the studios. It is freely used because they have proved it to be absolutely harmless, perfectly clear and clean, not sticky and will not rub off nor stain the scalp.

You Must Read Every Item to Realize Why the "Phenomenal Crosley" Is No Exaggeration

Great Features of This Astounding Offer!

1. Scientific Shielding—of a quality formerly only possible in the highest-priced sets.
2. The Genuine Neutrodyne Principle prevents oscillation. Of course, it is more expensive than ordinary methods, but it is a feature of this marvel radio.
3. Long-Distance Accuminators—as telescopes bring distant objects clearly into view, so the Crosley accuminators produce the volume of far-away signals so they seem like local programs.
4. Volume Control Minus Distortion. Whether you want "brass band" power for dancing or soft and mellow reproduction, the Crosley sets a high standard of controlled tone quality.
5. Illuminated Dial. No need to break "the mood of music" with a sudden glare of light for tuning, because the Crosley illuminated dial may be plainly read in the dark.
6. The Single Knob. Simplifies tuning for ordinary reception of local and super-powered stations.
7. Beauty of Cabinet—Best of Equipment. An inspection of the beautiful cabinet makes this price seem impossible; such rich woodwork, the full-tone, enclosed cone speaker, and the spacious compartment for batteries, and power units—check off every item of equipment. At such savings you might expect second-rate accessories—but not in this offer. The list reads like a Radio Hall of Fame!

Protests Against Motorists Driving Astride the Black Line on Illinois Highways.

Members of the Alton Automobile Club, which has branches in Madison, Bond, Jersey, Greene, and Calhoun Counties, Illinois, are complaining in letters to the club that some Missouri automobile drivers do not keep the right as a rule in driving over Illinois highways, but keep astride the black line.

In a letter to the Post-Dispatch, the Alton Auto Club says that unless this practice is stopped it will be necessary for Illinois State officers to proceed against motorists who "hog" the road.

Weddings and Engagements

Miss Josephine Brinkwirth, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brinkwirth, has selected Oct. 12 as the date for her marriage to J. Reynolds Medart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Medart of 5406 Delmar boulevard. The ceremony will take place at St. Xavier's Church.

Miss Brinkwirth, who makes her home with her aunt, Miss Adelaide Grone, and her uncle, John Grone, of 3742 West Pine boulevard, was presented to society at a ball at the St. Louis Woman's Club several seasons ago. She was graduated from Sacred Heart Convent, Maryville, and completed her education in European travel. Mr. Medart was graduated from Notre Dame University, and is a member of Sunset Hill Country Club and the Missouri Athletic Association.

The marriage of Miss Ruth Francisco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Francisco of Webster Groves and Edward Pierre Durffe of Montclair, N. J., was solemnized at 11 o'clock last Saturday morning at the Church of the Holy Redeemer, the Rev. Father Dooley officiating. A wedding breakfast followed at the Coronado Hotel. Mr. Durffe and his bride departed immediately for California. They will make their home in Montclair.

The bride was unattended, and wore an ensemble of queen's blue crepe. Her corsage was of orchids and lilies of the valley. She has been a popular member of the younger set since her graduation from Webster College several years ago. Mr. Durffe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Durffe of Hasbrouck Heights, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Passer of 6640 Kingsbury boulevard announce the engagement of their daughter, Rosalie, to Dr. Irvin C. Solar of Chicago.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Evelyn Payne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Payne, 5909 Cates avenue, and Earl H. Pleitsch, the evening of Sept. 17, at 8:30 o'clock at the Hamilton Avenue Christian Church.

Miss Payne will be attended by Miss Grace Jones as maid of honor and Miss Katherine Pickering as bridesmaid. W. Elmer Spurr will serve as best man and Maurice A. Payne, brother of the prospective bride, will be groomsman. V. B. Gragg and William Marquard will act as ushers. A reception immediately after the ceremony will be held in the parlors of the church.

The wedding of Miss Estelle Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Green of 5877 Bartmer avenue, and Ben W. Altman of 1348 Burd avenue, took place Aug. 28 at the home of the bride's parents. Miss Birdie Zellinger was maid of honor and Harry Green, brother of the bride, was best man. Miss Iona Schecter was bridesmaid and Sam Wolff was groomsman. Following a honeymoon in the East Mr. Altman and his bride will make their home at 5877 Bartmer avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. George Benas of 5349 Pershing avenue will be at home informally Wednesday evening in honor of their daughter, Dorothy, whose engagement to Mr. Willis D. Gradison of Cincinnati has been announced. The wedding will take place Friday morning at Hotel Chase.

Announcement was made last week of the marriage, Thursday, Sept. 1, of Miss Mildred Marion Adelmann, daughter of Mrs. Maude Adelmann, of 7312 Manchester avenue, to Frederick George Mayer. The ceremony took place Thursday morning at the Immaculate Conception Church, with Rev. J. P. Ryan officiating.

The bride was attended by her sisters, Miss Maude May and Miss Dorothy Adelmann, their frocks being of shaded taffeta made in bouffant style. Virginia Adelmann, a niece of the bride, was the flower girl and her frock was of pink taffeta. She carried a small basket of rose petals. The bride's costume was of white satin, the bodice made in basque effect, and the skirt bouffant with a deep flounce of Chantilly lace, both the waist and skirt being trimmed in seed pearls. Her veil was of tulle fitting closely in cap style. She carried an arm bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Mr. Mayer had as his attendant his brother, Dennis Mayer. The groomsman was August Mayer.

A wedding breakfast followed at the home of the bride's mother, after which Mr. Mayer and his bride left for a trip to Kansas City, and upon their return will make their home for the present with Mrs. Adelmann.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Hurwitz of 3248 Audubon place, East St. Louis, gave a dinner at their home Wednesday evening, to announce the engagement of their daughter, Nechoma, to Eli Carleton Seigel, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Seigel of 6421 Cates avenue.

Petersen of 3887 Utah place, Saturday afternoon, Sept. 3, at 3 o'clock. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's mother and the services were read by the Rev. Dr. Joseph M. Carter of Bowling Green, Ky., an uncle of the bride.

The bridal gown was of ivory satin, trimmed in pearls and lace. The tulle veil was held in place by orange blossoms and the bride carried a bouquet of white rosebuds. She was attended by her sisters, Mrs. Wilbur J. Waters and Mrs. Albert J. Wessbecher, and was given in marriage by her brother, Hiram M. Phipps. Mr. Petersen was attended by his brother, Philip, and Thomas Kron. Harry A. Phipps of Kansas City and Wilbur J. Waters and Albert F. Wessbecher were ushers.

Inflamed Eyes Clear in Five Minutes

A new scientific method of strengthening eyes begins by freeing them of inflammation in a few minutes, making them clear and bright.

Look closely at your eyes and lids. Are they clear and fine like the eyes of a child? Do your eyes open readily in the morning and feel smooth, or stick together and feel rough? If your eyes show the effects of strain or overwork; if the lids show tiny wrinkles, you need this new treatment to make your eyes strong and beautiful and rid your lids of the tiny wrinkles before they grow into crows' feet.

Just ask your druggist for Bon-Opto home treatment outfit. Use it as directed and watch the result. Inflammation goes like magic. Your eyes grow strong and your sight clear. Relief from strain and squinting stops the formation of the little wrinkles born to grow into crows' feet and rob you of youth and beauty.

Be sure to ask for Bon-Opto and use it with utmost confidence. It is known to druggists and doctors as a cleansing, soothing, strengthening lotion and is recommended and sold by all good druggists.

Get it today of your druggist and send us your name for free booklet, "Stronger Eyes and Better Sight." Valmas Drug Co., Dept. 1053H, Rochester, N. Y.

WOMAN CITES OLD LAW AGAINST MOVIE HOUSE

Sues Over Injuries She Says She Suffered When Forced to Stand in Crowd.

An old Missouri statute which forbids theaters to admit more persons than the number of seats provided was invoked yesterday for the first time in years. Many local theaters, including the larger movie houses, permit customers to stand in the aisles and lobbies.

In the name of the City of St. Louis, Mrs. Louise Kurth, 3109A Union boulevard, sued to recover $5000 from the Sanford Amusement Co., operating the Palm Theater, 3010 Union. In her own name, she sued for $2500 personal damages. Allegations in both suits are that when she went to the theater, May 14, the management permitted her to stand in a crowd, with the result that she was jostled, fell to the floor and suffered a skull fracture.

The unusual suit brought in the name of the city is based on Sections 10,969 and 10,972 of the revised statutes of Missouri. The first section, regulating places of public amusement, specifies that "all aisles shall be kept unobstructed" and "No more persons shall be admitted into any such place than there are seats therefor."

The other section provides a penalty, for any violation, of forfeiture of license and a fine of $20 to $5000.

The complainant must sue in the name of the city, town or village where the violation occurs. One half of the fine collected shall be paid to the complainant, and the other half to the treasurer of the city, town or school for the use and benefit of the public schools.

ST. LOUIS MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR WAYNE WHEELER SEPT. 18

A memorial service for the late Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, will be held at the Union Methodist Church, 3610 Delmar boulevard, at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Sept. 18. An invitation to all churches to participate in the service has been issued by the Rev. Parker Shields, State Superintendent for Missouri.

The Rev. R. H. Schuett, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, and president of the Ministerial Alliance, will preside. The speakers will include Charles M. Hay, the Rev. R. R. Biggar, pastor of Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church and the Rev. Samuel E. Ewing, secretary of the Missouri Baptist Mission Board.

The invocation will be by the Rev. C. E. Lemmon, pastor of the Hamilton Avenue Christian Church, and the benediction by the Rev. J. F. LeClere, pastor of the Third United Presbyterian Church.

NLY IN DISARMAMENT IES ANY SECURITY FOR PEACE, LLOYD GEORGE SAYS

ght Years After War Caused by Lure of Vast Armies, World's Military Forces Are Greater Than Ever.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE.
War-Time Premier of England.

LONDON, Sept. 10.

ORD CECIL'S resignation was inevitable after the inconceivable muddle of the three-power naval conferences. The whole business, from beginning to end, was another proof—if such proof were needed—of the stupidity with which the most critical affairs of the nations are often conducted.

We stumbled into a World War not through the design of the majority but through the ineptitude of the clumsy.

It is too early yet to forecast the result of the futile naval conference. The mischief may be intercepted by a superior wisdom than that which has been shown by the projectors of the conference. But, the consequences may be grave for the future of humanity, if all for the lack of ordinary business intelligence on the part of the promoters and participants. Had a number of industrialists met to discuss a combine in soap-suds, they would have engaged in a careful preliminary examination of the possibilities and the details. Here they met as if they had come together for a Negro camp meeting to chant the hymns of peace. Lord Cecil is ashamed of having taken part in such a badly staged farce that cannot face an assembly of the League of Nations where disarmament questions are to be discussed after the Anglo-American-Japanese fiasco, his exhortations to disarm would be greeted with a smile of derision. The whole conference was ruled by the experts. Mr. Bridgeman and Mr. Gibson were only megaphones. The moment the British government handed the steering of the ship to the Admirals, then Lord Cecil's warnings from the crow's nest were of no avail. He was therefore decided to give up that post of observation. His dramatic protest may have its uses.

Sounding an Alarm.

Some event like Lord Cecil's resignation is essential to arrest public attention and sound the alarm, so that the nations should at any rate take notice of what is going on eight years after the great war provoked by the lure and menace of huge armies and navies—the aggregate armies of the world are larger than ever before, the area of competition in armaments has only been shifted to make it more formidable than ever before.

If war were declared tomorrow between the belligerents of 1914, not as many men could be put into the field as were mobilized in August, 1914. The numbers mobilized in 1914 were limited by the equipment available. But the actual equipment of 1918 is still in existence—everywhere except in Germany—and the guns, tanks, planes and poison gas are all being up-to-date, replenished, developed and improved.

Europe Borrows to Buy Arms.

European nations have borrowed money to purchase weapons of war. And America has created a more formidable instrument in her warlike efficiency, as compared with 1914, than any other country.

It is but fair to Great Britain that it should be stated that the British Empire alone has substantially reduced her military and naval forces in comparison with 1914. The enormous increase in armies trained for war is hidden in the figures of detail about the conscription laws of the various countries. It is the experts alone who can find their way to the facts through a jungle of regulations. The League of Nations' inventory of European armaments has been compiled from information contributed by nations anxious to withdraw from the assembly the truth about their armies. The fact remains that there are in Europe at this moment at least seven countries that can at any such call to their colors over 1,000,000 armed men and at least three of them can double and treble that number. That is why all the friends of peace in every land and of every party place disarmament first on their program.

Dangerous to Peace.

What makes these huge armies so dangerous to peace is that the skies are clouded with international feuds in every quarter of the globe. That is not necessarily a reflection on the peace treaties. Every effort to recast old established frontiers and to readjust ancient quarrels is bound to leave much soreness in the breast of the party that has to give up something it formerly enjoyed, and the other party is therefore on the lookout for the return blow which past history has always led it to expect.

Nations must therefore either arm or arbitrate. There is no half-way house. You cannot ensure peace by confining arbitration to minor questions and trusting the rest to the ordeal of battle. There are five or six outstanding issues disturbing the nations today, any one of which may lead to war, and not one of which the nations principally concerned are prepared to submit to the decision of either the League of Nations or the Hague tribunal.

Danger Points.

Let me enumerate these troublesome questions:

There is first of all the question of the evacuation of the Rhineland. This is a growing menace to good will and peace between two of the most formidable nations in the world. By the Treaty of Versailles, 10 and 15 year periods of occupation were to be curtailed if Germany faithfully carried out her obligations under the treaty. Her admission to the Council of the League of Nations last year was an acknowledgment, by the Allies, of her loyal discharge of her onerous undertakings. Briand, in a significant speech, went out of his way to pay tribute to the way in which Germany was carrying out her promises. The spirit of Locarno, without evacuation, is like faith without works. There are ominous indications that the ruling party in France has no intention of withdrawing the troops from the Rhineland even at the end of the stipulated periods. Marshal Foch has never wavered in his opinion that occupation of the Rhine bridgeheads is essential to the security of France. It has always been suspected that Poincare was in agreement with the famous soldier on this point.

Camping in the Rhineland.

A further question is now being raised—that of material guarantees for payment of the Dawes installments. Here is a quotation from the semiofficial organ of the Quai d'Orsay: "As to the question of evacuation of the Rhineland, which Germans have particularly at heart (which is quite natural), it is possible that the German Minister of Foreign Affairs would like to discuss it in a general way with his colleagues of the Allied countries, but he certainly realizes that it would be inopportune to put it actually in precise terms, because it cannot be practically decided as long as Germany is not prepared to furnish, from the point of view of material guarantees and from the point of view of security, the necessary equivalent of such a sacrifice on the part of the Allies." That means prolongation of the period of occupation for another quarter of a century. Does anyone imagine that a great nation like Germany can tolerate foreign soldiery on its soil for a generation without resorting to every expedient to free the fatherland from so intolerable a humiliation? Increasing resentment will beget incidents and incidents will lead to reprisals. That is the road to inevitable war.

Then there is the troublous question of the Eastern frontiers of Germany. Britain and Italy both declined at Locarno to guarantee these frontiers. That refusal in itself contains a warning to the complacent. Germany has accepted the Western frontiers imposed upon her in 1919. She proposes to challenge the justice of her Eastern frontiers. The peace of Europe depends on whether, when the time comes for the German demand to be presented, the authority exerted by the League of Nations will be sufficiently potent to decide the issue of revision and to impose judgment on the disputants.

Albania a Source of Trouble.

In another corner of Europe, Albania is a perpetual source of anxiety. Italy and Jugoslavia have not yet settled their latest dispute over this volcanic little mountain land. They view each other with jealousy, suspicion and increasing distrust and dislike. Every movement by either Italy or Jugoslavia in the Albanian direction is exaggerated by the other country.

China is developing infinite possibilities of trouble. The interests of powerful nations are being challenged, disregarded and trampled upon in every province of that vast country. It was easy to intervene by force when there was practically only one great Power concerned or when, later on, the Powers could divide China into spheres of influence. That is no longer possible. America would not tolerate such an arrangement. That largely explains the reluctance with which the Powers contemplate intervention. It would be easy to brush away these gossamer armies that are blown about from province to province by the lightest of breezes. But any invasion of China might lead to disputes between the Powers themselves. They all shrink from that prospect. But how long can they maintain this attitude?

We already hear of enormous interests of Japan in Manchuria and how they are being imperiled by projects of new railways. There is a Japanese party which urges upon the Government a more aggressive policy in defense of the interests of Japan in Northern China. I am not anticipating immediate action. But China is undoubtedly a disturbing element which cannot be left out of account by the guardians of world peace.

Then there is always Russia. Her government is virtually at war with the whole world. And she has an undoubted grievance in the fixation of her western frontiers. She claims that advantage was taken of the distractions of civil war to annex forcibly thousands of square miles of Russian soil. Her grievance is identical with that of Germany—a denial of equality amongst the nations and the incorporation of millions of her people into foreign countries. The recovery of Russia may well provide a chemical energy which will explode the bomb that will once more shatter world peace. For Russia has an interest in all other questions that menace tranquillity. That is why I have urged the nations to bring Russia into their fraternity without delay. Briand and I had this peril in mind when, at Cannes, we invited Russia to come to the conference of nations

Wayne B. Wheeler and the English Case

An Incident in the Turbulent Career of the Late Anti-Saloon League Leader Which Proved Him an Uncompromising Fighter for What He Was Convinced Was Right.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

WAYNE B. WHEELER, the ablest lobbyist Washington has ever seen—and the most underpaid—was a brisk little man with a round, bald head and an enormous area of upper lip entirely covered with brown stubble. He was a picture of cheerful alertness and nervous activity. He could easily have earned $50,000 a year practicing law. His salary from the Anti-Saloon League was less than $10,000, and if he ever took a dishonest dollar it has yet to be discovered.

Whatever one might think of the business in which he was engaged, it was difficult to dislike Wheeler personally, and the writer, who knew him well, never attempted to. The little man was too frank, too nervy, and too dynamic. I am by no means satisfied that he was a fanatic, although he was extraordinarily single-minded. Chatting in his office one day, I said:

"My objection to you people is that you make his wetness or dryness the sole standard by which a public man shall be judged. His record on other issues makes no difference. His character is ignored. As between a candidate who is ignorant, hypocritical and dry, and one who is intelligent, honest and wet, you invariably support the former. Do you think that is conducive to good morals and good Government?"

Ohio Senate Campaign Presents an Example.

Wheeler demurred to the charge, and demanded that I cite an instance of that sort. Fortunately, I could cite an excellent one. At that moment the Ohio senatorship was being contested for by two men—Frank B. Willis, a loud, shallow, baby-kissing politician, and Atlee Pomerene, an able, brave and dignified man, with a fine record of public service. The league was working tooth and nail for Willis. I thought Wheeler winced a little.

"Well," he said with a grim smile, "while I cannot admit the full justice of that comparison, I suppose it would be foolish to deny that we are chiefly interested in prohibition. After all, a man can't fight on 14 fronts at the same time. I have chosen to fight booze. The rest of you fellows will have to make the fight for social and economic justice."

However, there was a time when Wheeler, for the sake of the public good and against the determined wishes of certain of his associates, was willing to cease firing on his own front long enough to permit an act of justice to proceed. That act of justice was the investigation of the judicial conduct of Federal Judge George W. English of East St. Louis, and it was carried out only with the consent of Wayne Wheeler. The investigation which resulted in the impeachment and resignation of that dishonored Judge would not have occurred when it did if Wheeler had not agreed. And English was not only a dry, but a dry with a spectacular record made in the dry cause.

Anti-Saloon League Objects to Inquiry.

When the Post-Dispatch first presented to the House of Representatives evidence of Judge English's misconduct, and asked for an investigation, it soon became apparent that the investigation could be had only by unanimous consent. The end of the short session was approaching, and one objection could block consideration of the resolution. The objection was promptly made. Inquiry disclosed that it had been made at the instance of the Anti-Saloon League.

"A Grand Fighter"

WAYNE B. WHEELER.

The writer went to Wheeler and asked why. The little man was always frank. He said he had been visited by Scott McBride, general superintendent of the League. McBride, formerly superintendent of the Illinois League, had told him of the fight made in the Illinois Legislature for State-wide prohibition years before. English, then a member of the Legislature, had been one of the dry leaders in that battle. In the eyes of the drys, he had borne himself bravely and well.

Wheeler Power Could Block Investigation.

This, McBride said, was the opportunity to repay the debt. To desert English now, he argued, would be sheer treachery. The interest of the Post-Dispatch, he told Wheeler, was simply that of "a wet newspaper trying to 'get' a dry Judge." Wheeler was convinced; the objection had followed.

There wasn't the slightest doubt that Wheeler could prevent the investigation. He had blocked it, and he could continue to block it throughout the remainder of the session. And delay over adjournment probably would mean permanent failure. Such things must be pushed home when ripe, or never.

The writer assured Wheeler that the Post-Dispatch had no interest whatever in Judge English's record on prohibition, and was not even aware of it. It was interested solely in his record as Federal Judge. The charges against him did not arise from prohibition cases; they arose from his handling of bankrupt estates, and from his tyrannous treatment of lawyers and litigants. The Post-Dispatch was neither persecuting nor prosecuting English, it was merely asking that an inquiry be conducted by the proper authorities. The evidence, the writer said, indicated corruption and graft, and moreover the writer stood ready to tell Wheeler what it was.

The little Napoleon of prohibition meditated a moment.

"All right," he said, "that sounds like a fair offer. I don't propose to let the league be used as an instrument for shielding an unfit Judge, no matter how dry he has been. Write me a memorandum of the charges and the evidence, and I'll give you an answer within 24 hours after I read it."

The memorandum was prepared that night. It contained a list of the charges, a digest of the evidence which had been gathered to support them, and a list of the witnesses who were ready to testify before a committee of Congress. I left it with Wheeler, and returned the following morning. As I entered his sanctum, the little man jumped up. The memorandum was in his hand.

Wheeler Withdraws Obstacles to Motion.

"It's all right," he announced. "I've told our friends to lay off. These charges are awful. If they are true, this man shouldn't be on the bench a day longer. I've told our own people that we can't afford to support him. And, anyhow, I don't like the efforts that are being made to head off an investigation. If Judge English is innocent, the investigation won't hurt him. I think the resolution will go through."

It did go through. The Congressman who had made the objection withdrew it the following day. Others who had been ready to object if he did not, were silent. The resolution passed, the investigation was held, Judge English was impeached, and resigned on the eve of his trial before the Senate. There had been, it is true, other obstacles to overcome and different influences to combat before the investigation could be obtained, but the fact remains that Wheeler could have stopped it.

Not long after English's resignation, I visited Wheeler's office in the old red brick building across the street from the Capitol, and recalled, with some satisfaction, the forecast I had made 18 months earlier of what an investigation of the Judge's conduct would disclose.

"Say, the Post-Dispatch did a fine job there," exclaimed Wheeler. "I'm eternally obliged to you for putting us straight on that thing. It would have been a calamity for the league if we had protected that fellow, and then had all this stuff come out on him later."

Wheeler Presents His Way to End Corruption.

"Isn't it a pity," he added with twinkling eyes, "that a great newspaper like the Post-Dispatch just can't get right on prohibition. If you would join hands with us, the Post-Dispatch and the Anti-Saloon League could get rid of all the rotten Judges in the country in a few years."

As I have said, it was difficult not to like Wayne Wheeler. Probably he was wrong about prohibition, and I suspect he died full of disappointment over the results. And there are many who will have strong opinions about the propriety of a condition which enables a private individual to exercise the power which Wheeler exercised over Congress. But there are others who exercise the same power, and none more ruthlessly than the agents of the great banks and corporations.

The writer had reason to consider Wayne B. Wheeler a pretty decent man. And he certainly was a grand fighter.

WHITE HOUSE, RENOVATED, IS NO LONGER A MENACE TO LIVES OF PRESIDENTS

Rickety Top Story Rebuilt and Steel Roof Replaces Antique Covering of Wood and Tin.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.

THE White House, which has menaced the lives of Presidents and their families for several decades, is now safe, modern and in all respects a fitting home for the chief executive of the United States. Until six months ago it was a shell, subject to possible collapse under a severe strain. In the past the White House has borne closer resemblance to an old world castle than to an American mansion.

For many years the plumbing would have been sneered at by a Government clerk if he had found it in a Washington apartment house. In the real old days when the capital of the nation was not much more than a town, the chief executive's home was surrounded by a swamp, the home of malarial mosquitoes. The swamp has been drained for many years, of course, but nevertheless there has been danger.

Dangerous Roof Repaired.

In the opinion of the army engineers who have been supervising the remaking of the White House for the last six months, the President and Mrs. Coolidge lived in constant jeopardy as long as they were under the old roof. The roof has been replaced and other improvements made. The President need fear no longer that a too heavy tread in what was the servants quarters will cause a cave-in or that a heavy snow will result in the collapse of the rare old colonial mansion rebuilt over 110 years ago. Ostensibly, the White House was to have a new roof when Congress appropriated $350,000 for the remodeling. Actually, the entire third floor has been rebuilt, the second floor, the home of the executive family, has been redecorated, and a small tiled roof garden or promenade, has been added.

Cost Under the Appropriation.

The exact cost has not been calculated, but the army officers in charge of the work think they will be able to return about $100,000 to the Treasury. The changes have been much greater than the improvements added by President Roosevelt. The army engineers believe that the beautiful old home will be able to take care of the changing administrations for many generations to come. To remove the old roof of wood and tin and replace it with steel and slate was the principal engineering problem and the largest item of expense.

The old roof was flat and covered a considerable area. In seasons when snow was heavy it was under a severe strain, even when it was new. And since the Knickerbocker Theater disaster, Washington has been fearful of the White House whenever there was a prolonged snowy season.

Arrangement of Building.

To understand the danger in which recent occupants of the White House have lived, a picture of the whole structure is necessary. The ground-level floor is styled the basement. The entrances are on this level. The east wing, where the guests arrived for the receptions, is a part of it. The first, "official" floor, is one flight up. Here is the state dining room. The green room. The red room and the great east room. It is here that visitors meet the first family.

The second floor is the actual home of the President and his family. Before the Roosevelt change, the third floor was really an attic, nestling beneath the eaves. Judging from its structure, it was never intended to be occupied. It was first used for storing books, documents and old furniture, and there was not even a staircase leading to it. President Roosevelt had a stairway of sorts built so as to use this attic for servants' quarters. This change endangered his own life and the lives of his successors.

Huge spliced timbers spanned the space from one outside wall to the other. Sometimes they found support on an intervening wall but this was incidental. Their main purpose was to carry the trusses that tied to the timbers above supporting the roof the weight above forced each truss into place and braced the whole. The floor on the attic was laid on the lower timbers of this brace. When the attic became a storage place, weight accumulated through the decades and these lower timbers sagged to such an extent that they pulled loose from the trusses that supported the roof, thus breaking the lock that gave strength to the whole. The architect's scheme of stresses and strains was entirely upset. It had even happened these big timbers were sawed in two when they interfered with plans for new windows.

An Engineer's Nightmare.

When modern engineers saw what had been done they shuddered at the possibilities. As the White House became more crowded, other attaches of the White House above the range of servants found quarters in this attic. It was also a rendezvous for rats. One of the amusing stories of the Roosevelt administration is about the Roosevelt boys rat hunting with ferrets in these makeshift rooms.

Through this last spring and summer Washington watched the White House go through a transformation. First there rose a superstructure on top of the building. This was a temporary roof to protect the mansion from the elements while its old cover was taken off and a modern cap of steel and slate put on. Beneath this temporary roof the work of demolition began. The old tin roof disappeared. The ancient timbers that had stood for more than a century were taken down. The third story was taken off. Even the ceilings of the second story, the personal quarters of the family, were removed.

East Room Used as Warehouse

All the furniture of this second floor was stored in the stately east room and the formal dining room. Thus, two apartments that in season know more grandeur than any others in all the nation were converted for a time into mere warehouse space. Steel beams and trusses were installed to span the space between the thick masonry walls. A network of steel took the shape of the new roof that was to be. The space beneath, however, was considered from the standpoint of utility. It was possible to build beneath the roof new quarters that would greatly enlarge the living quarters of the mansion. The roof was broken here and there for dormer windows that would let in the light.

18 Rooms on Third Floor Now.

As a result of the change, there are now 18 usable rooms and seven baths on the third floor. Some are to be reserved as guest rooms, while others will be used for servants' quarters and storage rooms. The choice rooms open on a tile-paved promenade that runs along the south front of the White House, over the south portico. They give a view of the White House grounds, the parkways beyond, the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial and a sweep of the Potomac and the hills of Virginia that is rare and beautiful.

Some people have insisted that this promenade is really a roof garden. That is a question that

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Prohibition and Taxes.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I FOUND the letter of one H. P. Faris anent "Miraculous Prohibition" rather amusing, so much so that it is difficult indeed for me to get up enough "fire" for this reply.

Mr. Faris seems to be convinced that since it has been possible to recover somewhat from the terrific taxation of the late World War to the extent of a $2,535,000,000 decrease in annual taxation since 1919 in fact, that the costs of prohibition direct or indirect are therefore nonexistent!

Wonder of wonders! The mathematical gymnastics Mr. Faris employed to arrive at this "miraculous" conclusion are unknown to me, but I would nevertheless like to point out to him, first: That this reduction in the National Government's taxation is directly attributable to Coolidge economy and the refunding genius of one Mr. Mellon.

Second, that in spite of the National Government's good example, State and city taxes throughout the country are higher now than during the war.

Third, that the national taxation is still 300 per cent above the pre-war 1916 rate or $2,000,000 annually, and that the annual costs of prohibition are included in that total to the amount of more than a billion dollars.

Fourth, that the lowly farmer is the one upon whom the burden of prohibition rests the hardest, in that it has robbed him of a market for his surplus which in these days of prohibition must lie and rot while the farmer goes bankrupt or seeks Government aid from McNary and Haugen.

Anyway, I suspect that Mr. Faris is not a taxpayer or a farmer.

Thomas Paine "100 Per Cent American."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR editorial eulogy to the memory of the patriot, Thomas Paine, is another example of your unceasing opposition to bigotry that has been founded upon common ignorance of facts and prejudice based on careless repetition of old slanders heaped upon benefactors of the human family.

Blatant individuals get into a frenzy at the mention of the names of noble persons without being informed about the lives and historical excellence of those sublimely grand men or women. How common it is to observe the reference to "Tom" Paine, "the atheist," "infidel" and "unbeliever," but if he were alive today, he would be a respectable member of some church whose pastor did not deliver startling sermons. Let all "100 per cent Americans" read his "Age of Reason," "Rights of Man," "Common Sense" and "Crisis." They are excellent in developing the mind of justice. The readers will never again call him "atheist." Perhaps they will even forgive the Post-Dispatch editorial.

"Men, Not Mottoes."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HAVE just read the editorial captioned "Men, Not Mottoes," in a recent issue of the Post-Dispatch, and do not recall a braver, loftier action since the young Crusader from Nazareth scourged the crooks in old Jerusalem and drove out the thieves from the temple. For such a journal as the Post-Dispatch the people of the world should be thankful—at least all those who still cling to the ideals of honesty, justice, sincerity, integrity and fairness in human affairs.

Filipinos Deserve Independence.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHEN I advocate independence for the Filipinos I am performing a solemn and a conscientious duty to the United States, its basic law, and its government, and its people of every station. The sacred scroll of human sacrifice in behalf of human liberty cannot be finished until the rights and hopes of the Filipinos are guaranteed and fully realized in conformity with and under the protection of the Constitution of these United States.

The advocates of the provincial and un-American laws that at present control this alien people's destiny use the same rule of reason that was used to deny to the early American colonists the sacred right to self rule and freedom from the aggression and misrule of British princes and their Tory agents on the American continent. The interests politically, socially, industrially—of the United States will be far better advanced by the application of true American principles to the interests of the Filipinos, or to any people in any continent, island or possession whatever, than by the imposition of laws to our faith repugnant, unjust, unpolitic, and foreign in conception.

The Filipinos are as advanced as the Cubans in education, political science, social science and common sense and always have been. Independence and a protectorate is the logical and consistent and honest American policy to pursue toward them.

Let us set up "Liberty" in the "Dark East" as a beacon to the oppressed of the world.

AN UNFORTUNATE DELAY.

There is an unfortunate delay in the Olive street improvement, one that is working loss to merchants upon the south side of the street and arresting the relief to traffic which the widening of Olive street was designed to afford. The street car tracks have been moved, but the contract of approximately $400,000 for making the pavement upon the south side has been interrupted by suit to test the validity of the tax. Property owners have been paid for the property condemned by increasing the width of the street, but some of them have precipitated a friendly test suit by threatening to contest the paving tax. The contractor cannot proceed because he is deprived of a market for his tax bills. The city cannot step in because if it did so and the courts held the paving tax to be illegal the city would have done the work at its own expense and probably would have to pay the contractor for it as well.

Meanwhile, the south side of Olive street lies in something of a rubbish heap. Piles of debris and paving materials present an almost unbroken litter from Twelfth street to Channing avenue. The loss to merchants whose misfortune it is to do business behind that litter may be imagined. Some of them have had to dig passages through the rubbish before their doors. Nobody knows when the work can proceed. The test case before the State Supreme Court has been referred to one of the Justices, and he has not yet made his report.

The Post-Dispatch urges the city to expedite this matter in every way possible. Would not the Supreme Court Justice who has it under consideration likely be glad to hasten his decision if he understood the emergency and the distress to merchants by the status quo? We are disposed to think he would. It would be a matter of the gravest consequence to business upon the south side of Olive street if the contest in the courts dragged indefinitely. We can of course understand that what has occurred could not very well be foreseen. Nevertheless, to leave the improvement in its present state of paralysis, after having torn up the south side of the street as if a tornado had traversed it, is as nearly intolerable as anything could be. The city would in our opinion be justified in a special request to the Court that the matter be adjudicated with all possible expedition.

Justice to the business houses upon the street, as well as the necessities of traffic, demand as early a decision as is compatible with the merits of the case.

WHEN MR. COOLIDGE GETS HOME.

Mr. Coolidge will be back in Washington tonight after three months in the Black Hills. He will find a renovated and repaired White House, shining with a new coat of paint. The lawn will be trimmed and the leaves raked up. There will be no milk bottles or old newspapers on the doorstep. The President can walk right in, get a bite to eat, find out from his efficient executive clerk, Mr. Forster, if there is any pressing business to be done, and get to work. On his desk will be a row of freshly sharpened pencils in perfect alignment. Ink bottle and pen will be set out just so. Letters to be read, letters to be signed, white and pink memorandum pads—all these will be in their wonted place. The President will return, in fine, to a house and an office in immaculate order.

The political house to which he will return will be different. He will find it all cluttered up with old furniture. The curtains there are frayed and dusty. There are things in the icebox that ought to have been taken out before the family went away. Various packages have been deposited on the front porch.

There is, for one thing, the issue of farm relief. Mr. Coolidge crammed it into a closet before he left, but the pesky thing won't stay put. It tumbles out about his feet whenever anybody opens the door. Several times it has threatened to trip him up. It will be a source of constant annoyance till he gets it laid away neatly on a shelf.

There is, for another thing, the matter of providing relief for the thousands whose assets—and in many cases whose hopes—have been washed into the Gulf of Mexico, and the collateral matter of safeguarding the valley against another such disaster. Has Mr. Coolidge, during his happy trout-fishing days in South Dakota, forgotten the Mississippi flood? He left the problem behind when he went away, but it is not to be so easily disposed of. It will be there when he gets back. The capable reports of Mr. L. C. Speers from the devastated regions, where once prosperous sections are "a wilderness of wrecked farm homes and outbuildings, noxious weeds and vines," make it plain that this is a problem which Mr. Coolidge cannot solve by leaving it alone.

It has been written of Mr. Coolidge that, "unlike most fishermen, he does not get his own bait and seldom does he hook his own line or take the fish off once it is caught; he leaves this to his guide." Well, if that is the philosophy that he intends to carry back to the cleaning out of the political lumber room, there will be plenty of work for his guides.

What is he going to do about Nicaragua? What about Mexico? What will be his attitude toward the admission of Vare and Smith to the Senate? What course will he follow with relation to the pending settlement of the French debt? How is he going to clean up the debris left by the collapse of the naval disarmament conference?

Mr. Coolidge has a real job of housecleaning ahead.

WE ARE ENVIED BY CHICAGO.

It can no longer be doubted by anybody that the Mississippi has come back into its own as a carrier of commerce. A bulletin just issued by the Chicago Association of Commerce to its members completes the demonstration. They are told that Chicago must wake up to its opportunities and become a river city! Hear the advice of the association:

> While the entire Mississippi Valley and Middle Western states will profit by navigation and common carrier operation on the Mississippi River, the cities that will receive the greater benefit will be those located on the waterway. To this end Chicago should bend every effort to complete her terminal facilities and the Illinois waterway, in order to receive her share of the lower transportation cost by use of these important arteries of commerce.

Hug that to your bosom!

THE PRISON REORGANIZATION.

Approximately six months after the Senate's investigation of prison affairs, Gov. Baker, with Dr. Enloe's resignation in his hand, has partially reorganized the prison board. Ashley Harrison, a lawyer of ability and character, though without much experience as an executive, becomes Director of Penal Institutions. John I. Burnett, a Jefferson City manufacturer, whose resignation from the penal board in February, 1926, was thought to have been caused by disagreement with Enloe, is back again as Supervisor of Industries. It is a promising pair of appointments.

These appointments, we are sure, would have been far more satisfactory had they been accompanied by a clean sweep of the Enloe crowd. It is only a half-hearted reorganization which retains in office Leslie Rudolph and Thomas Speed Mosby. The resignation of those men, with the appointment of successors of the Harrison-Burnett caliber, would have met public expectation and might have convinced the people of Missouri that Gov. Baker was resolved to retrieve his blundering as fully as possible.

Complete retrieval is, of course, out of the question. No matter how capably Messrs. Harrison and Burnett strive to put prison affairs on a sound basis they cannot hope to undo the harm of Gov. Baker's original board. For that board, with Enloe as its pooh bah, had spoils politics written all over it. It was not the good of the prison, the efficiency of the public service, that determined Mr. Baker's selection of those appointees. It was, in the case of Enloe, personal friendship and reward for his assistance in making Mr. Baker Governor. But after the charges leveled against Enloe as Secretary of the Board of Health it does seem as if Gov. Baker might have considered himself released from any further obligation on the account of personal friendship. Instead, Enloe was promoted to a place of greater power.

How much better it would have been for Gov. Baker himself and for the State of Missouri if, in the beginning, he had made such appointments as he is making now after the damage is done. How much better it would have been if he had foresworn his primitive desire to engage in spoils politics and had chosen men equipped to tackle so vital a job as the management of the penal institutions!

The moral need not be labored. Future Governors ought to profit from this object lesson. The surest way for a public official to retain public confidence and procure further political advancement is to deliver the goods, to play fair with the public, to realize that "public office is a public trust."

SAY IT WITH VOTES.

Senator Reed of Missouri may have won cheers when he told the farmers out at Osawatomie, Kan., that their economic ills were due to the high tariff. Farmers have been known to cheer that sentiment before and then go to the polls and vote 'er straight for the Republican ticket. They applauded the idea of tariff revision all over the West in 1924—and rolled up a record-breaking majority for the party of Mellon, Coolidge and higher-than-ever protection. Perhaps they have seen the light since then. Perhaps they are "on to" the tariff hoax. But to make the country believe it the farmers will have to say it with votes, not with cheers.

REVOLUTION IN RAPID CITY.

A piece of real Americana is contained in the reception of Mrs. Coolidge by the ladies of the Fortnightly Club of Rapid City. In that little town social values are as fastidiously gauged as they ever were in New York's Four Hundred in the elegant days of Ward McAllister. The Fortnightly Club is composed, it seems, of those members of Rapid City society who could not "make" the Current Events Club, an older and snootier organization.

Imagine, then, the furore when, by a display of Napoleonic generalship, Mrs. Paul Bellamy, president of the Fortnightly Club, succeeded in inducing Mrs. Coolidge to appear there at a tea. The Current Events crowd was utterly flabbergasted at this, the greatest social coup Rapid City had ever witnessed. My dear! Rapid City fairly buzzed. As the great day approached, a most unseemly scramble for invitations took place, and even some of the grandes dames of Current Events most undignifiedly, and in a manner hardly in accord with the best social traditions of Rapid City, took part in it.

As a whole the tea was a great success, though the Fortnightly Club members were so puffed up with pride, and so nervously exalted, that one of them, Mrs. M. W. Pangburn, fell into a dead faint as Mrs. Coolidge entered the room. Later she explained that the prospect of meeting a President's wife was too much for her. Another member, however, rose to the occasion and sang "Indian Love Call" with no more than the quavering that might be expected on so exciting an occasion.

While the President failed utterly to change the opinion of Rapid City folk on the McNary-Haugen bill, Mrs. Coolidge unwittingly, but none the less effectively, revolutionized Rapid City society. Fortnightly, my dear, is now the cat's whiskers among Rapid City clubs.

THE CAMEL'S NOSE.

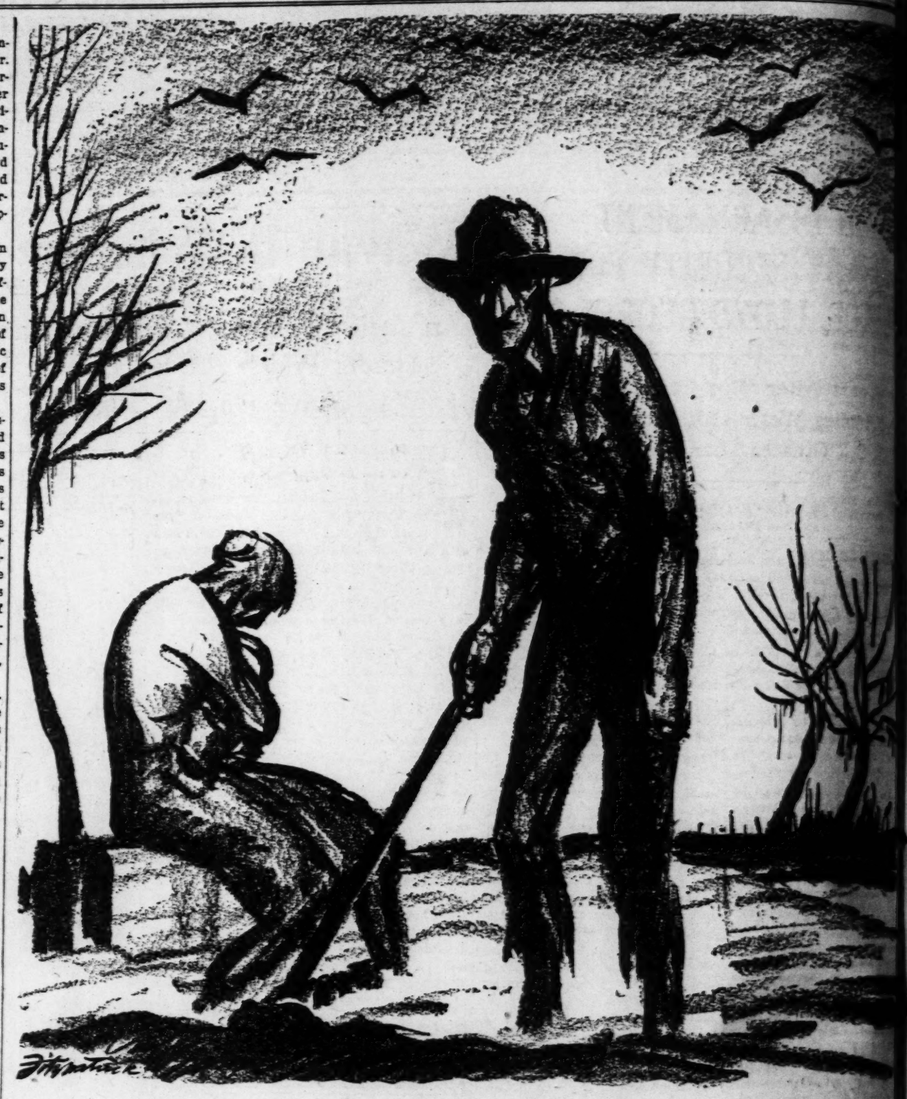
BREWING BETTER GASOLINE.

Oil men in Oklahoma are said to be experimenting on gasoline in the hope of developing a superior airplane fuel. Such experiments, we imagine, are a part of the regular laboratory practice of most of the refiners. Better quality is the Holy Grail of modern industry in all fields. It is the talisman of success.

Still, this summer of extraordinary aerial feats—this soaring summer, so to speak—has likely inspired unusual efforts in everything pertaining to aviation. The men who fly are authoritatively agreed that further advances of consequence in their fascinating art must await progress in equipment: in still more dependable engines, in sturdier craft, possibly in radical departures from the now accepted modes of construction.

A purer, punchier gasoline, therefore, must be included in the logic of such ambition. And Oklahoma may be looked to to find this elixir, for Oklahoma oil, as any veracious Oklahoman will candidly tell you, is the finest oil that flows.

The Rev. Mr. Bogert of New York has taken a full swing at prohibition, and there is no Wayne Wheeler to answer with a return wallop.



FLOOD VICTIMS: "WE DO NOT CHOOSE TO STARVE!"

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

REMEMBERING THE FLOOD.

From the New York World.

MR. HOOVER, returning to the flood areas in the South, is grateful that conditions are not as bad as they might have been, and that is about as much as can be made of the reports of his first day's inspection. The Associated Press tells of "reports of satisfactory conditions prevailing in eight Arkansas counties;" but the only analysis of these reports which in any degree goes into detail tells us that one-half of the flooded zone in Arkansas is coming through with a crop, while a harvest of some sort is still possible in some parts of the other half; but that "in about 20 counties in the worst hit parts of the deluge zone * * * the outlook is as black as it would seem possible to be." The only comment attributed to Mr. Hoover personally is that "the morale of the people is good and they are working hard."

This is Arkansas. Mississippi and Louisiana were still harder hit last May. Of conditions in these states, which Mr. Hoover did not inspect on his first day, a dispatch from Greenville, to The Times, reports:

"Returning today the secretary finds perhaps one-half of the vast area that were under water bankrupt, with no crops worth the name; more than 60,000 people still depending on the Red Cross for food and clothing; many thousands more than that eking out a miserable existence, just living in hand to mouth fashion; something like 50,000 of the poorest of the sufferers victims of the dread pellagra; taxes unpaid, and the financing of the little farmers, who, if they are to continue on the land, must have money, assuming the proportions of a problem of the first magnitude."

One wonders whether conditions would have been as bad as this had Congress been called into special session at the time of the floods to vote adequate funds for the work of rehabilitation before life had been started again all wrong for a half million people.

The decision against a special session has long since been irrevocably made, however, and the only important question is how many months the flooded districts will have to wait for adequate relief. How far from adequate is anything done to date may be gauged from the fact that even the work of repairing the breaks in the levees has been lagging, though it is important to have it done in time to permit some seasoning of the new embankments before the January rise. There are 225 crevasses in the levees of the Mississippi and its southern tributaries. And to date, three months after the high water of last May, not one of them has been closed.

There is nothing in our record of assistance to the victims of a catastrophe now pretty well forgotten (in the north) to make any of us proud.

HUGHES AND HI.

From the Ohio State Journal.

ONE thing that may influence Mr. Hughes to conclude that he's still young enough to run, after all, is that we don't believe it would make any difference this time whether he shook hands with Hiram Johnson or not.

WHEN THE CORN IS ON THE COB.

From the Chicago News.

PERHAPS it is true that the French are the best cooks in the world. They, at least, say scornfully that America has no cuisine. And with prohibition, they add, there is no hope of America's developing one. Are not the finest sauces, they ask, made with wine?

In these mellow days, however, the ghost of Savarin himself is hereby invited to partake of a mess of yellow corn, the Golden Bantam of the gods. It requires no other sauce than the touch of early fall which has come to revive jaded energies and stimulate sagging appetites.

Is there anything produced by all the subtle arts of cookery which can compare with those slender cylinders of gastronomic delight that August brings in such abundance? Yet, incomprehensible as it may seem, the heavenly viand has its enemies. There are unspeakable miscreants—many of them, sad to say, restaurateurs—who, having plunged the virgin ears of corn into boiling water, desert them, so that they remain for hours. Thus they become soggy and tasteless, melancholy deflowered wrecks of their former exquisit selves.

There are also misguided individuals who serve a half ear of corn per person towards the end of a hearty meal when the recipient is in no condition to appreciate even so inadequate a morsel.

Those who know how to enjoy this manna of the fields select corn that is full grown but tender, drop it lovingly into boiling water—in which some cooks place a teaspoonful of sugar to accentuate the native sweetness of the corn—and leave it there for from five to 10 minutes, but not a second longer. Then they serve it—plenty of it and piping hot—as the main dish of the memorable meal. They mix sweet butter, salt and pepper and spread the mixture on the corn. And when they fall to their friends know enough not to watch too critically.

But is this all-American, star-spangled delicacy fattening? Kindly refrain from pressing for an answer to the question until, say, November.

GEORGE DID NOT ADMIRE US.

From the Pathfinder.

DURING the peace negotiations between Great Britain and the United States at the close of the Revolutionary War, King George III wrote as follows to his Minister, Lord Shelburne under date of Nov. 10, 1782: "I cannot conclude without mentioning how sensibly I feel the dismemberment of America from this empire, and that I should be miserable indeed if I did not feel that no blame on that account can be laid at my door, and did I not also know that knavery seems to be so much the striking feature of its inhabitants that it may not in the end be an evil that they will become aliens to this kingdom."

WHAT D'YE MEAN SMOOTHEST?

From the Dayton News.

THE New Republic calls the Russian Communist party "the smoothest political machine in the world." Is that meant for a reflection upon our National Chairman Butler or even upon Machinist Vare of Philadelphia? The average proud American would have said that the smoothest political machine in the world was Tammany Hall or Mr. Mellon's Pennsylvania organization. And is Russia beating even these?

C. C. VALUES BUSCH ROAD AT $1,330,000

Manufacturers' Line Involved in Fight Against Federal Commission's Methods.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today placed a final valuation of $1,330,000 as of June 30, 1917, on the Manufacturers' Railway Co. of St. Louis, owned by the Busch family.

This company, which operates terminal and switching facilities in St. Louis, is involved, together with the St. Louis & O'Fallon, also owned by the Busch interests, in proceedings contesting the Commission's method of determining value for recapture of excess earnings.

The Manufacturers' Railway had been tentatively valued at $1,-188,000.

A French journal, the other day, alluded to the undoubted sense of uneasiness that prevailed throughout Europe. A summary review of the position justifies anxiety, but it also vindicates those who urge immediate disarmament upon nations great and small. As long as nations look to their huge armies to insure security and fair play, their disputes, such as I have enumerated, must inevitably lead to future wars.

When President Coolidge issued his invitation to a conference on naval disarmament at Geneva, friends of peace throughout the world looked confidently to an intrepid lead given by America and Britain. must be answered by the occupant.

The task of supervising the remaking of the White House has been in the hands of army officers in the Engineer Corps who have charge of the buildings and grounds in Washington. The man at the head was Col. U. S. Grant III, whose grandfather made some minor changes in the White House when he occupied it as President. The actual work was done by a Chicago construction firm which received the contract on the lowest bid.

The Changes o. Years.

As the present work has had to do with the top of the house, that done in Roosevelt's administration had to do only with the lower part. Its purpose was chiefly in the reception of the public on State occasions. People coming to the White House receptions previous to 1902 had entered by the front door. The number of those attending each of the formal receptions in the winter had grown to thousands. The detail of their reception, of the checking of their wraps, of their filing up to the quarters on the first floor where they were received, was quite complicated. Of old, it was no uncommon thing for a line of people waiting to be received to extend half a block from the President's front door or for the line to stand for hours in snow and rain. To relieve this distressing situation a wing of the White House was flung out to the right until it encountered a side street, where a reception entrance was provided. This entire wing and the corridor leading to it was given over to handling the crowds that come to receptions. Now the guests can come into the White House immediately upon arrival. They check their wraps as they form in line down the corridor. All are comparatively comfortable while waiting and they pass into the reception dryshod and unmuffled.

What the Public Sees.

To match the right wing, another was flung out to the left with a low structure abutting on another side street. This became the President's executive offices. Before it was built the President's business quarters were in the body of the White House. These two wings greatly relieved the pressure on the private residence of the chief executive.

The ground floor is now largely given over to the public, and tourists stream through it throughout the year. Its walls are hung with portraits of former Presidents and their wives. Cases are filled with White House china of other regimes. It is historic and reminiscent of the past.

At the time of this renovation certain alterations were made on the second floor. The state dining room was enlarged to seat 100 guests in comfort and the ceilings were redecorated.

The incidental improvements of a generation ago, progressing from the bottom up, have their parallel this year in the work begun at the roof, but reaching far down in the old mansion. The walls and the hangings of the green room and the red room, lesser reception rooms, in comparison with the stately east room, were found to be faded and tending toward the shabby. These two rooms have been redecorated with new damask. The former color scheme has been adhered to. The green room is still green and the red room red. From the street little change can be noted except that the White House is whiter than usual. The whole structure was repainted this year on account of the dirt created by the reconstruction.

JUST A MINUTE

(Copyright 1927.)

THE OLD MUD TURTLE.

Except that I have to work for him
I like the old cuss.
Maybe when the day's grind is over
And he can shed his dignity
And throw away the rank cigar he chews
He discards his gruffness
And becomes human.
He has a car
And I suspect that some evenings
He takes his folks riding.
But this is mere conjecture
And probably wouldn't stand up
In court.

We expect any day to see a lollypop wrapper inscribed, "By appointment to His Majesty, the King of Rumania."

SEVEN AGES OF THE BETTOR.

First, the NOVICE, spending his first day at the track; eager to absorb Life and Color but too slick to bet on the Favorites; lamping the wrens and the finches and getting jostled in the crowd; talking glibly about how a Friend of His says somebody ever beat the races—you might beat a race but can't beat the races—

Then the GRINNER, laughing hysterically over his lucky show ticket; fingering a mittful of crackling greenbacks and making another bee line for the mutuel window.

Third, the FORM STUDENT, poring over past performances in his every idle minute; wise to the meaning of symbols; privy to all the superior mudders and hep to the peculiarities of every goat at the track.

Fourth, the CHESTY GUY; he plays the one that looks best on paper; that's the way to beat the races; no shooting at the moon for this guy; he is smart. He's ahead $15.80 and has lost only two weeks from work. Then a flock of pigs sail under the wire at juicy prices and a few lucky yokels, who never saw a form sheet, drag down heavy dough. He chucks the form sheet and becomes

The FRIEND OF TRAINERS; sits up late at night drinking beer in Collinsville with stable boys and flunkies—and pays for it; gets his info straight from the boys who fill the feed boxes, and plays heavily on "sleepers."

The sixth age shifts. He is the GROWLER now, his shirt three days old and his frame undernourished on thin soup. Full of strange oaths and bearded like a tramp. Unless this last baby goes over, he will have to beg his job back. It goes over, but the judges give the decision to the wrong horse. It always happens that way. Never give a guy a break. Take his money and turn him out. No, officer, he was just standing around waiting for a friend. Good heavens, does he LOOK like a pickpocket? All right, but he'll take his sweet time about it. This ain't Russia.

Last scene of all, the FORLORN VICTIM. Should ought to have knowed better. There's the percentage. You can't beat that. And then what the management does on that "take out" ain't nobody's business. A fellow really ought to have more sense. It's a losing game. All right, all right. What will the folks say? And so he bums a ride back to the city, sans respectability, sans carfare, sans food, but not sans brain, for the very obvious reason that he never had any. "Through for life!"

But never you mind, Bruce Head, he will be back for the Spring meeting.

DETECTIVES FIRED ON BY OTHER POLICEMEN

Officer and Patrolman in One Auto Chase Plainclothes Men in Another.

Detectives Fred Camp and Henry Wiese of the Angelica District were fired on by two other policemen who mistook them for fleeing criminals early yesterday as one police automobile chased the other through the streets of North St. Louis.

The officers who did the shooting were Lieut. Jeremiah Hickey and Patrolman Thomas Flavin of the Angelica District. The chase extended from 4300 North Broadway to the 6000 block with one brief detour, and four shots were fired. One struck the leading police machine but no one was injured.

Camp and Wiese explained that they were chasing two men in an automobile. The fugitives got away and the detectives slowed down. Hickey's machine then overhauled them.

Camp and Wiese said they did not know they were being shot at nor did they hear the siren on the pursuing police machine.

RALLY AT SEDALIA TO PLAN STATE DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN

Program for Political Activities Will Be Discussed by Committee Oct. 11.

Preliminary plans for Democratic political activities in Missouri next year will be formulated at a meeting of the Democratic State Committee at Sedalia the night of Oct. 11, the eve of a rally and barbecue, which, it is expected, will attract party workers from many counties.

The rally is expected to be the beginning of the Democratic campaign, although the State organization as such will take no part in the primary campaign other than to get as many Democrats to the polls on primary day as is possible.

The Democratic National Committee will be asked to send a speaker of national prominence. Senators Reed and Hawes of Missouri will speak, and invitations to speak will be extended to Mrs. Henry N. Ess of Kansas City and Mrs. Champ Clark of Bowling Green.

Local arrangements for the meeting will be in charge of Harvey Terry, a member of the State Committee from the Seventh District.

STATUE REMOVAL STARTS ROW

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—Indignation has been caused in Stuttgart by the news that the Italian authorities in South Tyrol removed the Statue of Karl von Etzel, the famous Wurtemberger who built the railway across the Brenner Pass.

This railway the main road connecting the Tyrol with Italy, was opened in 1867 and was then regarded as a triumph of engineering. A statue of the builder was erected on the highest point of the pass. Since the World War this has been Italian territory. Now Premier Mussolini, it is announced, intends to replace the "foreign" statue by a monument commemorating the electrification of the railway, which was carried out later under Italian auspices.

100 a Day Use Channel Planes.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—More than 100 passengers a day have been crossing the English Channel in airplane this summer. The traffic is one-third heavier than last year, although the number of tourists in France is probably 30 per cent less than in 1926. About one-half of the air travelers are Americans, most of them tourists on their first air voyage. Traffic is not yet heavy enough, however, to permit the lines to run without Government subsidies.

TOWN TAXES SHINGLED HAIR

German Women in One Municipality Must Pay for Privilege.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—"If women want to wear shingled hair, they shall be made to pay for it," is the decision of the municipality of Wartenburg in East Prussia.

A tax of 12 marks ($3) a year has been imposed on every shingled poll. Girls up to 15 years old are exempt, but married women who have sacrificed their locks have to pay double tax. Other townships are preparing to follow suit in tapping this new source of revenue. At Schoneau, the tax is 20 marks a year up to 20 years of age, and 30 after.

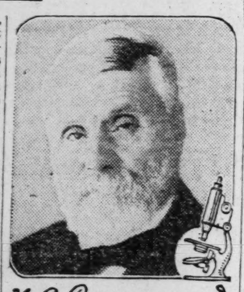
Doctor Found Women and Children Sick More Often than Men



W. B. Caldwell, M.D. AT AGE 83

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of Dr. Caldwell's 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in Dr. Caldwell's private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are being used a year.

Its great success is based on merit, on repeated buying, on one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have gotten many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us that it helped them when everything else failed.

While women, children and elderly people are especially benefited by Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, it is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases. It is mild and gentle in its action and does not cause griping and strain. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby. Children like it and take it willingly.

Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Keep a bottle in your home—where many live someone is sure to need it quickly.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we wil send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

PLAN MEETING TO AID DISABLED CHILDREN

St. Louis Society Formed in February to Seek Means of Prevention.

The St. Louis Society for Crippled Children, organized shortly after the State society was formed last February, is planning a meeting early in October for discussion of medical, educational and financial problems affecting the welfare of cripples. The date has not been set.

The meeting will add momentum to the recent movement to help Missouri's crippled children, estimated to number at least 10,000. It is estimated that in St. Louis there are more than 2000 crippled children in need of assistance to become useful members of society.

The Missouri Society for Crippled Children, headed by H. C. Martin of St. Louis, has set to work to arouse general interest in the crippled child. It is awaiting the report of a special commission appointed by the last Legislature to survey the crippled child problem in Missouri. The report will be submitted to the next Legislature.

Cites Conditions Abroad.

"With sufficient legislation and adequate public support, the Missouri Society for Crippled Children believes that the State can prevent the crippling of many of its children," says a statement of the local society. "There are places in England where one never sees an adult cripple on the streets today other than those who were injured in the World War.

"In those communities 25 years of constant education, hospitalization and follow-up have been carefully ingrained into the minds of the general public. With our larger financial resources and with plenty of money to build monuments, stadiums and movie theaters, surely we can spend something upon the crippled child, so that he may become an independent and self-supporting citizen when he is of age."

The society defines cripples as "persons whose activity is, or may become, so restricted by disease, accident of congenital deformity" and "a crippled child is one whose activity is, or may become, so far restricted by loss, defect or deformity of bones or muscles as to reduce his normal capacity for education or self-support."

Law Passed in 1919.

"It is a well known fact," the society says, "that this particular group of children has been neglected, and frightfully so. A recent Federal census showed a ratio of one deaf person and one blind person per 1000 of the population. Aside from the educational requirements, the physical rehabilitation of the crippled child is much more complicated and serious than that of the blind or the deaf. Yet in spite of that fact, associations for the blind, and public and private institutions for the blind and the deaf, have been established all over this part of the country since the Civil War.

"In Missouri special legislation for the blind and the deaf was enacted as early as 1851. In contrast to this, the crippled child had to wait until 1919 to receive any definite recognition from State authorities, and even that law for the establishment of public school classes has not been put into general use.

Activity In 24 States.

"A survey made by Chicago revealed that 83 per cent of the cripples under 21 years of age are crippled before they reached the ago of six, that is, during the preschool age. To catch the cripple early is of prime importance. Prevention should be stressed in the care of cripples.

The English, who have made a careful study of the whole problem, say that 90 per cent of their cripples could have been prevented if the information they now have could have been put into effect."

Edgar F. Allen of Elyria, O., the "Daddy" Allen of the movement for crippled children in this country, was in St. Louis last winter for the organization of the local society and to spur the movement on in the State. Under his leadership, the International Society for Crippled Children was formed in 1919-1920. It now embraces 24 states. The Shriners also have been active in behalf of crippled children.

PLANS FOR NEW ENGLISH COINS

Will Be First Change Since 1816, Except at Death of Sovereign.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Col. R. Johnson, Deputy Master of the Royal Mint, is now considering designs for new shillings, sixpenses, florins and threepenny bits. The new designs will be "more in keeping with modern taste and definitely more artistic."

The present silver coins will retain the same faces, with the King's head, but the reverse will be an armorial design. Five-shilling pieces or crowns, known as "cartwheels," will be struck for the benefit of colectors. The coinage change is the first that has been made since 1816, except for changes at the death of a sovereign. In 1816 a general coinage took place. The committe responsible for the change has been considering designs for two years, submitted from sculptors throughout the world. Before being put into circulation, the coinage must be sanctioned by the Cabinet and given currency by royal proclamation.

EAST ST. LOUIS ADVISED TO JOIN IN ANTI-SMOKE CAMPAIGN

Abatement League Tries to Enlist the Interest of City Across the River.

An appeal to the heads of East St. Louis industries to co-operate with the city administration and the Citizens' Smoke Abatement League of St. Louis in elimination of the smoke nuisance is to be made this week by Mayor Frank Doyle of East St. Louis. Following a conference with William G. Christy and Osborne Monnett of the St. Louis organization, at which it was pointed out that East Side industries contribute to the St. Louis smoke pall, Mayor Doyle determined to send out personal letters to the concerns within his jurisdiction.

The Citizens' Smoke Abatement League has determined by a survey that the East Side industrial plants burn almost as much coal annually as those of St. Louis.

COMMUNIST NOT ABUSIVE WORD

French Court Rules It No Offense to Apply That Name to a Man.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—"Communist," used as a term of opprobrium, has no sting in the eyes of French courts. A Carcassone policeman arrested two men who could think of nothing worse to say to him. He said he had read Minister of the Interior Sararut's speech, saying, "Communism, that is our enemy," and naturally thought a Cabinet Minister ought to know what he was talking about. In court the men's attorney said the President of the republic and all the Ministers received a communist Ambassador from Moscow and that many Deputies, officials and public school teachers were communists.

"Is, then, a policeman more particular than these?" the lawyer asked.

Don't Squeeze Blackheads —Dissolve Them

Squeezing out blackheads makes large, ugly pores. The safe and sane way to get rid of these blemishes is to dissolve them. Get two ounces of Calonite powder from your drug store, sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth, rub over the blackheads, and every one, big or little, will disappear at once.

Face Peeler Reveals Youthful Beauty

To free your skin of freckles, tan, sunburn and other summer ailments it is always best to completely peel off the entire surface. This is quickly accomplished by the use of ordinary mercolized wax, which can be had at any drug store. Use at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Immediately the offending skin begins to peel off in fine powder-like particles. Soon the entire outer layer is absorbed, without harm or inconvenience. The underneath skin, resents a spotless clearness, obtainable in no other way. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines, use this face lotion: 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 1 half pint witch hazel.

The stronger your nerves are, the stronger you are in muscular power, vitality and brain power. In your NERVES lies the source of all your POWER. To be dull-nerved means to be dull brained and bodied—insensible to the higher things in life—Love, Ambition, Courage and Personality.

If you have weakened your nerves through worry, mental strains or perhaps neglected them through ignorance, you can strengthen them 100 per cent in a short time by applying the advice contained in the excellent book, "Nerve Force." It contains 64 pages and is illustrated. The cost is only 25 cents (coin or stamps).

This book will open to you a new path to a higher and happier life and health. It teaches how to control and calm the nerves and how to make your nerves insinuate to strain.

Paul von Boeckmann, the author of this book, is a national authority on "NERVE CULTURE," deep breathing, psychology and kindred subjects. What Readers of "Nerve Force" Say

"I have gained 12 pounds since reading your book, and I feel so energetic. I had about given up hope of ever finding the cause of my low weight."

A physician says: "Your book is the most sensible and valuable work I have ever read on the prevention of neurasthenia. I am recommending your book to my patients."

"Reading your book has stopped the dreadful feeling of FEAR which gripped my stomach and digestion."

"Your book did more for me for relaxation than two courses in dieting."

DRAMATIC SITUATION FACES AUTO INDUSTRY

Its Consequence Expected to Be Felt Throughout the World.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 10.—With resumption of production by one of the leading manufacturers soon, the curtain will rise on a situation of dramatic intensity in the automotive industry, one in which supremacy and billions are at stake and whose consequences will be felt the world over, according to B. H. Cram, president of Cram's Automotive Reports.

The industry is sharply divided into three groups:

The leading total volume producer.

The leading competitor, making many lines.

All remaining manufacturers competing with one or the other or both named above.

The mainstay of the first is a remarkable personality, whose merchandising policy it has been to build the lowest priced vehicle it was possible to turn out and give satisfactory service.

The outstanding characteristic of the leading competitor making many lines covering a wide price range is a far seeing vision resulting from the agreement of many minds, ability to gauge public demand and organization genius from a merchandising standpoint.

In the third group, which includes many competitors of both, are a number of makers, none so strong in financial resources as the first two, but still powerful factors to reckon with because of the public good will many of them enjoy and the merchandising and engineering skill at their command.

To get a clearer picture of the relative positions of the conflicting elements it is necessary to go over past history.

At the end of 1926, the leading volume producer showed a registration of 9,337,300 cars and 1,743,300 trucks.

All others had registered 9,870,300 cars and 1,095,600 trucks.

From 1914 to 1926, inclusive, the registration curve of the leading volume producer was only slightly higher that of all other makes for the latter part of 1916 and early 1917, when it rose above the others combined. But since 1923 the registration curve of the leading producer has fallen off slightly.

This year will mark a decided downward trend for the first time.

Nearly 40 per cent of the leading volume producer's dealers are in towns of les sthan 1000 population and 66 per cent are in towns of less than 2000 population.

The leading competitor making many lines, and other manufacturers, have gone after the larger centers of population, but in the last three years the leading competitor has spread into thousands of small towns and has not yet ceased efforts along this line.

From 1919 to 1921, inclusive, production of the leading volume producer showed a steady and definite upward trend. Since 1921 it has declined and this year will show the biggest drop with a resulting gain by all other makes combined.

For seven years in succession, up to 1927, the leading volume producer showed a production of well over a million vehicles yearly, something that no other single make has ever done. Often it was nearer 2,000,000 annually.

But this year the car of the leading competitor which comes into direct competition with that of the leading producer may for the first time reach the million mark.

In the background, but of increasing importance, is a fact of which little note has been taken recently. Present plant capacity is now approximately twice the yearly production of cars which manufacturers are able to market.

Car production over the past four years has averaged about 3,400,000 units. Car and truck capacity is now 7,300,000 units annually.

Production is averaging under 60 per cent of real capacity for the industry, but some manufacturers are running considerably higher than this and they are leading the field today.

Million New York Motorists Aid in Save-a-Life Campaign

Half of Owners of State Voluntarily Submit Cars for Examination in Response Governor's Appeal.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—More than a million owners of motor vehicles voluntarily submitted their cars for examination in the Save-a-Life Campaign conducted from July 18 to Aug. 6 by the Bureau of Motor Vehicles here, according to Commissioner Charles A. Harnett.

The number examined is virtually half of all the cars registered in the State. The result of the campaign is considered very satisfactory from the viewpoint of Commissioner Harnett, especially as participation in it was entirely voluntary and absolutely no effort was made to influence or compel examination. The co-operation of the motorists was in response to a proclamation issued by Gov. Alfred E. Smith at the request of the Commissioner and the spirit of the motorists who complied with the Governor's request is warmly commended by Commissioner Harnett, who sees in the success of the campaign additional evidence that a considerable percentage of the motoring public can be depended upon to aid any move for safe operation on the public streets and highways.

Through the courtesy of dealers and the owners of garages and service stations the campaign was conducted without expense to the car owners. This generous attitude on the part of the dealers and garage and service station owners was ascertained by Commissioner Harnett before the campaign was launched.

The campaign disclosed that 39 per cent of the cars examined were defective in one or another respect. A total of 525,670 defects were found in 394,670 cars. Twenty-nine per cent of these cars required brake adjustment and on 8 per cent the brakes had to be relined. That such a serious situation existed very few motorists realized and many car owners frankly admitted that they had no idea the brakes on their cars were in such condition. In several instances brake equipment was rectified just in time to avoid inevitable collisions.

Forty-five per cent of the cars found defective were discovered to have headlights in need of readjustment or replacement. In 5 per cent of the cars the lights had to be entirely replaced.

Six per cent of the drivers of defective cars had no way of sounding warnings to other drivers or pedestrians, five per cent of the horns being in need of adjustment and 1 per cent requiring new horns outright. Ten per cent of the cars had faulty steering equipment, 8 per cent needed adjustment and 2 per cent replacement. One per cent of the defective equipment was found in truck mirrors, which were out of focus and 1 per cent which had to be replaced.

The campaign demonstrated the value of the periodical examination of all motor vehicles.

LINCOLN TOMB SEEN ON TRIP TO SPRINGFIELD

Interesting Side Trip From This Point Is to Old Salem State Park.

A week-end pilgrimage to the tomb of Abraham Lincoln and to the memorial built to house his major personal effects, all at Springfield, Ill., 90 miles north of St. Louis on Illinois Highway No. 4—the St. Louis-Chicago route, via Springfield—is worthy the attention of motorists from a historic as well as scenic standpoint.

An additional trip of 29 miles, made out of Springfield, and which should prove of interest, is the trek to Old Salem State Park, at Petersburg, Ill. At Springfield is also located the capitol of Illinois, and the administration buildings are open to public scrutiny.

Only Three-Hour Drive.

This trip should preferably be made on a Saturday, which will allow for the passing of Sunday morning at Old Salem State Park, and Lincoln tomb and memorial and the capitol building can be visited Sunday afternoon. However, it is only a three-hour drive to Springfield, and if the motorist is of a mind to, he can crowd the whole trip into one day.

The best way to get out of St. Louis is via McKinley Bridge. Illinois Highway No. 4 is picked up at the east approach and followed through Venice, Madison, Granite City to Mitchell. Here, at the junction of No. 3—the East St. Louis-Jacksonville route, via Alton—No. 4 branches to the left. Do not turn right across the railway tracks, for this is No. 3 leading to Alton.

Beyond Edwardsville No. 4 passes through Hamel, Staunton, Gillespie, Carlinville, Nilwood, Girard, Virden, Auburn to Springfield. The entire distance of 90 miles is concrete.

Visit Capitol Building.

The Capitol Building at Springfield is in the center of the town and easily accessible from all points. To reach Lincoln tomb and memorial, Sixth street is followed from the downtown district to a mile and a half beyond the city limits.

The trip can end here or the trek to Petersburg can be made. Old Salem State Park is several miles from the town over a maintained county road. It is located on the bluffs of the Illinois River. There are about 40 acres, part of which is virtually virgin forest. In the park is located the little log cabin in which Lincoln was born and reared, and on a bluff overlooking the Illinois River is a recently erected stone building used as a museum to house relics of early Illinois days.

How to Reach It.

To reach Petersburg, follow No. 4 north out of Springfield for seven miles. Here is the junction of Nos. 4 and 24. Follow 24 north for 15 miles to the junction of Nos. 24 and 43. The latter road is paved and runs for five miles to Petersburg. No. 24 and No. 4, north out of Springfield are also paved.

SCHOOL TUNNELS SAVE LIVES IN LOS ANGELES

Thirty-Three of Them Already in Service for Protection of Children From Cars.

Los Angeles had 33 school street tunnels ready for operation when the city's schools reopened, thus insuring the safety of children from automobiles and trucks at that many dangerous crossings.

These school tunnels were authorized in 1925, when a bond issue of $350,000 was voted as a result of a survey by the city traffic commission.

The average cost of a tunnel has been $7540. Forty of the tunnels have been built or authorized, and it is likely that exhaustion of the special bond issue will be followed by another appropriation for building tunnels at a number of other crossings.

Already the tunnels are credited with having saved the lives of many children. They are commended by motorists who have been relieved from apprehension at that many danger points.

Breaks Closed-Car 2000-Mile Record

Then during night skidded in rain storm, turned over several times, received body repairs only

Then Finishes 15,000 Miles at 62.709 M. P. H.

Drawing made from actual photograph

Here is proof of stamina! After seven hours for photographs and body repairs, this sedan went back into the endurance test, driven by the same driver, and finished the remainder of the 15,000 miles at an average speed of over 67 miles an hour for the net running time for the entire distance.

For more than 30 hours, averaging better than 65 miles an hour, this strictly stock Auburn Sedan had been whirling around the Atlantic City Speedway day and night.

Then came a terrific rainstorm. Wet track. At 70 miles per hour the driver dozed, the car skidded and turned over. It slid 50 feet on its top, righted itself, and crashed into rail. Two doors were torn off. Three fenders, radiator and windshield damaged.

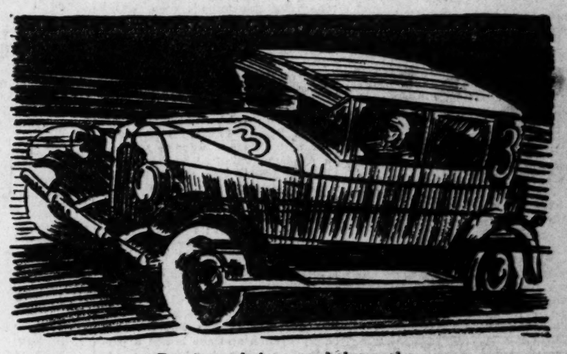
A photographer was telephoned for to drive over from Philadelphia to take a flashlight. Hours later a mechanic who had faith in Auburn's sturdy construction, examined the car and pronounced it mechanically unimpaired.

Then the radiator and body repairs were made. Seven hours had been lost. But the Sedan went back into the test with the same driver. It caught up with the other two Auburn stock cars and finished the unprecedented distance of 15,000 miles.

After the accident, the car was declared non-stock, as it was no longer complete—exactly as sold, but its time continued to be officially recorded by the A. A. A. The longest, hardest and fastest official test ever given a closed car.

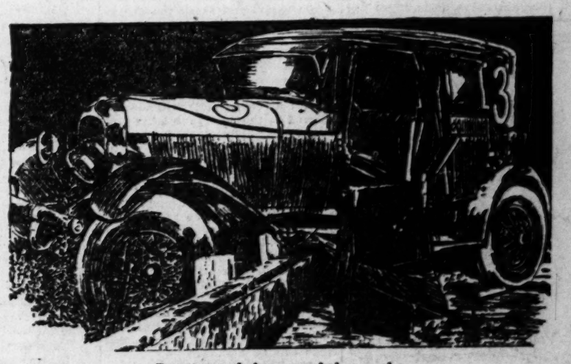
Unheard of as this performance is, it was only an incident in the 42,000 miles of official stock car test Auburn conducted, breaking all records for completely equipped stock cars from 5 to 5000 miles, and establishing new stock car records from 5000 to 15,000 miles.

The purpose of this extreme and hitherto unattempted stock car test, was to demonstrate by three times greater proof the supreme leadership of Auburn cars in speed, endurance, durability and efficiency. Your Auburn dealer has exact duplicates of the Auburn cars that made these phenomenal records.



Drawing made from actual photograph

The Auburn Straight Eight Sedan, one of the three fully equipped strictly stock cars in the Atlantic City Speedway endurance test. Here it is shown traveling better than 70 miles an hour after breaking closed-car 2,000 mile record at 65.583 miles per hour.



Drawing made from actual photograph

About the middle of the second night of this continuous run, when the track was wet as a result of a rain storm, the driver dozed. As a result, the car going at high speed skidded. It hit the guard rail and turned over. The sturdy construction of Auburn resisted this smash so well that only body damages resulted. The driver was unhurt.

COAST-TO-COAST RECORD BROKEN BY STUDEBAKER

Ab Jenkins Drives Commander Sedan From New York to San Francisco in 77 Hours.

A Studebaker Commander sedan, driven by Ab Jenkins, has established a new ocean-to-ocean road record by traveling from coast to coast in 77 hours and 40 minutes, total elapsed time, Studebaker Corp. reports. In making his record, Jenkins cut two hours and 15 minutes from the best previous time from tide water to tide water, made by an open car driven by L. B. Miller.

"Jenkins is a Salt Lake City building contractor, and was the first to beat the fastest transcontinental trains from New York to San Francisco by driving his Studebaker Sheriff across the continent in 86 hours and 20 minutes last June. Since that time, other drivers have lowered his time to 83 hours and 12 minutes and then to 79 hours, 55 minutes.

"So Jenkins, who had traded his Sheriff for a Commander sedan, started for New York City with more than 32,000 miles on his speedometer to try to lower, in an enclosed car, transcontinental records which had previously been set by open cars.

"At 8 o'clock, Eastern Standard time, August 30, he was checked out of New York City at the Tottenville Ferry by P. S. O'Neill, district commercial agent of the Western Union Telegraph Co.; A. H. Means, American Automobile Association, and Col. James Justice, commanding officer of Miller Field, Staten Island.

"Shortly after entering New Jersey, a heavy fog, which hung over the road, made speed possible for only short intervals. This fog continued to cut down Jenkins' time as far West as the Ohio State boundary, where it dissolved with daylight. Blocked railroad crossings and long detours stole more precious minutes and when Jenkins arrived at Logansport, Ind., he was two hours behind his schedule.

From Logansport west, more time was lost through tire trouble and by the time the Commander pulled up in Cheyenne, Wyo., it was more than three hours behind its schedule. From Cheyenne to Reno, Nev., however, Jenkins managed to regain some of his lost time.

The time called for between Reno and San Francisco Bay on Jenkins' schedule was 8 hours. By maintaining a high average speed —reaching 85 miles an hour in some of the open stretches—Jenkins lowered that time, however, and was checked by Western Union officials at the Carquinez bridge on San Francisco Bay at 10:40 p. m., Pacific time, Friday.

NEW ST. LOUIS-CANADA MOTOR ROUTE LOGGED

Camping, Fishing Afforded at Many Points Along New Ferguson Highway.

A new motor route from St. Louis to Canada, via Detroit, Mich., and Cochrane, Canada, is now available with the recent completion of the new Ferguson highway from North Bay to Cochrane.

The touring department of the Detroit Automobile Club recently logged this road—the first time this has officially been done, the club claims—and their log shows a vastly improved road into the Canadian interior, offering hunting, fishing and camping along its entire route.

Route to Detroit.

St. Louisans will find the best motor route to Detroit to be via concrete U. S. 40 from St. Louis through East St. Louis, Effingham, Illinois, Terre Haute, Indiana, to Dayton, O., thence north on concrete U. S. 25 to Detroit. The total distance via this route is 566 miles.

The Automobile Club of Detroit has logged the route beyond Detroit to Toronto via Windsor, London and Hamilton, Canada, which is a very fine paved road; Toronto to Severn Bridge, the end of Provincial Road, practically all paved; Severn Bridge to North Bay via the Muskoka Lake region, which includes alternating stretches of good and only fair gravel road with many hills and dangerous curves. Owing to the narrowness of this road motorists should use extreme caution.

Following is a more complete report of the road beyond North Bay: North Bay to Timagami 65 miles. All motorists are warned to have a full supply of gasoline before leaving North Bay as there is no gasoline available between these two points. This is a new gravel and stone road, slightly rough in places owing to its newness but will improve with proper maintenance. There are no interesting roads between North Bay and Timagami.

A short distance out of North Bay the motorist is halted by Forest Rangers of the Ontario Forestry branch and are issued a permit after registering by name, address and point of destination and receiving instructions in the prevention of forest fires.

Uninhabited Region.

The road then continues north through the Timagami Forest Reserve, a heavily wooded section with numerous lakes. This section is not inhabited but the Forestry Department has established numerous camping places at the most scenic points and along the shores of lakes. These camp grounds are posted and usually contain firewood cut by Rangers, tables and benches, and a cement oven. Good water is available in the lakes and springs.

With a few exceptions fishing is allowed in the numerous lakes and rivers.

The forest contains much virgin timber of white and red pine, spruce, tamarac, birch and poplar. There is no evidence of burnt out or cut over timber through this section. Although the road winds and curves through this section which is hilly, no sharp curves or severe grades are encountered.

Timagami is a small settlement on the T. & N. O. Railway located on the northeast arm of Lake Timagami. The most important building here is Ronnoco Hotel of 40 rooms where fair accommodations can be had.

Lake Timigami, with its densely wooded and rocky shores and its 1600 islands ranging in size from ones only large enough to pitch a tent too those a mile in width and breadth, is very beautiful.

A small steam ferry leaves Timagami wharf at 10:00 o'clock every morning, stopping at many of the islands and returns at 6:00 o'clock each night. There are numerous resorts on these islands where good accommodations can be had.

Timagami to Swastika and the Kirkland Lake Gold Mine District via Latchford, Cobalt, Haileybury, New Liskeard, Thornloo, Englehart and Charlton is 168 miles. Alternating stretches of wide and narrow good and only fair gravel and stone road are encountered on this section.

Through Mining Country.

After leaving Timagami the new road continues through a heavily wooded section to the Northern Reserve Boundary thence through burnt and cut over timber country to Latchford, a lumber town, and on to Cobalt, a silver mine town, and the largest in population north of North Bay. The silver deposits of Middle Western States, to Charlton, then proceeds north through a burnt over, rather desolate country, to within a few miles of Swastika where wooded country is again entered. Just before entering Swastika the Ferguson Highway intersects a road running northeast four miles to the world famous Kirkland Lake Gold mining region.

Continuing northwest from Swastika the Ferguson Highway passes through wooded and farming country and terminates at Cochrane, the junction point of the T. & N. O. Railway and the Canadian National Railway. Side trips can be made to the famous Porcupine Mining District and Timmins.

Total mileage from Detroit to Cochrane via London, Hamilton, Toronto and North Bay is 760 miles. This road is being properly signed by the Ontario Motor League.

Are Accidents Inevitable?

According to William J. Cox, of the Sheffield Scientific School, at Yale University, the average driver of a private passenger automobile in New York City will probably injure , or possibly kill, someone with his automobile about once in six years.

CHRYSLER WINS POLAND AUTO CLUB RACE TROPHY

Among the trophies Chrysler cars have won in Europe is one recently acquired in Poland, says a factory statement.

"The trophy, represents a bison, and for 15 years, the Automobile Club of Poland has offered this trophy to any team of three cars which could finish its six-day reliability run without incurring penalties, but until this year none of the competing automobiles have been able to comply with the difficult conditions, so it remained for three Chrysler "70's" of the price, in a competition with well-known European and American makes.

THE New Cadillac which is now being shown at the Cadillac-La Salle Style Salon, is the highest expression in motor car design and construction of an organization possessing artistic genius, engineering talent and the experience accumulated in 25 years of fine car manufacture.

This new Cadillac reveals outstanding style, striking beauty and remarkable performance, never before approached.

It is a more beautiful and luxurious car, because rare creative and designing ability have lavishly contributed to its building.

It is superior in performance, because Cadillac has developed and refined through fourteen years of practical use the kind of an engine which experience has proven best suited for fine motor cars—the 90-degree, V-type, eight-cylinder—and has designed a chassis adapted to widest usefulness.

And it is a most completely satisfying car, because the splendid beauty and mechanical excellence of this New Cadillac are enriched by Fisher Custom creations, which are exclusively Cadillac.

STUTZ STOCK CARS FINISH 1, 2, 3 IN 150-MILE CONTEST

Winning Stutz Averages 96.30 Miles Per Hour — Studebaker and Dodge Also Win Races.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Stutz "Black Hawk" speedsters won first, second and third places in the 150-mile stock car race on the Atlantic City speedway Labor day.

Two stock Studebaker Commander roadsters finished first and second in the 75-mile race for stripped stock cars listing under $2000. Ralph Hepburn drove the Studebaker that finished in first place, making the 75 miles in 52 minutes 21.40 seconds and averaging 85.94 miles per hour. Eddie Hearn drove the other Studebaker, averaging 84.53 m. p. h.

A Dodge four finished first in the 25-mile race for strippped stock cars, making the distance in 22 minutes 43.80 seconds and averaging 67.35 miles per hour.

It was a big day for Stutz, as a Stutz "special" won the free-for-all Pike's Peak climb and a Stutz stock Weymann body sedan won the stock car climb up Pike's Peak. Also, "Tom" Rooney, who bought his Stutz in first in the Atlantic City race, drove to an average of 96.30 miles per hour for the entire distance, and L. L. Corum and Gil Anderson, who drove Stutz cars into second and third places, averaged 94.02 and 93.96 miles per hour.

The performance of these three Stutz cars, in making such high average speed for 150 miles, surpasses anything of the kind ever recorded for stock cars on any track in the world. There were 14 cars in the 150-mile race. Stutz also holds the record for the rough Indianapolis track of miles in 24 hours, made in a callenge trial for the Stevens trophy.

New A. A. A. records for stock cars at 5, 10, 25, 50 and 100 miles, the only distances for which records are allowed under 150 miles, were made by the winning Stutz speedsters. The best was an average of 96.65 miles per hour for 50 miles by the Stutz driven by Anderson.

The way in which the three Stutz cars were able to maintain so high a speed for such a distance astonished the crowd, although it had been reported that they had reached speeds as high as 105 miles per hour in practice runs on the speedway.

No such speeds have been made in Europe by stocks cars in a race.

Stutz Cars Win Pike's Peak Climbs

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Sept. 10.—The car with which Glen Schultz won the Labor day free-for-all Pike's Peak Climb was a Stutz eight special.

A Stutz stock sedan, with Weymann body, won the stock car Pike's Peak Climb the same day.

Schultz, who won the climb with a Stutz last year, drove the 12½ miles of winding mountain road this year in 18 minutes 23.1 seconds, leading the second car by 1 minute 59.3 seconds or more than a mile.

The Stutz stock sedan was driven by "Bill" Bentrup, who reached the mountain summit in 22 minutes 59 seconds, defeating the second car by 48 seconds. The closed Stutz competed against roadster models.

It was the first Pike's Peak Climb for strictly stock cars.

The Pike's Peak Climb is the recognized mountain race classic in this country. Through Schultz's victory, the Stutz Motor Co. holds for a second consecutive time the Penrose trophy, a large silver urn offered annually by Spencer Pen-

The Pike's Peak race course twists around the mountain for 12½ miles before reaching the finish line at the summit—14,109 feet above sea level. Tests more rigorous and racking than are found in any other type of motor car competition are met in this event.

Not only must the successful car have speed, but it must also have the utmost in carburetion, cooling and roadability. The extreme change in altitude in the course of the race is a severe test for carburetion. That there is no more thorough or strenuous test of cooling is admitted.

Perfect roadability is an even greater requirement for "hairpin" turns, varying road surfaces, unbanked corners, dozens of places where a slip means disaster.

CALIFORNIA WOMAN GOLF CHAMPION OWNS GARDNER

Mrs. Dan Jones, of Beverly Hills, California State woman golf champion, is sharing with her family the use of a new Gardner eight-in-line "90" brougham, recently purchased from the Sperl Motor Car Co., Southern California Gardner distributers, says a factory statement.

"The Jones family is a 'two car family' in which two cars have not completely solved the problem of transportation. For with the advent of the new Gardner eight-in-line the second family car is not so much in demand. The question now is not 'who gets the car today' but 'who gets the Gardner.'

"Speaking of the new Gardner Mrs. Jones says, 'Aside from being a sensational performer I think the new Gardner 90 brougham is one of the most beautiful cars on the road. In design and finish I am satisfied that it compares more than favorably with cars in the high priced field.'"

HUP "8" VIRTUALLY THEFT PROOF, SAYS SALES EXECUTIVE

National records of thefts of Hupmobile eights built since its electro-lock was added as standard equipment this spring, show few thefts of this car, as a result, owners are being saved thousands of dollars annually in reductions below average insurance rates, and in uninterrupted use of their cars, says R. S. Cole, Hupmobile general sales manager. Cole believes this lock is the closest approach to being 100 per cent theft-proof of any device yet known.

"Convenience," he says, "is another appealing feature. The key unlocks the ignition. Locking is had by pushing in lock button, located on grouped instrument panel. This shuts off engine and automatically cuts off ignition.

"Instead of a wire connection and switch back of instrument board, this lock utilizes a cable, enclosed in a metal sheath, leading to instrument board from distributor and is actually a part of lock. When unlocked and engine either is running or about to be started, lock protrudes about a half inch. Action of pushing the lock in, making the engine inoperative, pushes the cable back. This, in turn, disconnects the ignition at the distributor, making it impossible to start the car."

The lock is so built that wiring around the switch is impossible. By further protective measures it is amply theft-resisting at all times.

CRANKSHAFTS TESTED TO DETERMINE THEIR BALANCE

The General Motors Corporation has just perfected a new testing machine for determining the static and dynamite balance of a crankshaft, and one is now being used at Olds Motor Works. The element of friction is eliminated in this test by running the shaft in a vertical rather than a horizontal position. The upper end is held rigid while the lower is held by spring-controlled rollers. Any lack of balance is automatically recorded on a chart. Both ends of the shaft are similarly tested.

"The chart records any lack of balance in the shaft and excess metal is removed to bring it into balance. The shaft is again tested and a final test is made with both ends free to register any deviation.

WILL ASK CONGRESS TO END TAXING CARS

Auto Industry Also Concerned With Toll Bridge, Bus and Truck Legislation.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Questions of outstanding importance to all who make, sell and buy automobiles will be among the problems laid before Congress when it convenes in December.

It is understood that legislation will be proposed designed to end what is termed "the toll bridge evil." Such bills will have the support of strong groups in all sections of the country. The Bureau of Public Roads, it seems certain, will take definite steps to bring the matter before the Congress.

While there will be strong opposition to attempts to limit private toll bridge construction, it also is clear that motordom as a whole will support legislation for ultimate freeing of the highway system.

Another matter of importance to owners of motor cars will be the industry's urgent request that the excise tax of 3 per cent on passenger cars be removed. Senator Smoot, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has indicated that he would look kindly on a reduction of this tax to 1½ per cent, which would mean quite a relief to motor car purchasers. The hope of the motor industry is, of course, that this tax may be eliminated.

That the matter of bus and truck regulation will come before the session is practically assured.

The Interstate Commerce Commission last year held hearings in all parts of the United States on bus and truck regulation. Voluminous reports were compiled, which, when analyzed, revealed that sentiment was strongly against truck regulation, chiefly because trucks are more than 90 per cent owner-operated. Busses, on the other hand, operated on a different theory and principle, were differently viewed, and there was a good deal of opinion that they should be under some form of regulation.

WILLARD BATTERY CO. WINS DECISION IN PARTS SUIT

A legal victory for accessory manufacturers in their continuous war against use of non-genuine parts by repair men is found in a recent decision by the Circuit Court of Detroit in favor of the Willard Storage Battery Co.

In this case the Willard Company sought to enjoin a gasoline station from selling Willard batteries or any product represented as of Willard manufacture, or selling any product even partially assembled from Willard parts.

The court found that the "gas" station was guilty of unfair competition, and perpetually enjoined it from selling as a Willard battery any storage battery not wholly manufactured by the Willard Storage Battery Co. or not entirely assembled of parts and material manufactured by the Willard Storage Battery Co.

PAVING ON U. S. 50 AND NO 21 TO BE OPENED

The five miles of new paving on State Highway 21 between U. S. 61—eleven miles beyond Festus-Crystal City—and De Soto, will be opened to traffic tomorrow. Dedication ceremonies at De Soto, under the auspices of the Missouri Ozarks Chamber of Commerce, which is meeting there, are planned. With the opening of this stretch motorists will have an all-weather gravel and concrete route from St. Louis to Potosi.

The six and a half miles of new paving on U. S. 50—between the new junction of U. S. 50 and U. S. 66, east of St. Clair and Union—is to be opened later in the week, probably Wednesday, according to the highway office at Webster Groves.

G. M. CHEMIST SAYS SULPHUR SHORTENS LIFE OF OF MOTOR

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Sept. 10.—Excessive sulphur in gasoline shortens the life of a motor, according to H. C. Mougey, chemist of the General Motors Research Corp.

In an address prepared for delivery the past week before the American Chemical Society, meeting here, Mougey declared the cause of corrosion in automobiles is water formed by combustion of fuel and that the corrosive effect of this water is greatly increased if it is contaminated with acids resulting from the burning of sulphur in fuel.

"Difference of opinion makes horse-racing," is the immemorial proverb and auspice of the sport of kings. Yet, for Man O'War who was indifferent to all but the victorious goal, king and stable boy rise to agree there was no difference of opinion when that super-horse faced the barrier.

No Difference of Opinion

When Supremacy is so Outstanding

In its repertoire of brilliant abilities, the New Hudson Super-Six asserts its supremacy in vivid performance facts that stand free and clear of opinion or debate.

Here is a new power in motordom—totally different in development and expression—totally new in range and efficiency—the smooth and mighty power of the steam engine delivered with silky ease and vivacity.

From standing start the New Hudson Super-Six takes the full shot of power, with no suggestion of lurch or stagger, mounting to high speed with greater smoothness and rapidity than any stock car we know, regardless of size, number of cylinders or price.

The basis of this great Hudson capacity is a new companion invention to the Super-Six principle which turns waste heat to power. Together they combine the highest efficiency in power generation and transmission ever achieved within our knowledge. It makes Hudson the most economical car per pound weight in the world.

In the new Hudson motor, spark knock heretofore characteristic of the high-compression motor is eliminated.

Ordinary gasoline gives the performance results sought through special and higher-priced fuels. By Hudson's method of vaporizing raw gasoline that enters the combustion chamber, oil dilution is prevented, and heat formerly wasted through the exhaust becomes useful power.

It is receiving the greatest public reception in Hudson history, because in all ways it is the greatest Hudson Super-Six ever built.

G. M. SPEED TRUCK ON COAST-TO-COAST RUN

Cannonball Baker Driving Load of Water From New York to California.

Cannonball Baker, distance test driver, passed through St. Louis early Thursday morning on his eightieth transcontinental run, bound for San Francisco from New York with a tank load of Atlantic Ocean water on a General Motors fast duty truck powered with a Buick six-cylinder engine. Baker left New York Monday morning, Sept. 5. It is his first attempt to cross the Continent with a truck.

Arrested in County.

An unlooked-for delay was occasioned at St. John's Station on St. Charles road, near Overland, Mo., when Baker, driving at a fast clip, was arrested for speeding. County officials were surprised that a truck could run at the 45-50 m. p. h. speed Baker was driving, but this did not deter them in their decision to fine him, and the distance driver was out $18.20.

Baker made better than schedule time from Indianapolis to St. Louis, leaving the former city at midnight Wednesday, and arriving here about 7 o'clock Thursday morning. The distance from New York to Philadelphia was made in two hours, he reported by wire to O. H. Perkins, manager of the General Motors Truck Co. factory branch here. His average speed is about 40 m. p. h.

The truck is a stock two-ton six-cylinder fast duty General Motors truck, powered with the latest type triple-sealed Buick engine. It carries a Columbia tank body, which is filled with Atlantic Ocean water. This ocean water is to be drained into the Pacific Ocean at Golden Gate on completion of the trip.

Carries Liquid Load.

"A liquid load is being carried, since it is the hardest load a truck has to handle," says Baker. "It is continually swishing from side to side, and keeps the load in constant uproar."

In addition to attempting a speed record, Baker is putting the truck through strains such as it probably would ordinarily never be called upon to perform. General Motors Truck Co. wishes to learn just what happens to the truck with its motor turning over every minute of the 3500-mile grind.

BOONVILLE-NEW FRANKLIN ROAD TO BE GRAVELED

BOONVILLE, Mo., Sept. 10.—Business interests here have started a campaign to raise $10,000 to gravel a mile and a fourth stretch of road north of New Franklin. The road is to be graveled from the concrete of U. S. 40 north of the Missouri River bridge to New Franklin. Already $9000 have been raised.

The construction program calls for a 16-foot roadway with a four-inch depth of gravel.

New Franklin was originally on the route of U. S. 40 but was eliminated when this highway was paved in order to shorten it.

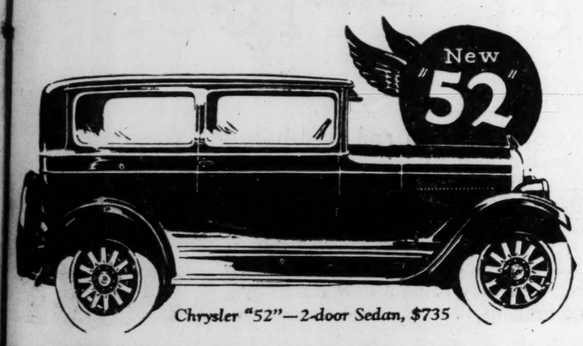
Only Chrysler Standardized Quality Can Give this Greater Value . . .



Chrysler "52"—2-door Sedan, $735

New Chrysler "52"—52 and more miles an hour. Acceleration and smoothness no other low-priced car can approach. Full-sized bodies of wood and steel, with ample capacity for adult passengers. Saddle-spring seat-cushions. Fine mohair upholstery. Utmost handling ease with adjustable steering wheel. Indirectly lighted instrument panel.

Chrysler "62"—4-door Sedan, $1245

Great New Chrysler "62"—6-cylinder motor. 7-bearing crankshaft. 62 and more miles per hour. Invar-strut pistons. Oil filter and air cleaner. Ventilated crankcase. Impulse neutralizer and rubber engine mountings. New cellular type radiator. 4-wheel hydraulic brakes. Road levelizers, front and rear.

WHO but Chrysler could produce such value as the Illustrious New Chrysler "72"? Longer, roomier, faster, handsomer than the original "70" which electrified the motoring world four years ago, no other car at this price—or hundreds of dollars more—offers among a host of other features, counter-weighted seven-bearing crankshaft, rubber shock insulators—features introduced two years ago in the Imperial "80."

Who but Chrysler could produce such value as the Great New Chrysler "62"? Startling in its performance capabilities, its wealth of features, many of which have heretofore been found only on much-costlier cars, and in its price several hundred dollars lower than is offered by other manufacturers for similar quality and value.

Who but Chrysler could produce such value as the New Chrysler "52"? Full-powered and fast. Big, roomy bodies, made of wood and steel, with ample capacity for adult passengers. And at prices only slightly in excess of what is asked for mere transportation.

Who but Chrysler could produce such value as the Imperial "80"? A luxury of performance and comfort absolutely unequalled by any other fine car in America. Truly "as fine as money can build" and so regarded by the country's connoisseurs of motoring.

These greater values are the unmistakable results of Chrysler's unique policy and plan of Standardized Quality in design and manufacture.

Through Standardized Quality each Chrysler clearly is the beneficiary of all the pioneering in design, exceptional skill in engineering, precision in manufacturing and vast resources concentrated in the development and building of all other Chrysler models.

And each Chrysler owner thus benefits because Chrysler Standardized Quality continues daily to produce unapproached values in automobile building.

Chrysler "72"—Royal Sedan, $1595

Illustrious New Chrysler "72"—75-horsepower motor with 7-bearing counter-weighted crankshaft. 72 and more miles an hour. 5 to 25 miles in 7 seconds. Spring ends anchored in blocks of live rubber instead of metal shackles for greatest riding ease. Longer, more beautiful bodies, tastefully appointed, luxuriously roomy.

Chrysler Imperial "80"—4-passenger Coupe, $3095

Chrysler Imperial "80"—92-horsepower motor. 80 dashing easeful miles with whispering smoothness. An ease and luxury of driving and riding that makes motoring comfort take on a new meaning. Supremely beautiful and ultra smart. As fine as money can build.

New Chrysler "Red-Head" Engine—designed to take full advantage of high-compression gas, produces extra speed, still faster acceleration and even greater hill-climbing ability than the standards announced.

This remarkable development is standard equipment on the roadsters of the "52," "62," "72," and sport roadster of the Imperial "80." It is also available, at slight extra cost, for all other body types. For a reasonable charge it can be applied to earlier Chrysler cars now in use.

CHRYSLER MODEL NUMBERS MEAN MILES PER HOUR

NEW CADILLAC MODELS BEING DISPLAYED HERE

Twenty-Six Body Styles, on 140-Inch Chassis, With Larger Engine, Being Shown.

New Cadillac 1928 models, the largest, most powerful and most luxurious of this type car ever produced, are on display today for the first time here by Oliver-Cadillac Co. Cadillac-La Salle distributer.

There are two distinct lines, the custombilt models with Fisher bodies, having a list price range of $3350 to $3895, and the Fleetwood body line, with a list price range of $4095 to $5500.

Twenty-Six Styles.

Four of the 14 Fisher body styles are open jobs, while the 12 Fleetwood models are all enclosed cars. All of the 26 styles are on 140-inch wheelbase, which is several inches longer than present Cadillac models.

The traditional Cadillac principle of engine design has been retained in the power plant, though the new motor is larger. The new engine, for instance, has a 341-inch piston displacement, instead of the former 314-inch, and develops approximately 90 h. p. instead of the approximate 80 h. p. of the old. The power plant is a V-type, 90-degree, eight-cylinder engine.

The bore and stroke of the new engine has been increased to 3 5-16 x4 15-16. The cylinder blocks have been slightly staggered, and have side-by-side connecting rods, as in the La Salle. Gear ratios, too, have been changed, and are now 4.75, as against 4.91 on present Cadillac models.

The chassis of the new Cadillac is sturdier built by use of four channel cross members, and three tubular cross members instead of two. Added riding comfort is guaranteed with the new type hydraulic shock absorbers which are fitted front and rear.

Wide Rear Compartment.

Though the new Cadillac has a 140-inch wheelbase and is built 2¾ inches lower to the ground, the body is so designed to appear that the car is much lower and longer than these dimensions would indicate. The new body, too, is much roomier. The rear compartment has been extended well over the wheels and inside rear measurements are fully three inches wider than in present models.

The radiator is of entirely new design, with heavily nickeled shell. It is of greater depth and is mounted low on the chassis. The radiator base is rounded instead of straight as heretofore.

The hood is longer, its overall being 41¼ inches against 39¾ in present models. Hood louvres are higher and narrower, and there are 30 instead of 14.

Fenders are much wider and have sweeping lines. Running boards, rubber-covered, have new style nickeled moulding.

Artillery wheels, having 12 hickory spokes with steel felloes, are standard.

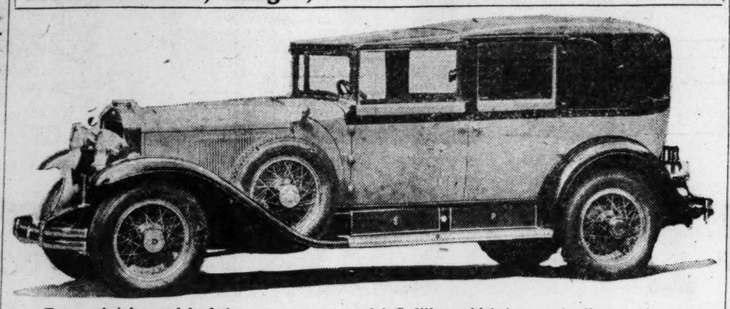
Closed Body Types.

The Cadillac closed body models are the two-passenger coupe, two-passenger convertible coupe, five-passenger coupe, five-passenger sedan, five-passenger town sedan, seven-passenger sedan, five-passenger Imperial, seven-passenger Imperial, five-passenger Imperial cabriolet and seven-passenger Imperial cabriolet.

The upholstery is mohair velvet or broadcloth with the exception of the convertible coupe, which is trimmed with leather.

The open cars consist of the two-passenger roadster, four-passenger phaeton, four-passenger sport phaeton and seven-passenger touring.

How the New, Larger, More Powerful Cadillac Looks



Town cabriolet model of the new, more powerful Cadillac, which has a wheelbase of 140 inches and a larger engine. The body of this model is by Fleetwood. The top over the driving compartment is removable.

R. W. Page Back on Auto Row.

Ralph W. Page, who was sales-manager for the South Side Buick Auto Co. and also president and general manager of his own retail Buick firm, has returned from Florida, where he has been in business for two years. He has joined the sales department of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co.

A. C. EXECUTIVE TELLS HOW SPARK PLUGS ARE TESTED

Spark plug insulators must not only be mechanically strong, but able to withstand extreme and rapid temperature changes says Albert Champion, president of the AC Spark Plug Co.

When the engine is started, the cold insulator of the spark plug must submit to a baptism of fire from repeated explosions, and unless it is extremely resistent to sudden changes in temperature, it will crack and render the spark plug useless. To make sure that all insulators will meet severe service while in use, they are run through an automatic testing machine.

The machine consists of a rotary conveyor equipped with a small electric furnace and plunge bath. The cold insulators pass through the terrific heat of the furnace, emerging red hot. Then they are immediately plunged into an ice water bath.

Then they are subjected to the blow of a trip hammer, which determines the effect the frigid to torrid zone treatment had upon the insulator's constitution.

Solves Seating Problem.

In hopes of solving the back-seat driving problem, an automobile manufacturer in England has designed a car with the rear seat backed up against the front one. Passengers in the rear seat are spared the distractions of driving which spoil motoring for some people. Windows are cut in the rear to give a view of the fleeting landscape.

WOMAN DRIVES PIERCE-ARROW 1652 MILES IN FOUR DAYS

Mrs. Ferne G. Wilson, of Santa Monica, Cal., accompanied by her two daughters, recently drove her new Pierce-Arrow series 80 brougham from Oklahoma City to Los Angeles, a distance of 1652 miles in four days and four hours, says the Pierce-Arrow factory.

"The first day, Mrs. Wilson stated, they drove to Hereford, Tex., 368 miles. They made 378 miles to Socorro, N. M., the second day. The next day the car climbed the Continental Divide. Heavy rains were encountered, making the mountain road very slippery and treacherous, but the party had no trouble. They made Winslow, Ariz., that night, logging 300 miles for the day.

"Leaving Winslow at 7:30 o'clock next morning, they drove straight through to Los Angeles, a distance of 606 miles, stopping one hour at San Bernardino. Mrs. Wilson declared they enjoyed every minute of the trip, even on the slippery roads. While crossing the desert they had three punctures and changed tires themselves."

Auto on Rails.

The latest development in luxury travel in Victoria, Australia, is an automobile which runs on rails. The car, which has a saloon body and is fitted with a 6-cylinder engine, has been built in order to provide a more flexible itinerary and higher standard of comfort than the ordinary train. The rail automobile can be hired at the rate of 36 cents a mile.

STUDEBAKER BEGAN BUSINESS WITH TINY FORGE AND $68

From a single forge and a tiny shop which began with a capital of $68, to nearly two square miles of plants and $100,000,000 of assets, is the amazing growth recorded by the Studebaker Corporation in three-quarters of a century of manufacturing, according to Studebaker executive offices at South Bend.

"Studebaker plants and facilities now provide more than 8,100,000 square feet of floor space and cover 1100 acres of grounds, according to a recent summary of plant expansion," a statement says. "South Bend plants and the proving ground cover 1070 acres with more than 6,185,000 feet devoted to complete manufacturing facilities. In Detroit 27 acres of plants and 1,795,000 feet of floor space are required for manufacturing and assembly operations, with additional plants located in Walkerville, Ontario.

"Because of these great plants Studebaker is able to manufacture automobiles on a one-profit basis. Bodies, engines, springs, transmissions differentials, castings and forgings for Studebaker cars are all made in Studebaker plants."

Medical Aid Road Station.

Thirty medical first-aid stations have been placed along the road between Paris and Deauville, in France. There will be one doctor in attendance to every five relief stations. This road, used extensively by wealthy American motorists, is the scene of many hundred accidents during the summer season.

PACKARD EARNINGS HAVE SHOWN RAPID INCREASES

Although earnings of the Packard Motor Car Co. have fluctuated widely in the past seven years, bringing the average yearly net income to $6,777,950, results for the two most recent years have reached record proportions, and it is expected earnings for current fiscal year which ended August 31 will equal if not exceed the 1925 figure of $12,191,081. The seven-year period included 1921 with a loss of $987,366, as well as years of varying profit ranging from $2,116,828 in 1922 to $15,244,586 in 1926.

In the seven-year period, Packard earned $47,445,650, and paid in cash dividends $26,146,344, as well as stock dividends. Cash payments, however, included $5,969,511 paid on a preferred stock issue which was fully retired in 1925, leaving the comon stock as sole beneficiary of earnings.

New Models Lower Prices

Two new models, a sedan and brougham, have just been added to the Paige line at lower prices, making a Paige six available for the first time for less than a thousand dollars.

Both cars are attractive, fast, comfortable, long lasting; and they bring a new economy to Paige ownership.

The introduction of these new models follows the substantial improvements on all Paige sixes and eights, and lower prices on ten of the twenty models, announced August fifth.

Paige improvements, affecting both bodies and chassis, add materially to appearance, and to the traditional performance and endurance of all the cars. Prices now range from $995 to $2665, f. o. b. Detroit. We invite your inspection.

AUBURN GETS CONTROL OF THREE COMPANIES

Lycoming, Duesenberg Motor Firms and the Limousine Body Co. Involved.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUBURN, Ind., Sept. 10.—Majority stock control of the Lycoming Manufacturing Co., Williamsport, Pa., of Duesenberg, Inc., Indianapolis, Ind., and of the Limousine Body Co., Kalamazoo, Mich., has been required by the Auburn Automobile Co.

Auburn's rise and growth under E. L. Cord, its president, in the last three years has been an outstanding feature in the industry.

The Lycoming Manufacturing Co. is the second largest motor specialist in the world, having a complete manufacturing organization and complete machine tool and foundry equipment for making aviation, marine, industrial, motor car and motor truck engines. Lycoming numbers among its customers several sound and progressive automobile manufacturers in the medium price field.

Strictly stock Auburn cars that recently broke all official American stock car records from 5 to 9000 miles and established 34 new records from 5000 to 15,000 miles, were all powered with Lycoming engines.

The Lycoming Manufacturing Co. owns 100 per cent of the stock of the Spencer Heater Co., which manufactures slow burning, self-feeding boilers for building heating equipment.

The assets of the Lycoming Manufacturing Co. amount to over $5,000,000 and it employs 2000 persons.

Duesenberg Pioneers Improvements.

International fame and recognition is attached to the name of Duesenberg, manufacturer of Duesenberg passenger cars and special race cars and of submarine and speed boat engines. Fred Duesenberg designed and built America's first straight eight engine; pioneered four-wheel brakes; was the first to win international races with a small cubic piston displacement engine, and made the only American car that has won the Grand Prix race in France.

New developments are soon to be announced by Duesenberg. The price of custom-built Duesenberg cars has limited their appeal to well-to-do car owners.

A Duesenberg car won the 500-mile race this year on the Indianapolis speedway.

Assets of Duesenberg Inc. are approximately $1,000,000.

The Limousine Body Co. has been a source of supply for the Auburn Automobile Co. for three years. It specializes in better grade automobile bodies. Its assets are approximately $350,000.

The annual sales volume of the companies involved in this deal will total this year approximately $40,000,000.

"This step is simply in line with Auburn's plans for greater growth," said Cord. "It widens Auburn's radius of operations, increases our facilities and resources.

"All three of these companies will retain their individual identity and present management."

CHANDLER MOTORS USED FOR TROLLEY CARS IN GUATEMALA

"Getting there in Guatemala means traveling the Chandler route, for, in addition to the many Chandlers owned in this mountainous Central American metropolis, even the street cars are powered with Chandler's Pikes Peak motor," says a factory statement.

"This, surely, is striking proof of Chandler power, stamina and durability. No test could be more severe than that imposed in pulling a load several times the weight of the Chandler car for which the motor was designed.

"Yet the Pikes Peak motor answers this daily heavy-duty demand just as easily and efficiently as it answers the demands of thousands of Chandler owners throughout the world, in every sort of performance test."

200,000 WATSON STABILILATOR SHARES PLACED ON MARKET

Offering has been made of 200,000 shares of common stock of the John Warren Watson Co., makers of the "Watson Stabilator" shock absorbers for motor vehicles. The management and control of the company will continue to be in the hands of John Warren Watson. It is expected that a quarterly dividend of 50 cents per common share will be paid Dec. 15, 1927. Application will be made to list the common shares on the New York Stock Exchange.

The company is preparing to manufacture a new stabilator to retail at $28 for the light, short wheel-base car.

AUBURN GETS CONTROL OF THREE COMPANIES

Lycoming, Duesenberg Motor Firms and the Limousine Body Co. Involved.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUBURN, Ind., Sept. 10.—Majority stock control of the Lycoming Manufacturing Co., Williamsport, Pa., of Duesenberg, Inc., Indianapolis, Ind., and of the Limousine Body Co., Kalamazoo, Mich., has been required by the Auburn Automobile Co.

Auburn's rise and growth under E. L. Cord, its president, in the last three years has been an outstanding feature in the industry.

The Lycoming Manufacturing Co. is the second largest motor specialist in the world, having a complete manufacturing organization and complete machine tool and foundry equipment for making aviation, marine, industrial, motor car and motor truck engines. Lycoming numbers among its customers several sound and progressive automobile manufacturers in the medium price field.

Strictly stock Auburn cars that recently broke all official American stock car records from 5 to 100 miles and established 34 new records from 5000 to 15,000 miles, were all powered with Lycoming engines.

The Lycoming Manufacturing Co. owns 100 per cent of the stock of the Spencer Heater Co., which manufactures slow burning, self-feeding boilers for building heating equipment.

The assets of the Lycoming Manufacturing Co. amount to over $5,000,000 and it employs 2000 persons.

Duesenberg Pioneers Improvements.

International fame and recognition is attached to the name of Duesenberg, manufacturer of Duesenberg passenger cars and special race cars and of submarine and speed boat engines. Fred Duesenberg designed and built America's first straight eight engine; pioneered four-wheel brakes; was the first to win international races with a small cubic piston displacement engine, and made the only American car that has won the Grand Prix race in France.

New developments are soon to be announced by Duesenberg. The price of custom-built Duesenberg cars has limited their appeal to well-to-do car owners.

A Duesenberg car won the 500-mile race this year on the Indianapolis speedway.

Assets of Duesenberg Inc. are approximately $1,000,000.

The Limousine Body Co. has been a source of supply for the Auburn Automobile Co. for three years. It specializes in better grade automobile bodies. Its assets are approximately $350,000.

The annual sales volume of the companies involved in this deal will total this year approximately $40,000,000.

"This step is simply in line with Auburn's plans for greater growth," said Cord. "It widens Auburn's radius of operations, increases our facilities and resources.

"All three of these companies will retain their individual identity and present management."

CHANDLER MOTORS USED FOR TROLLEY CARS IN GUATEMALA

"Getting there in Guatemala means traveling the Chandler route, for, in addition to the many Chandlers owned in this mountainous Central American metropolis, even the street cars are powered with Chandler's Pikes Peak motor," says a factory statement.

"This, surely, is striking proof of Chandler power, stamina and durability. No test could be more severe than that imposed in pulling a load several times the weight of the Chandler car for which the motor was designed.

"Yet the Pikes Peak motor answers this daily heavy-duty demand just as easily and efficiently as it answers the demands of thousands of Chandler owners throughout the world, in every sort of performance test."

200,000 WATSON STABILILATOR SHARES PLACED ON MARKET

Offering has been made of 200,000 shares of common stock of the John Warren Watson Co., makers of the "Watson Stabilator" shock absorbers for motor vehicles. The management and control of the company will continue to be in the hands of John Warren Watson. It is expected that a quarterly dividend of 50 cents per common share will be paid Dec. 15, 1927. Application will be made to list the common shares on the New York Stock Exchange.

The company is preparing to manufacture a new stabilator to retail at $28 for the light, short wheel-base car.

TRIPLEX SAFETY GLASS FAILED TO SHATTER IN 65-MILE IMPACT

There are three kinds of safety glass. The most obvious is glass, molded or rolled around wire mesh. Another kind contains straight wires. The third type is known as triplex glass because it is built in three layers, the two outside being of plate glass, the inner layer being of a binding composition. This is virtually as clear as plate glass, having a transparency of 90 per cent as compared to the 92 per cent perfect vision of plate glass.

In a headon collision arranged during the New York auto show, one car was fitted with plate glass, the other with the triplex type of safety glass. The cars, on a specially built track, met with a 65-mile impact. Weights, simulating passengers were hurled against the windshields by the impact. The plain glass, of course, broke into fragments, while the safety glass did not shatter. It will yield under heavy blows, but gives way with harmless edges that do not lacerate.

PRICE OF HUPMOBILE 8 MODELS REDUCED $150

Lower prices on Hupmobile 8-cylinder cars are now in effect with a reduction of $150 on all models.

HERTZ DRIVURSELF CO. PUTS NEW LOW RATES INTO USE

After an extended survey by officials of the Hertz Drivurself Stations, largest automobile rental organization in the world, new low commercial rates have been put in effect, according to Charles W. Litsey, vice president and general manager.

These new rates, intended particularly for public utility and commercial organizations requiring the use of several cars daily, are the lowest ever offered in the Drivurself business and are the result of the activity in this field by concerns that find the automobile a necessary adjunct to their business.

Under this new plan of merchandising mileage, the Hertz company is able to offer to users of more than one car each business day and more 2500 Drivurself miles a month, a national rental service that, in return, is said to cost less than the average operation of the fleets of cars supported by such concerns.

No restriction is placed on users taking advantage of these new rates and their employes are permitted to select any cars available for rental purposes in any Hertz stations in the United States and Canada. Special identification cards permitting the holder to obtain the car of his choice within a moment's time have been prepared and are being forwarded to concerns using the service.

H. C. SNOW NEW ENGINEERING CHIEF OF AUBURN AUTO CO.

H. C. Snow is the new chief engineer of the Auburn Automobile Co.

Snow, a Case School of Applied Science graduate, got his early training with the Peerless Motor Car Co. From 1906 to 1912 he was designer and chief engineer of that company.

During that year he went to Willys-Overland, Inc., where from 1912 to 1914 he was assistant engineer. In 1914 he went to the Winton Motor Car Co. as chief engineer and remained until 1921. In 1921 Snow went to the Velie Motor Co. as chief engineer and remained until early in 1927, when he left the company to go to New York to do research work, says the factory.

"At Peerless" he helped design the truck that was later used by the Government in the World War."

$35,000 SERVICE BUILDING FOR WELLS MOTOR CAR CO.

Complete service and repair equipment for Chevrolet cars, a duco service station and a small used car display room are included in the new $35,000 service building erected by the Wells Motor Co., Chevrolet dealers, at 2820 North Spring avenue.

The company, which is the second oldest Chevrolet dealer in St. Louis, will continue its headquarters at 3008 North Grand boulevard.

In its new service building, the firm has 15,000 square feet of floor space, according to Phil Wells, president.

AUGUST BIGGEST SALES MONTH IN NASH HISTORY

August was the biggest single month in the history of the Nash Motors Co., with shipments of 18,027 cars while orders for August delivery totaled 20,201. This new high record is regarded by the company as an indorsement of the three new series of cars it recently introduced.

The new Nash line includes three series of cars in four wheelbase lengths. All are sixes and all have seven-bearing crankshaft motors.

SPECIAL PEERLESS DISPLAY

A special exhibit of Peerless and Falcon-Knight automobiles will be held at the Clinton County Fair at Breeze, Ill., next week. The exhibit will be handled by C. D. U. S. AND CANADA LEAD IN SURFACED ROADS

Sixteen Latin-America Countries Have 12,670 Miles Against 521,260 for U. S.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Highway surveys of the various countries of the western hemisphere by the World Motor Transport Committee of the International Association of Automobile Manufacturers, have just been completed.

Comparison of highway mileage in 16 leading countries of South and Central America with figures for the United States and Canada clearly indicates the necessity for highway improvement in Latin-America to make their systems as good as those of their northern neighbors.

These 16 countries, whose total area exceeds that of the United States and Canada combined and is more than double either of their individual areas, have at present approximately 12,670 miles of surfaced highways and 111,900 miles of dirt roads while Canada has 54,611 miles of surfaced highways and 323,629 miles of dirt roads and the United States has 521,260 miles surfaced and 2,484,822 miles dirt.

Window Breakage High.

Seventy-two out of every 100 motor cars in accidents have windows or windshields broken, the largest single type of accident damage.

WHIPPET COACH TIPPED OVER TO SHOW CHASSIS FEATURES

A Whippet coach, tipped to an angle to show the chassis undergearing, is on display in the window of Willys-Overland, Inc., factory branch, here. Interesting features of the chassis are tagged with numerals and the definition to these is found on two charts on each side of the car.

Twenty-seven points of distinction are listed, major among those being the following standard Whippet equipment: Full force feed lubrication system, timing chain, 4-wheel brakes, extra heavy crankshaft, bronze back bearings and water pump.

CADILLAC AND LA SALLE TAKE MORE EUROPEAN PRIZES

Cadillac and La Salle cars continue to draw new honors for beauty of design and color schemes in European art centers, says a factory statement.

"At the Concours d'Elegance, recently held in Paris, two first prizes were won by La Salle cars. In another contest at Baden-Baden a Cadillac and a La Salle in their respective classes were awarded first prize for beauty.

"In the Concours d'Elegance in Paris, in the two-seated open sport model class, first position was given to a La Salle roadster.

FRENCH AUTO OWNERS ROUSED

Object to Law Making Owner Responsible No Matter Who Drives.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—France's law making an automobile owner fully responsible for all accidents his car causes, no matter who drives it, is coming in for much unfavorable comment. Henry Bernstein, the dramatist, stirred up the critics by his defense in a recent case.

Bernstein's chauffeur did occasional taxi business on the side, picking up passengers when his car was empty. An accident caused this unauthorized practice to be exposed and the chauffeur got a jail sentence. Bernstein, sued for damages, set up the defense that he certainly was not responsible morally and that legally the passenger who hired the car was, for the moment, the proprietor. The Court stuck to the law, but Bernstein's prominence has created a good deal of sentiment in favor of some modification.

ILLINOIS FEDERATION OF LABOR TO MEET

Convention, to Last a Week, Will Open in East St. Louis Tomorrow.

Approximately 1000 representatives of 72 different union crafts are expected to meet in East St. Louis beginning at 10 a. m. tomorrow for the annual convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor.

The delegates, who represent about 700,000 union workers, will be headed by John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation. It is expected that the five-day working week advocated by the American Federation of Labor will be discussed at length during the week's meeting. A suggestion will be introduced by William E. Walters, head of the East St. Louis Central Trades body, that the daily working period be shortened to six hours, six days a week. Other important matters to be discussed will include proposed amendments to the Illinois workmen's compensation law and the coal strike, particularly as it affects Illinois miners.

Entertainment features of the meeting will include theater parties in St. Louis, a barbecue, dance and a visit to Scott Field, near Belleville. All business sessions will be held at Ainad Temple, and the meeting will continue until next Saturday night.

Thief Pays With Valueless Currency.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—To get rid of his inflation currency which is now valueless, a Berlin man has hit on an odd idea. Dressed as an artisan and carrying a bag of tools, he calls upon householders as an inspector of the heating apparatus, and takes the opportunity to steal whatever he can lay hands on. Then he sends the victim a polite letter, enclosing the value of the stolen articles in obsolete banknotes, stating that he is very sorry, he is no common thief, but since he cannot change his banknotes by any other method, this seems the only way to get rid of them.

2 SILVER FOXES VALUED AT $1500 EACH MISSING FROM PEN

Pair Intended for Breeding on Arkansas Farm Thought to Have Been Stolen.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOE, Ark., Sept. 10.—All efforts to locate the persons who made away with a pair of silver foxes from the farm established by J. Welch, near Freeman Springs, in Newton County, have proved unavailing.

Welch paid $1500 for each of the animals, it is reported, as the foundation stock for his farm. He built a large stockade for them, and it was from this that the foxes were taken. It was hoped that a prosperous fox farm would be established, as the pelts of the silver fox often bring as much as $2000 each.

Welch's foxes were taken before they produced their first litter. There is a possibility that these foxes may have escaped after they were taken from Welch's stockade and may propagate in the woods, according to local hunters.

Howell County Cotton Good.

WEST PLAINS, Mo., Sept. 10.—While the cotton acreage in Howell County this year is smaller than it has been for several years, the prospects are excellent, according to Government and State reports. The crop is given a 90 per cent rating on condition and a 95 per cent rating on stand.

German Air Traffic Increases.

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—The increase in German air traffic is illustrated by the fact that during June the aerial service carried 14,775 passengers, compared with 7135 in June last year. During the same month 121,078 kilograms of baggage, 99,689 kilograms of freight and 61,479 kilograms mails and printed matter were conveyed. The distance covered by German service flights during June, 1927, totaled 1,150,000 kilometers, or approximately 713,000 miles.

GOTTFRIED GALSTON
Master Pianist

Mr. Galston arrived in St. Louis, from Berlin, Germany, in June and commenced his American teaching activities at the 1927 Summer Session of THE PROGRESSIVE SERIES TEACHERS COLLEGE, Washington University. This session was attended by 181 music teachers and students from 26 states.

Mr. Galston has successfully concertized throughout Europe; appeared as soloist with the Symphony Orchestras of Paris, London, Berlin, and New York; and completed a successful tour of the United States (1917-1918).

Mr. Galston has become a member of the faculty of THE PROGRESSIVE SERIES TEACHERS COLLEGE and instruction from him will be available during the season from October to June. Auditions for admission to his class will be held in September. In addition to private instruction from Mr. Galston, THE PROGRESSIVE SERIES TEACHERS COLLEGE offers a complete and practical training for advanced students and teachers of the piano. Recent Letters from Ignaz Friedman, Carl Flesch, and Ossip Gabrilowitsch

Berlin, Germany,
April 10, 1927

Mr. Gottfried Galston is one of the best and finest pianists and teachers of today. It is a pleasure for me to congratulate St. Louis to such acquisition.

IGNAZ FRIEDMAN.

Berlin, Germany,
May 17, 1927

I consider Gottfried Galston, whom I have known for many years, one of the most interesting concert pianists of today. Besides his qualities as a virtuoso he possesses also the real pedagogical mind and there is no doubt in my mind that his stay in St. Louis shall give a new impetus to the unusual life of this lovely city.

CARL FLESCH.

Zurich, Switzerland,
May 17, 1927

I hear with great pleasure that you are going to America very soon and that you will teach at the Progressive Series Teachers College in St. Louis. The college in engaging you has certainly made a very brilliant choice. Your exceptional qualities as a piano virtuoso, coupled with your great experience as a pedagogue will make you a factor of great value in the musical development of that institution. I am also convinced that you will have an immediate and far reaching success as a concert pianist in the United States, and that you will have a great following as a teacher.

With best wishes for your well deserved successes.

Sincerely yours,
OSSIP GABRILOWITSCH.

There are a lot of people just like Bill Jones

If you don't know Bill Jones, you know someone just like him.

Bill's dad owned a Six. So did Bill's grandad. So does Bill.

Bill used to be mighty proud of his car. Thought it was about the smoothest thing on wheels. And it ought to be, Bill reasoned, for he certainly had paid enough for it.

But Bill knows better now. For just recently he had a ride in a Gardner Eight-in-line. And he knows now that he'd be a lot better off if he had investigated the Eight-in-line before putting his good money into a car like his dad's and grandad's. And he could have owned an Eight-in-line without adding a dollar to his investment.

But the family habit was in Bill's blood . . . and Bill wasn't strong enough to overcome it. So today all Bill can do is dream and talk about the car he'd like to own.

A lot of people are in the same kind of a rut as Bill Jones. Their new car is a So-and-So because their last one was a So-and-So. And they'll probably be fairly content with it until they learn what's been going on in advanced motor car building these last few years.

Do you buy automobiles that way? Do you buy last year's style in clothes? Do you keep on buying a So-and-So car simply because you've had one like it before. If so, you've got a real treat coming to you.

Get in a Gardner Eight-in-line and drive it. Experience that delightful sensation of gliding over the road so smoothly and so effortlessly that you feel as though you are air coasting in a giant monoplane. Learn what it feels like to have admiring glances follow your car as it rolls quietly down the street.

You'll find that the Gardner Eight-in-line is a distinctively different automobile. It is not built for everybody. Its standards of manufacture preclude mass production. It is built for those who want something finer, different, in the way of appearance, performance, durability and satisfaction.

Four Eights-in-line—Series 75, 80, 85 and 90—range in price from $1475 to $2475, f. o. b. St. Louis.

If that's the kind of an automobile you want, take one of the new Gardner Eights-in-line we have waiting for you, and try it out yourself. And if you bring your wife along, it'll be a toss-up whether she loves you or the Gardner most.

MALARIA TREATMENT USED FOR PARESIS

City Sanitarium Successfully Uses Von Jauregg's Method in Brain Disease.

Treatment of paresis by malaria has been tried successfully by St. Louis specialists in recent months and is being introduced into the city sanitarium.

Paresis, a disease of the brain, has been regarded as incurable, involving insanity and followed by death within from two to six years. Few live more than four years after developing the first sign of it.

By the drastic method of giving malaria to a patient with paresis, worked out by Wagner von Jauregg of Vienna, two St. Louisans have recovered in less than three months to a point where they are able to go back to work. Similar results have been obtained in the East.

Modern research which developed the method gained impetus from the case of a paresis patient, who suffered an attack of double pneumonia when in the hospital. When he recovered from the pneumonia he seemed to have recovered also from the paresis.

One Disease to Cure Another.

Treatment of one disease by another is an ancient idea. Hippocrates and Galenus observed that mental diseases frequently were retarded by some accidental and apparently unrelated infection. One of the old theories was that the fever, the "heating of the blood," played some part in that effect, and some modern scientists are returning to that view.

Others suggest some protein reaction, strengthening general physical resistance so that the infection is thrown off, or that the white corpuscles, "scavengers of the blood," are increased, or that, possibly malaria builds up a specific antibody.

Back in 1887 the modern line of research began. Von Jauregg and others tried inoculations with Koch's old tuberculin, various vaccines, even sodium nuclienate—any foreign protein that seemed likely to produce the desired result. Early in this century Von Jauregg had reached the point where he could say that a better method included the usual therapy combined with an active fever and in 1917 he announced the method now in use in St. Louisa.

The tertian form of malaria is used because it may be quickly eliminated by quinine. If the patient cannot take quinine, salvarsan will serve the same purpose. Specialists giving the treatment at the city sanitarium will give it to any patient able to stand the malaria upon consent of the relatives.

Only Chance for Recovery.

Death from this form of malaria is extremely rare. Specialists say the chance of bad effects is no greater than in routine surgical operations, and point out that the only chance for recovery lies in the new treatment.

They stipulate, however, four essentials to proper administration of the treatment; the physician must be specially trained; the disease must be accurately diagnosed; the patient must be able to stand the fever, and must be watched while it is in progress, so that it may be checked at the first sign of danger.

In Europe and elsewhere in this country, where the method has been tried, it is reported to have caused improvement in 30 per cent of all cases tried, and in 50 to nearly 100 per cent in early stages. A St. Louis physician who returned recently from Vienna said that one of Von Jauregg's patients, treated before 1917, was still alive and able to continue his work.

FRONTIER WEAPONS IN MUSEUM

Girardeau College Has Collection of Early-Day Firearms.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Sept. 10.—Firearms, which played a part in three great struggles in American history, and which helped the pioneer to conquer the early wilderness of Southeast Missouri are a part of the State Teachers' College museum's relic collections. Dr. A. T. Chatham of Kennett, Mo., presented the college with a large firearms collection, nearly every weapon of which is connected with pioneer history, or with either the Revolutionary, Civil or Spanish-American Wars. There are seven weapons in the group.

A combination of both a rifle and shotgun is among the number. The right barrel was made to shoot rifle bullets, and the left barrel was for shooting small shot. It was owned by William Gum of Clarkton, an old settler and a great hunter.

Orange Juice for British Sailors.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The British seaman has lost his traditional name. Jack is no longer a "limey." The Admiralty has changed the ration of lime juice—given to sailormen since time immemorial to prevent scurvey—and is now giving a daily portion of orange juice. The lime juice was always dealt out with a rum ration, but now the sailor must take his orange straight. "Oranges possess more vitamines C—the 'bottled sunshine,'" said an Admiralty spokesman in announcing the change. The navy spent about $45,000 a year for lime juice. It is also heavily fortified with rum.

Artificial Leg Fitted on Crane.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—A crane with an artificial leg is an oddity in the Zoological Gardens of Leipzig. One bitterly cold day last winter the crane escaped. When picked up after a long chase, it was found that both its legs were frozen. Soon afterward, when the bird alighted from a flight, one leg snapped clean off. The crane was taken to the bird's hospital and the stump healed quickly. Then someone got the notion to try and fit the patient with an artificial leg, made of aluminum. This was done, and the crane uses its new leg with perfect ease.

REO FLYING CLOUD

She is the "Ideal" of the Engineers

SHE is not an eight nor a four but a six—the ideal engine, say the engineers.

— She is not 116″ long, nor 126″, but exactly 121″—the ideal length, say the engineers.

— She does not have a valve-in-head motor nor a sleeve valve motor, but an L-Head motor—the ideal type, say the engineers.

— She does not have cantilever springs, neither worm gear nor hypoid gear final drive, nor a four-bearing crankshaft, but she does have half-elliptic springs, spiral bevel gear final drive and a seven-bearing crankshaft—all ideal, say the engineers.

— She has none of the old and the obsolete, she does not offer you in 1927 the features of 1925, but from stem to stern, from roof to road, she is entirely new.

— No other car in the world today even approaches the Flying Cloud in its identity with the Engineers' Ideal Car.

— That is why a leading automotive paper has said that the Reo Flying Cloud is "the only feature in an otherwise colorless automobile season."

How 150 Automotive Engineers Agreed Upon An "Ideal" Motor Car

The Metropolitan Section of the Society of Automotive Engineers held a contest in January for the design of an "Ideal Car" for the American Family. 150 leading engineers competed and their specifications were synthetized into a composite set of specifications for an "Ideal Car"—that dream of all engineers.

Ask for the booklet, "They Have and You Can," which gives a detailed comparison of the Reo Flying Cloud and the "Ideal Car."

The Flying Cloud is a Pleasure Car

— She is a pleasure to see, to ride in, to drive, to own.

— She brings to motoring a thrill that mere passenger cars never had.

— She makes old cars obsolete and many of the newest dear at any price.

— Be sure to try one out. Then you'll understand why the engineers say that such a car is ideal. You'll know that a car rightly designed and built can give you more than transportation, can make traveling a pleasure at all times.

"The movement seems to have started simultaneously in hundreds of places as soon as the Czarist police disintegrated before the revolution. Before the November revolution the movement had gone so far that the old system of landed property could hardly have been saved.
"While the peasants were much behind the urban workers in attemps to control local and national governments, they were more active and aggressive in direct attacks on property and in revolutionary confiscation.
Robinson, who is backed by Mrs. Helen Swift Neilson of Chicago, the Cutting Foundation of Columbia University and the social research council, is taking home more than 9000 sheets of documents, most of which hitherto have not been published. Soviet authorities granted him full access to the archives in Moscow, Leningrad, Kostroma and Tambov.
In addition to delving into record, Mr. Robinson lived in different parts of the country, getting the stories of peasants who participated in land seizures and sometimes in bloody evictions of landlords.

PREVENTS DISTEMPER IN DOGS

French Bacteriologist Says He Has Vaccine Which Immunizes.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, Sept. 10.—Distemper, which causes such ravages among young dogs, soon will be nothing but a bad memory, says Dr. Lebally, chief of the Caen Bacteriological Laboratory.
Dogs vaccinated by the doctor become totally immune in six days, he says. The virus acts very much like that which causes epidemics of grip among human beings. Unable to get it from cultures, Dr. Lebally has obtained the virus from the spleen of dogs in the acute stage of the disease, and has injected it under the skin of the dogs submitted for treatment. One dose has proved sufficient to confer immunity. The only point which still remoins to be cleared up is whether the virus varies according to environment. To determine this, Dr. Lebally is collecting samples from different parts of the region for testing.

Ruin Graves for Souvenirs.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
OSLO, Norway, Sept. 10.—In their eager hunt for souvenirs, tourists in Svalbard have desecrated the graves of unfortunate explorers and in some instance even have taken skulls away. Svalbard, or Spitzbergen, as the island group was called before coming under the control of Norway, for centuries marked the northernmost point reached by men in attempts to conquer the North pole. Hundreds of brave men met death on its lonely shores, and their surviving comrades buried them in the way of the Far North, covering the bodies with stones, with a crude wooden cross surmounting the mound. The Norwegian authorities have taken steps to prevent further profanation of the graves.

POETRY WRITTEN TO ORDER

Woman in Paris Has Sign Reading "Merchant of Verse."

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, Sept. 10. — "Poems" while you wait, has been turned into a regular business by one versifier here, and she has hung on her shingle.
This commercial poetess is Mme. Alois Sauter-Gattelier, who works with meter and rhyme at her home in suburban Neuilly. He. sign describes her as a "Merchant of Verse." In the provinces, this business is a sideline with many literally inclined persons who have not yet turned the corner on the road to financial success. In the smaller villages, there is a demand for verse for marriages, births, deaths and festive occasions. Some of the rapid-fire writers have a regular scale of prices. Others thing it more dignified and also more remunerative to let the client go as far as he will with his pocketbook.

Rain Injures French Wine Crop.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—Lovers of a good bottle, which includes all Frenchmen, are in despair. The wet summer everywhere has favored the development of vine rust and mildew to an extent rarely seen, notwithstanding copious sprayings. This season's grapes have an excellent appearance, but unless there is a long spell of fine weather, growers declare few will reach maturity. The 1927 vintage will be of fair quality but scarce and dear.

WILLIAMSON COUNTY FAIR TO OPEN AT MARION TUESDAY

Additional Tents Ordered to Care for Increased Number of Exhibits.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
MARION, Ill., Sept. 10.—The seventy-first annual Williamson County Fair will open here next Tuesday for four days, and according to W. L. Dunston, president of the fair association, will be the best fair ever held here. Dunston has wired for additional tents to house stock exhibits already entered, besides additional stalls and buildings erected in anticipation of the expected increase in fair attendance.
More race horses than usual are entered. The racing events start Wednesday morning and continue daily.
Besides the racing events, nearly $6000 has been spent in securing free attractions for the entertainment of visitors. These will include acrobats, aerial artists and trained animals besides fireworks displays on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights. In addition there will be a horse show each night and a parade of the winning live stock.
Nearly 200 babies have been entered in the baby show, conducted under the auspices of the Williamson County Home Bureau. The fair grounds cover 53 acres, practically all of which has beautiful shade trees, especially inside the track, where picnics are held by the hundreds during every fair. There is parking space inside the grounds for several thousand automobiles.

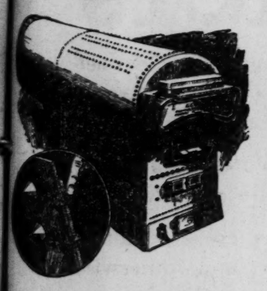
KEWANEE

Steel + Rivets = Strength

Speaking of cracks and leaks and bulging seams, the Kewanee Steel (riveted) Firebox Boiler hasn't a speaking acquaintance with any of them. That's a big thing for you to remember when putting up a big building which will house many tenants.

You can't expect tenants to remain with you, nor can you expect your building to bring a good price if you want to sell it, if your heating boiler is subject to changes in the weather or is constantly getting out of whack. A few experiences of this kind are enough for any man unless he is a hog for punishment or has more money than a National bank.



If you skimp on your heating boiler and try to save a few dollars in first-cost, just think of the many days to come when your boiler quits work and your repairs cost more than the first-cost saving. And if this happens frequently, the boiler you saved money on, becomes a wild disastrous waste.

Skimp on the decorations if you want to—put in a cheaper grade of wood or spend less money on other things, but for the Land's sake buy the best boiler in the world and it will cover a multitude of financial sins. An old building with a Kewanee Boiler is a darn sight more valuable than a new building with some other type.

The big things of the Universe—the lasting things—the strong things are built of Steel (riveted). That's the way to build a boiler which will endure as long as you and your building will—and that fact is proved by EXPERIENCE—the greatest teacher of all.

Complaints about Kewanee Steel (riveted) Firebox Boilers are as scarce as hair on a watermelon. Compliments come from the finest buildings in the land. There never was a boiler built that has the friends Kewanee has.

What Station KSD Will Broadcast This Week, in Detail

Philco Hour Series to Begin Friday — Elsie Baker to Sing This Evening in Atwater Kent Period — Eveready Revellers' Quartet Returns to Air.

A feature new to its listeners is to be introduced by KSD on Friday night of this week when the first of a series of Philco Hours is to be put on the air direct from New York. The Philco Hour is sponsored by the Philadelphia Battery Co., and is a regular feature on the Blue Network, of which WJZ is key station.

Frank Munn, one of the popular radio and recording tenors, is to be soloist in the Philco Hour, and will be supported by the Philco orchestra directed by Walter Haenschen. Munn is to sing two groups of songs, including "One Alone" from "The Desert Song," and "A Little White House" from "Honeymoon Lane." An orchestral feature is to be the playing of the second movement from George Gerschwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

The week's program to be broadcast by KSD will begin at 5:20 o'clock this evening with the Capitol Theater "Family" from New York.

Elsie Baker, a noted concert contralto, is to be the artist in the Atwater Kent Hour this evening. She will sing the following numbers:

Ombra Mai Fu .....Handel
Maria's Wiegenlied .....Reger
Alleluja .....Mozart
When You're Away ..Rosamunde
The Nightingale Has a Lyre of Gold .....Whelpey
The Little Shepherd's Song .....Edwards
Awake! Beloved! .....Edwards
Come to the Fair .....Martin
Spring Song of the Robin Woman .....Cadman

Col. Theodore Roosevelt will speak for 15 minutes through KSD this evening, immediately following the Atwater Kent Hour. His topic will be "Building Model Aircraft." He is to speak in the interest of the national playground miniature aircraft tournament, and will refer to the national contest at Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 8.

Following Col. Roosevelt's talk KSD will broadcast with other Red Network stations an organ recital by Harry Goss-Custard, organist of the cathedral at Liverpool, England, who has been a guest organist of the convention of the National Association of Organists at St. Louis. Goss-Custard is reckoned one of the really great organists. He is to play:

Concert Rondo in B Flat ..Hollins
Largetto in F Sharp Minor S. S. Wesley
Scherzo in G Minor .....Bossi
Symphony in G Minor Sharp 6 (First Movement).....Widor

ELSIE BAKER.
Noted contralto who is to be tonight's soloist in the Atwater Kent Hour through KSD.

Islanders Monday Night

The only program scheduled by KSD for tomorrow evening is a half hour by the South Sea Islanders. This ensemble, which has been heard before on KSD, plays instruments characteristic of Hawaii. It is directed by Norman Clark, tenor, who is one of the more popular radio soloists.

Tuesday Night on KSD

Tuesday evening will bring the usual Eveready Hour through KSD.

The Eveready Revellers, absent from the air for months, will return to an American audience in the Eveready Hour Tuesday. The members of the Eveready Revellers—Lewis James, second tenor; Francis Luther, first tenor; Elliot Shaw, baritone, and Wilfred Glenn, basso—arrived only a few days ago from London, where they appeared at "The Princess" and other clubs, filled a vaudeville engagement and did considerable broacasting to British listeners. They will be hear each week in the Eveready Hour during the coming months.

The Radio Cavalcade period will conclude the Tuesday night broadcasting through KSD.

Wednesday Night

The Ipana Troubadours' program for Wednesday evening includes: "Smiles," "Dawning," "Bye, Bye, Pretty Baby;" "Sylvia," a 'cello solo: "Are You Happy?" "I'll Think of You," "Flapperette," "Napolitana," by the string section; "Swanee Shore," "Barbara" and "Smiles."

Joseph Knecht, director of the Goodrich Silvertown Orchestra, is said to have arranged an unusual program for Wednesday night's broadcast through KSD. As usual, the Silver Masked Tenor and the quartet will sing.

Light Opera Thursday

A radio version of Audran's comic opera, "La Poupee," is to be broadcast through KSD Thursday evening by the National Light Opera Company. The cast will include the following soloists: Rosalie Wolfe, soprano; Frances Paperte, mezzo soprano; George O'Brien, thenor; Harvey Hintermeyer, tenor; Theodore Webb, baritone, and John Oakley, basso.

CONTEST ELIMINATION THURSDAY AND FRIDAY

Twelve Women and as Many Men Singers to Be Chosen in St. Louis District.

More than 100 young men and women singers of St. Louis City and St. Charles, St. Louis, Franklin, Jefferson, Warren and Lincoln counties have entered the St. Louis District elimination contests in the nation-wide contest sponsored by the Atwater Kent Foundation.

The elimination contest for women singers is to be held in the jade room of the Congress Hotel, St. Louis, next Thursday night, and that for men Friday evening in the same place.

Winners in these elimination contests—12 men and as many women—will compete in the St. Louis District finals which are to be held in the Coliseum Sept. 20 and 21 during the St. Louis radio show and will be broadcast by KSD.

Arrangements for the St. Louis District contests have been made by Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum, vice president of the Missouri Federation of Music Clubs and chairman of the district contest committee.

"The number of applicants exceeded our expectation," said Mrs. Nussbaum. "Fully as many applied but were rejected because of the age limit, as we accepted. There are a number of the contrants who have voices of unusual quality; I have been advised that the quality of the voice will count more than the technique.

"Of course each District Chairman is hopeful that their respective districts may be the fortunate one; but I am confident of this, there are voices in the St. Louis District which are going to be hard to beat."

As has been told, winners in the finals in the St. Louis District and other districts in Missouri are to compete in a State contest which will be broadcast by KSD in October. Winners in this will compete in a national district contest in Chicago, and winners in this will meet winners in the other four national districts in the finals in New York in November.

Singers who reach the national finals will be judged solely on the basis of natural beauty of voice and not on muscal technique, and no repertoire will be insisted upon.

These decisions were announced by the national committee of sponsorship and judging, composed of Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley, Oxford, O., president of the National Federation of Music Clubs; Mrs. Otto H. Kahn of New York City; Louise Homer and Edward W. Bok, Philadelphia editor and publicist.

The voices of 10 finalists will be heard by a national judging jury, which will be composed of men and women famous in the musical world. The singers will be heard over radio by the judges, who will not know the... Failed to Seek Renewal of Licenses — WREO Suspends for the Present.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Seventeen broadcasting stations have been dropped from the official rolls of the Federal Radio Commission because of failure to apply for renewals of licenses. None may broadcast without becoming amenable to the penalty of $5000 prescribed by the radio act of 1927 for operating without a license.

The commission announced the list of stations deleted with the comment that they had received sufficient notice to apply for renewals of their 60-day licenses. The list includes several stations whose operators had signified their intention to cease broadcasting, but most are stations that failed to heed the commission's repeated warnings.

Among the 17 are the stations of Cornell University, University of Mississippi and Scott High, Toledo, which may have been shut down temporarily for the summer vacation.

There is also WREO, Lansing, Mich., 500-watter, whose operator notified the commission it was suspending for the present.

SEVEN-TUBE GREBE SET
POWERFUL AND SELECTIVE

A device marking a distinct advance in radio reception is that by which variable condensers are controlled with one dial and a pigment vernier in the new Grebe Synchrophase Seven, a powerful, selective 7-tube receiver. An attractive feature of this receiver is its French marquetry panel through which dial and vernier project.

Combinations of ingenious tuned isolating circuits and fields of space-wound, binocular coils have resulted in these improvements:

Greater and more uniform signal response and selective on both the high and low wave lengths within the broadcast band.

Nullification of tendency toward oscillation.

Removal of detuning effects due to differences in vacuum tube characteristics of any one type.

Liberal tuning leeway on all below and above broadcast range.

Elimination of broad tuning effects in low wave lengths.

Accurate matching of tuning stages on all broadcast lengths.

A feature, which contributes largely to the superior performance of the set on the longer wave lengths is the use of a special insulated Litz strand for the binocular coil windings. This type of wire has a peculiar property of producing greater signal strength than solid wire on the long broadcast wave lengths.

In addition to the effect on longer wave lengths, space winding this wire produces a marked increase in selectivity on the short wave lengths, where selectivity is particularly desirable.

The well known Grebe Synchrophase Five is continued. Additions to the Grebe line are a 9-inch cone speaker and a B power unit.

MOST dissatisfaction with radio sets is caused by weak batteries or poor tubes. If the batteries are "well up" put a VOLUTRON tube in every socket and you'll hear a big difference. You'll get so much more satisfactory reception—clearer and with greater volume—that you'll simply be amazed at the wonderful improvement in your set. Surprised, too, at the absence of microphonic "bong" and other noises that have been interfering with your reception.

Buy a VOLUTRON now and try it on your set tonight. You'll be so delighted with results that you'll want one in every socket.

Gas Pipe Poor Ground Connection.

A gas pipe is not only a poor ground connection but it is even dangerous at times. Heavily induced charges, due to lightning bolts in the vicinity of the aerial, may sometimes result in minute sparks in the antenna and ground system. In the case of gas pipes there may be set up tiny sparks between joints, and if these be leaking, fire is likely to start. Again, a gas pipe has poor joints, only too often filled with high-resistance lead paint, so that such a ground offers a poor path to the weak signals.

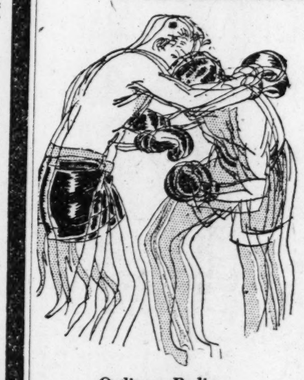
FADA Radio
Which do you want?

The old-time blurred resemblance



Ordinary Radio Reception
Now you get it—now you don't! Often blurred, indistinct and unfaithful.

"HERE they come now . . . the champion in a purple bathrobe . . . the challenger in white sweater . . . cheers . . . announcing the fighters . . . referee instructing . . . the bell . . . they're at it, folks . . . the supermen of pugilism . . ."

If you listen in via Fada Harmonated Reception—which always means a Fada set with a Fada speaker—you will get every syllable clear as a bell. Hear Fada. Note how far radio has advanced. You will be amazed at the unusual realism of Fada tone. You would not sit out a moving picture that slurred and blurred. Now there is no more need to suffer the slipshod and half-way in the radio sound picture. Any Fada dealer will prove it to you in five minutes.

SHORT-WAVE SETS HAVE ADVANTAGES

Able to Pick Up Experimental Programs Without Interference.

Amateur receiving-set builders and others who have purchased short-wave sets are finding new fields. There is a lot of entertainment on the air that many have been missing for the stations which transmit programs on short waves, below the broadcast band, are not interfered with as are the regular broadcasting stations in the congested band between 200 and 545 meters or 550 and 1500 kcys.

There are at least 36 broadcasting stations offering short-wave programs under experimental licenses. Some of them are well known like WJZ, which uses its regular instead of 2 XAR, its experimental designation; also WGY, which operates under eight experimental calls commencing with the figure 2, indicative of the second radio district; WBZ, the Springfield, Mass., station using the call 1 XAE, and KDKA, which has two short-wave transmitters, 8 XK and 8 XP.

Same as Regular Programs.

Most of these stations offer the same programs put out by their regular broadcast transmitters, a simultaneous broadcast being effected for relay purposes. Others produce special programs for listeners here and abroad.

The chief reason for such transmission is to experiment with new broadcast possibilities and to increase the range of the stations. Short-wave transmission travels to far greater distances, yet is received as clearly and with less interference than programs on the regular broadcast channels.

If listeners can pick up American programs in England, France, Belgium, Germany, Africa, South America and even New Zealand and Australia, it seems that most of us are neglecting our opportunities, when all that is required is a new receiver.

Commercially built short-wave sets covering 10 to 200 meters are available in modern radio supply stores, as are the parts for assembling receivers to cover the short waves.

Specific Channels Not Known.

The specific channels used by these stations are not known to the Department of Commerce, for they are licensed to carry on radiophone experiments on one of several channels from 26.3 to 109 meters. Most of the well-known stations are understood to be operating on five relay broadcast bands as follows: 26.3 to 27.3 meters, 30 to 33.1 meters, 52.6 to 54.5 meters, 60 to 66.3 meters and 105 to 109 meters.

Programs of the new Columbia System are to be rebroadcast on a short wave of 22.8 meters by WOWO at Fort Wayne, Ind., through a special 1000-watt short wave transmitter that will operate simultaneously with WOWO'S regular transmitter which uses 228.9 meters.

Thirty-six broadcasting stations known to be offering programs on the short-waves or high-frequencies are listed below: KDKA, 8 XK and 8 XP, Pittsburg Pa.; WGY (eight calls), 2 XAC, D, E, F, G, H, K and W, Schenectady; WBZ, 1 XAE, Springfield, Mass.; WHAM, 8 XAC, Rochester, N. Y.; WABC, 2 XE, Richmond Hill, N. Y.; WEEI, 1 XAG and 1 XAF, Boston, Mass.; WJZ, Bound Brook, N. J.; WRAH, 1 XY, Tilton, N. H.; WRNY, 2 XAL, Coatesville, N. J.; WOR, 2 XAQ, Newark, N. J.; WRMU, 2 XAG, Grebe Co., of New York; WAAM, 2 XBA, Newark, N. J.; KJBS, 6 XAR, San Francisco, Cal.; KFWB, 6 XBR, Los Angeles, Cal.; KNX, 6 XA, Los Angeles, Cal.; KFSG, 6 XBA, Los Angeles, Cal.; KHJ, 6 XAU, Los Angeles, Cal.; KFWH, 6 XAK, Chico, Cal.; KFQZ, 6 XAL, Hollywood, Cal.; KFVD, 6 XBX, Venice, Cal.; KNRC, 6 XAF, portable; KGGM, 6 XAI, Los Angeles, Cal.; KFQV, 6 XBH, Holy City, Cal.; WRAH, 1 XAA, Providence, R. I.; KFBC, 6 XBE, San Diego, Cal.; KRLO, 6 XAN, Los Angeles, Cal.; KJR, 7 XC, 7 XO, Seattle, Wash.; KWJJ, 7 XAO, Portland, Ore.; KFPY, 7 XAB, Spokane, Wash.; WEAO, 8 XJ, Columbus, O.; WLW, 8 XAL, Harrison, O.; WHK, 8 XF, Cleveland, O.; WNAL, 9 XAB, Omaha, Neb.; KOIL, 9 XU, Council Bluffs, Ia.

3 XK is the experimental call of the C. rFancis Jenkins radio laboratories at Washington, D. C.

RADIO SHOW SPACE MOSTLY TAKEN BY LEADING FACTORIES

every foot of available space has been taken by leading manufacturers of radios, cabinets and equipment. Among the announcers who will appear in the Crystal Studio during the exposition will be Graham McNamee, who also will announce the Dempsey-Tunney fight from the "ring side" at Chicago. His word picture of this event will be received at the exposition and demonstrated by two professional boxers, blow by blow.

"The Silver Masked Tenor" also will appear in the Crystal Studio, as will Allen McQuhae. A novelty will be dances by an "aerial ballet" under the direction of Edwin Easter, ballet master of the Fashion Pageant.

Plate Voltages.

The plate voltages ordinarily used in receiving sets are 16½ to 45 volts on the detector tube, 90 volts on the amplifier tubes and 135 volts and up on the power

NEW STROMBERG-CARLSON AC SETS ARE SHOWN TO DEALERS

A Stromberg-Carlson dealers' convention was held Wednesday at the Chase Hotel, where the new Stromberg-Carlson AC receivers were on display. The No. 744 radio-phonograph combination, the new No. 10 cone speaker, and the new electric pickup which can be used on any make of phonograph simply by plugging into a jack on the front of any of the new AC sets, attracted most attention.

Ray H. Manson, chief engineer, George A. Scoville, sales manager, and A. R. Royle, radio engineer, were present from the Stromberg-Carlson factory at Rochester, N. Y., where the company's 5000-watt radio station, WHAM, is located. Scoville discussed merchandising the new receivers and the Stromberg-Carlson policy, while Manson explained salient features of the new AC line.

This was the first showing of the new receivers in St. Louis, but Scoville promised early delivery of dealers' stocks. All of the new Stromberg-Carlson AC models will be on display at the St. Louis radio show Sept. 19-24.

SPEAKER WITH 17-FOOT AIR COLUMN IN USE IN ST. LOUIS

The largest loud speaker in St. Louis and possibly the largest in use regularly anywhere, except for experimental horns, is one that is creating much interest in front of the Nafr Radio Co., maker of the Slocumb "Resonator" receiver, 2320 Locust boulevard. It is of the horn type, has a 17-foot air column, and stands about 10 feet high.

It is hooked to a standard Slocumb receiver, using 201A tubes, and the volume and tone quality and the way it brings out the bass are striking. It was designed and built by Lloyd Q. Slocumb for a special display.

A feature of this giant speaker is the fact that sounds from it are plainer at a distance of a couple of hundred yards ahead than a few feet from its bell.

The speaker is used to give daytime concerts and play-by-play baseball accounts, and, generally in the evenings for broadcasting the concerts from KSD.

TRADE NOTES.

Fourteenth on the list of RCA licenses is the Bremer-Tully Mfg. Co. of Chicago, manufacturer of the B-T counterphase line of receivers. The Bremer-Tully Co. has been a pioneer in the radio field and numerous radio patents on its own inventions. It is credited with having marketed the first commercial air-core transformer, the first three-circuit tuner, the first skeleton-frame coils and the first variable primary units.

Gardner Radio and Electric Corporation, 1421 Locust street, has been appointed St. Louis and territory distributor of socket power units, manufactured by the Universal Battery Co., Chicago.

A merger of five radio manufacturing companies has been completed by formation of The United States Electric Corporation.

The United States Electric Corporation has obtained a license to operate under the patents owned by the Radio Corporation of America and its associated companies, and the Hazeltine and Latour Corporations.

The five companies which combined to form the United States Electric Corporation are: Apex Electric and Manufacturing Co., Chicago; Indiana Manufacturing and Electric Co., Marion, Ind.; Sentinel Manufacturing Co., Chicago; Slagle Radio Co., Fort Wayne, Ind., and Work-Rite Manufacturing Co., Cleveland.

The five factories are to be continued in full operation under single administrative control.

Replacement Tubes.

It is of utmost importance that the existing tube in the radio power unit be replaced by the same type of tube. The substitution of another type may lead to serious trouble.

Fluttering in the Loud Speaker.

Motorboating, or troublesome audio oscillations which cause fluttering in the loud speaker, is generally due to conditions in the audio amplifier, and may be corrected by satisfactory adjustment of the amplifier.

MAKES RADIO STATIC UNHEARD

A simple, amazing device has been invented by C. H. Geppert, L-69 Hewitt Bldg., Des Moines, Ia., which filters 50 to 90 per cent of static in radio receiving sets. Not only that, but when static is not bad, you can increase your volume tremendously, bring in more distant stations, save 30 to 40 per cent on batteries, eliminate local stations from running in, give your set at least one more stage of radio reception and greater selectivity. Works on all radios; can be attached instantly by anyone without change to set. Mr. Geppert wants agents and is willing to send a no cost sample. Write him today.

The Girl

The District Attorney

WHO KILLED ALVIN BENSON?

From the first, District Attorney Markham believed firmly in the guilt of Muriel St. Clair. But Philo Vance, his friend, laughed at him. "Y' know, Markham," he said, "I was afraid for a moment you were actually going to send for the manacles. And if you had, you'd have regretted it to your dying day.... She couldn't have done it, y' know."

Markham submitted his evidence and Vance scorned it. "Worthless," he said.

Philo Vance was convinced that indicatory or circumstantial evidence was not only useless in the solution of a crime but that it often led to the conviction of innocent persons. The only evidence he recognized was psychological.

"The murderer," he told Markham, "inevitably leaves the imprint of his personality on the crime, just as the painter leaves something of his character on the canvas."

It meant nothing to Vance that Miss St. Clair had dined with Benson late the evening of the fatal shooting; that her gloves and handbag had been found in the room with his body; that her attitude had been one of flippancy and defiance beneath the questioning of the district attorney. The girl was, to Vance's way of thinking, psychologically incapable of being Benson's murderer.

You will be amazed at the methods of Philo Vance when you read "The Benson Murder Case," by S. S. Van Dine. These methods are in themselves an innovation in detective fiction, and the working out of the complicated Benson mystery contains many new thrills for the most experienced readers of detective stories.

Philo Vance is superb. He is destined for a place in the hall of fame reserved for the immortal sleuths of fiction.

BRADSHAW BEHIND HOTEL PROJECT AT TWELFTH AND OLIVE

Building Contemplated by Promoters Would Occupy Only One-Quarter of the Block.

NO CONNECTION WITH EARLIER PROJECT

Martin L. Newberry Buys 4-Story Building at Corner of Pine and Fifteenth Streets.

By Berry Moore.

With the return of vacationists, renewed interest in real estate is manifest, and there is indication that the market will be on a more aggressive basis.

Contracts were drawn for several important corners, with negotiations practically concluded for others, during the week. These included Olive, Lindell and Pine street sites, indicating a resumption of speculative transactions in real estate on these thoroughfares. Acquisitions in several instances are identified with plans for large buildings.

Plans have been completed for a new hotel at the southwest corner of Twelfth boulevard and Olive street, it is understood. This building enterprise is projected by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect, and has no connection with the 34-story hotel formerly proposed for this site.

As contemplated, the building designed by Bradshaw, embraces only the Twelfth boulevard and Olive street quarter of this block. The Pine street quarter of the block is not available in its entirety owning to legal obstacles.

Owner of Other Hotels.

Bradshaw designed and is the chief owner of Hotel Coronado at Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue, and Hotel Mayfair at Eighth and St. Charles streets. He also designed Hotel Chase, Lindell boulevard and Kingshighway, and the Brown Hotel in Louisville, Ky.; Bradshaw's connection with the new project, accordingly, gives it a semblance of reality.

The corner portion of the site is owned by W. K. Bixby, and was formerly occupied by the old Merchants' Hotel, which was razed to make way for the widening of Olive street.

The new Missouri Pacific Building enterprise of 22 stories and two-story super-structure is under way on the west side of this block. Provision has been made for increasing the height of this structure when expansion demands it. Overlooking the Memorial Plaza, the new structure will be accessible from Olive, Pine and Thirteenth streets.

Activity on Gravois.

It was disclosed yesterday that Marin L. Newberry, vice-president of the Albert G. Blanke Real Estate Co., was the chief purchaser of the northeast corner of Fifteenth and Pine streets, 63x109 feet, negotiations for which were handled through the Schroederer-Watson Realty Co., in connection with E. L. Hartridge of the John S. Blake & Brother Realty Co. This site will face the Memorial Plaza. It is occupied by a modern four-story building.

The new Hydraulic-Press Brick tract on Gravois, Meramec and Chippewa streets, continues to attract both investors and home seekers. Seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars worth of lots in this tract of 50 acres already has been sold with indications that the total will reach $1,000,000. Prices at which it is being sold include complete surface and underground improvements, which, according to the new owners, are to be of the highest order. Stedlin Bros., in connection with David P. Leahy, purchased this tract three weeks ago through the Mercantile Trust Co., for an announced consideration of $300,000.

Plans for the up-building of this tract include many business structures on Gravois, Meramec and Chippewa street, according to Walter Brinker, office manager of the Stedlin-Leahy organization. All the corners in the tract available for business buildings were sold the first week the new addition was launched. Walter Sheehan, who has been a factor in building operations in several parts of the city, was one of the first to invest in this tract, where he plans to erect a number of apartment buildings and flats.

Chamberlain-Owings Buys Tract.

The Chamberlain-Owings Co. report having acquired for sale approximately 2500 feet on Labadie and Greer avenues between Goodfellow and Clara avenues, available for the construction of two and four family flats. The sewers and water mains are in and the streets paved with asphalt. The company also reports sale of 197 feet on Roosevelt place to Cytron & Gassmer; 126 feet to Mary C. Johnson and 90 feet to Walter Gladney.

Cunningham's Leases 30,000 Square Feet of Floor Space on Former Theater Site at Sixth and St. Charles.

Cunningham's a large ready-to-wear concern, has acquired a 15-year lease of 30,000 square feet of floor space in the new McCrory Building at Sixth and St. Charles streets. The lease embraces a large section of the first floor and the entire second and third floors. Extensive alterations are being made.

A new store front is being constructed and the second and third floors will contain a women's and misses apparel establishment.

This establishment operates now large ready-to-wear stores in Cleveland, Washington, D. C. Lima, Pa., and New York City.

Architectural plans for reconstruction have been designed by Pleitch & Price, Arcade Building. Construction work is being done by Wimmer Construction Co. The new store is expected to be in operation about Oct. 1.

The building, recently completed, was erected by the McCrory Chain Stores Corporation, which has a 99-year lease on the site. An annual net rental of $110,000, or 4 per cent on a valuation of $2,750,000, was prescribed by the lease.

Two theaters, the Columbia and the Strand, formerly occupied the ground, which was purchased five years ago by Charles J. Cella and Frank R. Tate, proprietors of the theaters, for $458,000. The increase in the ground values was one of the most remarkable in the records of downtown St. Louis. Cella and Tate shared in the surprise caused by the great enhancement in the value of their holding. The present McCrory building has four stories, but the foundations were laid to support a building of 20 stories or more, and it is expected that the other stories will be added in time.

The lease is significant of the importance attached to the Sixth street highway between Locust and Washington avenue. Kline's likewise is making extensive alterations on their Sixth street side.

LINDELL APARTMENTS TO BE OPENED NOV. 1

The seven-story fireproof apartment building at 4066 Lindell boulevard, convenient to the Grand avenue shopping and amusement district, is nearly complete. It will bear the name of "Forty Sixty-six Lindell."

It contains 68 apartments with two and three rooms, dressing closets, Murphy beds and the most modern and complete equipment. The service includes gas electricity, refrigeration, elevator service, a beautiful lobby with switchboard and an office with an attendant on duty at all times.

The building will be under the management of the F. J. Cornwall Real Estate Co. and will be ready for occupancy Nov. 1.

HOTEL PALMER LEASED FOR ACCOMMODATION OF NEGROES

Hotel Palmer, Jefferson and Washington avenue, has been leased by Harry L. Israel hotel broker of St. Louis. It will be turned into a first-class hotel for Negroes about Sept. 14. It has 150 rooms and 150 baths. Is one of the most modern hotels in the country. The lease was made by Frank Yawitz Realty Co., Israel turned the house into a Negro hotel because of the shortage of hotels for that race in St. Louis. The hotel has been newly furnished and redecorated throughout.

ROBBER GETS $151 IN HOLDUP OF GROCER AND WAGON DRIVER

A robber entered the grocery store of Joseph J. Grote at 3900 Wyoming street yesterday afternoon, took $86 from Grote's cash register and $65 from Clarence Schuwan, a bread wagon driver.

Grote was in the store with his two small sons, when the robber, with drawn revolver, entered. As the robber finished rifling the cash drawer, Schuwan came in and the robber, after searching him, ran to a small dilapidated touring car at the curb and drove rapidly away.

CANTON TEA GARDEN GETS LEASE AT EIGHTH AND OLIVE

The Canton Tea Garden Co. has leased for 10 years the second floor of the building at Eighth and Olive streets where it will install Tea Garden No. 2. The decorations will be of the Oriental design. The Martin & Breitt Real Estate Co. negotiated the lease for the Woolworth Co.

SIGNAL HILL NOT TO BE TOWN

Residents Defeat Incorporation by Vote of 122 to 110.

By a vote of 122 to 110, Signal Hill, a residential suburb of East St. Louis, yesterday defeated a move to incorporate the district. A straw vote taken last week was overwhelmingly in favor of incorporation but many of those who advocated incorporation failed to go to the polls yesterday.

AMERICAN CLAIMS $10,000,000 ESTATE LEFT BY 'MAD MARIA'

First From U. S. to Enter Fight for English Fortune That Reverted to Crown in 1798.

By the Associated Press.

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., Sept. 10.—An American, William Henry Knight, Los Angeles merchant, has bobbed up among the hundreds of claimants for the $10,000,000 estate of Maria L'Epine, who died here insane in 1798. Knight is the first American to lay claim to the great wealth of "Mad Maria." The list of claimants includes persons from various walks of life, from scrubwomen to Lords.

The clerk of the Chancery Court at London asserts that dozens of other Americans consider themselves the logical heirs and are preparing to claim the millions.

Maria's father was a French weaver, who came to England as a Huguenot refugee. He amassed a fortune in his factory at Spitalgate. Knight traces his relationship to Abiball Eccles, a daughter of Maria. He is a cousin of A. C. Mason, who with his three sisters, all of London, is reputed to be furnishing a large part of the money to prosecute the claims of his cousins.

Maria left $350,000. Because of her insanity and lack of proof of her marriage, the fortune reverted to the Crown. George Third gave it to Admiral Lord Howe of Revolutionary activity, on condition that it be restored in the event a rightful claimant appeared. That was 129 years ago and interest has increased it to its present volume.

Two Flats Reported Sold.

The August C. Beckemeier Realty Co. reports having closed the following sales: Six-family flat at 2721-23-25 McDonald street for Ludwig Gleiforst to Michael J. O'Rourke, and a four-family flat at 4221-23 Juniata street for Ludwig Gleiforst to Adam Rettinger.

198 QUALIFY FOR LIFEGUARDS IN RED CROSS CAMPAIGN

400 Persons Received Instruction During "Make the Water Safe" Week.

The annual "Make the Water Safe" campaign of the St. Louis Chapter, American Red Cross, closed last week, more than 400 persons having received free life saving instruction at the Marquette and Sherman municipal pools under the direction of Fred W. Potthoff and Mrs. Josephine Potthoff. Of these, 198 passed the tests and were awarded Red Cross life saving emblems and certificates.

Banks of the Meramec River and other streams were posted with warning cards against swimming hazards, and special surveys were made of danger points along the river.

The Meramec River Red Cross Patrol, composed of 14 volunteer life guards, was organized and a total of 350 hours' free service was given by the members.

Harry G. Erbs of 3940 Michigan avenue, a member of the patrol, will be recommended by the St. Louis chapter for the national Red Cross Life Medal, given for heroism to volunteer members of the Red Cross Life Saving Corps. Labor day, while patrolling Lincoln Beach, he saved a young woman.

Let's Talk it Over

A RARE HOME
You do not often find a small home, built of the best materials by master craftsmen and in a highly restricted beautiful residential park. Most small houses are on unmade side streets, far removed from all modern conveniences and neighbored by people who are satisfied with this environment. No. 28, Sunset Court in Pasadena Park, is a real home in a wonderful setting. Price $10,350. Easy terms.
On Florissant Road, just off Natural Bridge at the big red water tower.

OUSTED EMPLOYE HELD FOR PRISON SHORTAGE

Former Accountant Accused of Embezzling Two Checks — Gives Bond for Hearing.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 10.—J. H. Tucker of Jefferson City, former accountant at the State penitentiary, today was bound over to the Cole County Circuit Court on two charges of embezzlement from prison funds, aggregating $4345, following a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace John Leslie. He gave $4000 bond for his appearance at the October term of court.

Tucker is charged with embezzling $4345 from the convict token fund, which represents deposits covering brass tokens used by convicts for currency. The charges involve a check for $1751 from Buchanan County for support of inmates at the Boonville reformatory, and a check for $2594 from the State Highway Department for stone purchased from the prison quarries. It was alleged these checks were diverted to the token fund to cover an alleged shortage there.

Tucker was dismissed from the penitentiary on last June 1, the Penal Board announcing he had been removed in a reorganization of the accounting force on a basis of economy. He had been a witness in the Senate investigation of the prison management last winter and his testimony was not considered favorable to the Penal Board.

At the preliminary hearing the defense developed from State witnesses that six or seven persons, including several convicts, had access to Tucker's books and that at different times other persons also had access to the books and the cash that he handled.

The two checks bore rubber stamp indorsements of the State Penal Board. No credit was given on the books for the $1751 check from Buchanan County. The Highway Department was credited with the $2594, but the control ledger balance was forced by exactly $2594 to cover the amount in cash that it was short, it was testified. These ledger sheets were kept by a convict under Tucker's supervision, it was stated.

Witnesses for the State were unable positively to identify the writing on the deposit slip as Tucker's and were unable to show that he ever actually had possession of the checks.

Man, 75, Badly Hurt by Auto.

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., Sept. 10.—Joseph Clements, 75 years old, of East Murphysboro, was seriously injured when struck by an automobile on the State Highway east of here this evening. He is reported to have walked directly into the path of an automobile which was going in the same direction. Following the accident he was removed to the hospital here.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY PROBLEMS DISCUSSED

Congressman Rathbone Says Action Must Be Taken at Once on Major Issues.

Agricultural relief, flood control and waterway development demand immediate action, for the Mississippi Valley faces loss of some of its representation in Congress, Representative Henry R. Rathbone, Congressman-at-large for Illinois, said here yesterday.

Congressman Rathbone has spent the summer studying the aforementioned problems in Illinois. He is making a several days' survey of the conditions in the vicinity of East St. Louis and Alton.

"Congress faces a reapportionment," he explained. "We voted it down in the last Congress. I voted against it, myself, principally because I believed it important that these questions be considered first. If we have a reapportionment some valley states will lose numbers in Congress, while the representation of the industrial East will be increased.

"Diminished numbers would mean diminished political power. If we're going to do anything to relieve agriculture, prevent disastrous floods and build up our waterways, we should do it in the next session."

He expressed confidence in early completion of the planned nine-foot waterway from Chicago to the Gulf, which would give St. Louis all-water freight transportation to Chicago.

"In many years of studying this problem," he continued, "I have been most impressed with the fact that the interest of the whole Valley is the same. Waterways development means the same thing for Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans and every city in the Mississippi Valley.

"The East has gained a great advantage over us through the Panama Canal. By means of the canal the East can ship to cities on the Pacific Coast, the west coast of South America, or even the Orient, where dwells half the human family, more cheaply than we can.

"If the inland waterways are developed, East and West will compete on an equal basis. The Mississippi Valley will have the same advantage of inexpensive water transportation that the East has now, and I believe that the Valley states, with their natural resources and virile people, will again be able to hold their own."

Infantile Paralysis Closes Schools.

Health Commissioner Barnhart after a conference with the State Board of Health said he deemed it advisable to close the schools and other gatherings of children have been postponed. Only one case has appeared in Moberly.

THIRD PRISONER STILL FREE AFTER ESCAPE FROM HOSP

Two Others Are Captured in Precinct; Sawed Through Window Bars.

Two of three prisoners who escaped early yesterday from a ward on the third floor of Hospital by sawing window and letting themselves down a rope made of sheets, were captured within 10 minutes. The third prisoner, George Appleton, of Schroth, 23 years old, of 1 Knapp street, recently sentenced 25 years in the penitentiary for burglary, is still at large.

The two who were captured are Earl Cavanaugh, 18, held on a felony charge, and Michael Sarb, 25, under sentence of six months in the workhouse for automobile theft and forgery.

The escape was discovered at 2:45 a. m. by Patrolman Patrick Duffy, watchman at the door. He heard a commotion inside and found the sawed bars and rope. He gave the alarm and Patrolman Laume and Schwetz a few minutes later captured Cavanaugh and Sarbkins in the vicinity. The third would not tell where they obtained the saws with which they cut the half-inch bars, but said they used oil while sawing to prevent noise.

Appleton was accused of 11 previous offenses and five business house burglaries.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

C. A. S.—The half dollars of the four dates you mention are each valued at 50 to 55 cents.

DUTCH.—The telegraph companies in St. Louis teach telegraphy. Requirements for entrance to the classes may be had on application.

E. B.—Spectacular is pronounced with short "e" and with short "a" in the syllable "tac," accenting the second syllable, according to Webster. E as in debt, A as in tact, with U as in unite.

DOT.—The nurses' training schools connected with the hospitals will furnish the information on requirements to take up the work. It is better to apply to them directly than to have to go over the subject twice.

MARY.—Classes in interior decorating have been taught by the universities here and when they are in session you may enroll in such a class. We would say that artistic ability and a good general education are the qualifications to begin with.

THANK YOU.—The word diem is pronounced with the "i" as "e" in deep, the "e" being short "e" as in let, according to the pronunciation of Latin, in which language this word is found. It means day and is usually used with "per" to mean by the day, or daily.

DORIS A.—The expression "Translated into all foreign languages including Scandinavian," may have been used in a publication in which people speaking the language are especially interested. Write again, stating where you saw the words, and we may give fuller information.

W. E. M.—The organization you refer to may have been called a political organization at any time but there would be no authoritative way of classing the body as such unless it put forth a candidate. The laws creating the Board of Education of Consolidated School Districts may be found in Revised Statutes of Missouri, 1919, at the public library.

GRATEFUL.—Since the marriage you mention occurred several months ago, we suggest that you let friends outside the family whom you do not expect to invite to the house find it out in the usual way. It would not be inappropriate to tell the news informally to a group of friends invited to the home.

BOB.—You ask if it is appropriate for a young miss to send a healthy gentleman roses for his birthday. We answer it is not appropriate for her to send any present to him unless she is engaged to marry him and then it is not expected. If a small present is sent, as is sometimes done at Christmas or on special occasion, it should be from the young girl and her mother.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association)

SAM.—Consult a lawyer personally and go over the details of your questions with him.

GO-BETWEEN.—The couple you mention can go through another marriage ceremony now if they wish.

CURIOUS.—The innocent victim of a bigamous marriage need not obtain a divorce, but she should have the marriage annulled before she marries again.

WONDERING—The loan company will have to pay the bill in the first place if they file a lien against the property; but the loan company can then sue you for the amount.

G. H.—The children of first cousins are third cousins to each other, but are sometimes called second cousins. Both second and third cousins can legally marry in Missouri.

E. M. C.—You could compel your husband to support the children. If you are sick you can go to a doctor and your husband will be liable for the doctor's bill. If you want a divorce, consult a lawyer.

PUZZLED.—As to whether or not you must pay rent until the end of the lease, this is a fairly close question. We suggest that you consult a lawyer, show him the lease, and let him try to adjust the matter.

N. P. F.—A marriage under an assumed name is a legal marriage.

J. R. S.—Report the facts to the police and ask them to put a stop to the annoyance. This refers to the question asked about a neighborhood being disturbed in the early morning.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

NOMAD.—For the oily skin use witch hazel, two ounces; alcohol, two ounces; resorcin, 40 grains; distilled water, two ounces. Mix and apply night and morning.

A WIDOW—Most certainly your case will be cared for properly treated at the Barnard Hospital, Theresa and Washington avenues. By all means call there.

WISE—We feel fully warranted in answering you that there is no possibility of pregnancy under the conditions you mention. This refers to question in which age is given.

SKYLARK—Mix the following in an ointment and rub on the nose night and morning. Powdered sulphur, one drachm; powdered starch, two and one-half drachms; oxide of zinc ointment, one and one-half ounces; oil of rose, five drops. Also abstain from greasy food, coffee, alcoholics, and take systematic out-door exercise and correct constipation.

M. N. M.—Aside from proper trimming by a chiropodist (foot doctor), which will sometimes effect a cure in ingrown nails, an operation by a skilled surgeon and preferably a plastic surgeon, is the only other means we can suggest. If you wish and will send stamped envelope we will direct you to some one for this service. We give the treatment below for pimples, which applies also to the treatment of blackheads. The best results in the treatment of pimples are secured by combined internal and external medication, as the following internally: Tincture nux vomica, one and one-half drachms; tincture of aloes, one and one-half drachms; fluid extract of cascara, one-half ounce; compound tincture of cardoman, six ounces; mix well. Take dose is one teaspoonful in a wine glass of water after each meal. The external medication is sulphate of zinc and sulphide of potash, of each one-half drachm; rose water, four ounces; mix, shake well and apply locally at night after a thorough cleansing of the parts affected. The sediment may be washed off in the morning.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Christ Finke, who departed this life Sept. 8, 1917.

Ten long and lonesome years,
The time it goes so slow,
And how my heart is aching
No one will ever know.
Once our hearts were gay and happy,
When I had my loved one here,
Now my heart is sad and lonely
For the one that loved me only.
Sadly missed by
MRS. MARIE FINKE AND DAUGHTER,
MRS. A. MERKEL.

In loving memory of Ferdinand I. G. Knittel, who departed this life Sept. 13, 1926.

Dear husband and father, can it be true,
One year has passed since God called you?
The call was short, the shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear.
When evening shades are falling and we are sitting alone
In our heart there comes a longing if you could only see our home.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND DAUGHTERS.

In memory of Robert and June Pohlmann, Sept 8th and 12th, 1926, dear children of Fred and Anna Pohlmann:

God wanted them where His young ones meet.
They walk with Him in the golden street,
They had grown too fair, they had grown too sweet.
For on earth they used to live in.
So the King called down from the angels' home.
My darlings arise and come to the place prepared in the Father's home.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Marguerite Hausdorf, passed away Sept. 9, 1926.

We are lonely but for mother,
In the year that's passed away
And we know she'll always guide us
Till we meet again some day.
Happily reunited with her pal, my father dear,
In the beautiful isle of somewhere
They await their children dear.
Mother,

SPECIALTY SALESMEN

A midwest manufacturer with national and world-wide business and with one of the largest earning sales forces in the country has exceptional openings in Illinois and Missouri.
Our company is 31 years old and our business is bigger than ever this year.

A BRAND-NEW PRODUCT

has just been added to our present line of high-grade specialties. Our products are nationally known.

MERCHANTS

Sixty-eight different lines, so this is not real estate, bonds, clubs, etc.
Our salesmen earn $400 to $1500 a month in Our premises. Commissions are paid on receipt of order.
If you are between 25 and 50 years of age you are ambitious to work and make considerably more than the average—want the opportunity to grow with a growing company, and a well established company you should investigate this permanent connection.
Due to change in policy we will promote a number of men to executive positions in the next six months. You can be one of them.
Our salesmanager, Mr. J. S. Brentlinger, will be in St. Louis to interview Monday, Sept. 12, Jefferson Hotel. MAin 4600. Phone for appointment from 9:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

THEY MAKE MONEY

One of our salesmen is averaging more than $2000 a month in commissions. Three men averaged over $1000 each during the past thirty days, others making better than $500 a month. Why? Because they are selling land adjacent to General Electric's plant—the most attractive real estate investment we have ever known in the 20 years in St. Louis. We furnish our men good, live leads, good prospects created by our newspaper and mail advertising campaign. We believe the time of a good salesman is too valuable to waste in tramping the streets hunting prospects. Can use three more good men. See me between 10 and 2.

THE ENGLISH CHANNEL FROM THE AIR

By D. R. Fitzpatrick

THIS is a study made by Mr. Fitzpatrick, whose daily cartoons appear in the Post-Dispatch, from notes taken while journeying by plane from London to Paris, during a recent trip to Europe. In this impression the artist was looking down upon the deck of a merchant steamer, near the sand spit which is the last bit of land on the English coast before the open channel is reached along the regular air route to Paris. He also has caught in his impression two clouds that floated below the plane.

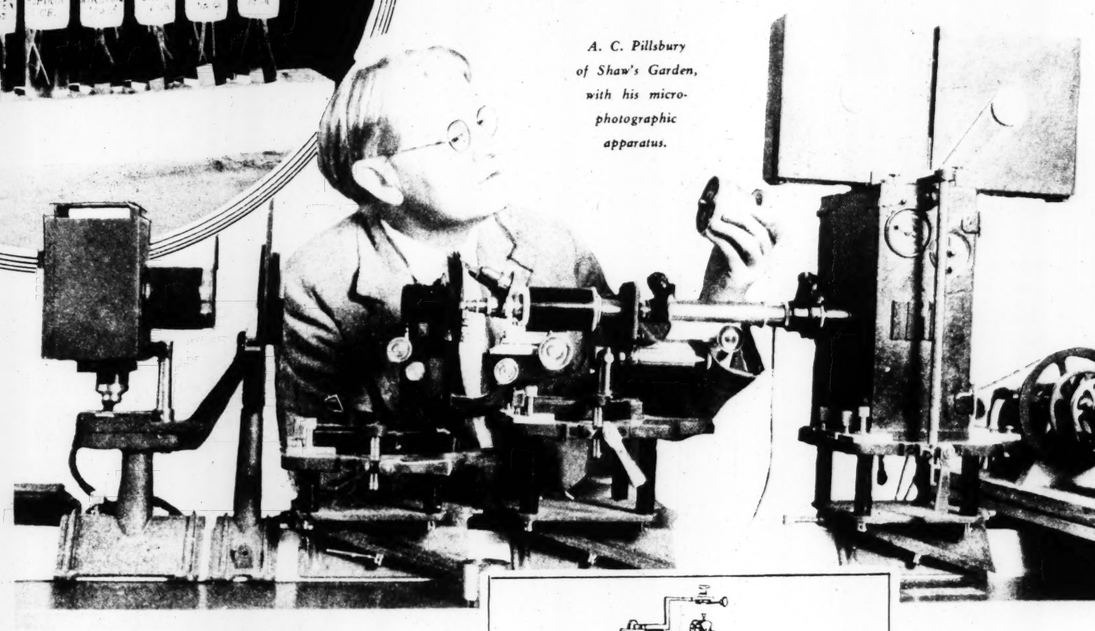
Seeking—in Plants—the Source of LIFE and DEATH

Newest Experiments of Pillsbury, Bose and Others and How They Tend to Show That Cabbages and Kings Are Relatives.

Flowers being photographed to show how they react to drugs.



A. C. Pillsbury of Shaw's Garden, with his micro-photographic apparatus.

Sir Jagadis Chunder Bose.

By M. W. CHILDS

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

EXTRAORDINARY facts about the vegetable world, linking it as never before with animals and with the human race in both structure and behavior, have been learned in a series of experiments by patient scientists. The experiments, employing the most delicate of recording instruments, still are in progress. They give promise not only of sensational discoveries for the increase of man's physical comfort but also of illuminating such a dark secret as the source of life.

Some of these new additions to human knowledge were disclosed at the recent Plant Science Seminar held at Shaw's Garden in St. Louis. Others represent the triumphs of scientists abroad, for the investigation is world-wide.

The "waking" and "sleeping" periods of plants, their sensitive response to stimuli of various sorts, including alcohol, and the phenomena of their death are among the revelations which seem to bind together much more closely all forms of life upon the earth.

In his paper presented at the seminar Dr. Albert Schneider, dean of the School of Pharmacy of North Pacific College, Portland, Oregon, outlined three lines of research tending to prove that cabbages really are related to Kings. At the same time, A. C. Pillsbury, who has recently come to Shaw's Garden, is recording, by means of motion picture cameras, combined with microscopes that magnify up to a hundred thousand times, secrets of growth and of death in plant and cell that no one ever before has been able to observe.

OF LONGEST standing is the research of Sir Jagadis Chunder Bose. Working in his laboratories in the Bose Institute at Calcutta, India, he has charted by means of the most delicate mechanisms all the circumstances surrounding the death of plants from gradual decline of their activities under the action of poison or drugs to the final death spasm. And he finds these phenomena strikingly similar to those that occur when a man or an animal dies. Observed by means of the remarkable process of magnification that Bose has worked out, the death of a carrot becomes almost as dramatic as that of a human being.

"The barriers which seemed to separate kindred phenomena will be found to have vanished, the plant and the animal appearing as a multiform unity in a single ocean of being," Bose writes in the preface to his recently published volume, "Plant Autographs and Their Revelations."

Bose has devised a number of very complex instruments to record various plant reactions. One records the sleep of plants, another the response to sensation—delicate movements comparable to the twitching of an animal's muscles—still another records the rate of growth from minute to minute by magnifying this infinitesimal movement a hundred million times, so that a snail's pace seems faster than the rate of revolution of the earth, and still another charts the plant's response to electrical stimulation.

"Plants go through a daily cycle of sensibility and insensibility which may be aptly described as waking and sleeping," Bose writes. "I may briefly enumerate some of the factors which cause sleep, or insensibility, of the plant. The plant becomes insensitive under prolonged darkness; lowering of temperature has even a more pronounced effect in depressing the excitability.

"Mimosa (the commonest species of sensitive plant) is a late riser; this will be seen more clearly in the complete record for 24 hours. This record was commenced at 5 p. m. and taken every hour of day and night for 24 hours. The plant was fully awake for the first two hours. It became somewhat sleepy between 9 p. m. and 2 a. m., but was still awake at 6 a. m., after which it fell sound asleep, and remained so until past 8 a. m.

"Rousseau told us that modern life is decadent and that the only hope of salvation was a return to the primitive life. Surely we could not go back to anything more primitive and unspoilt than unsophisticated plant life. And yet what are the facts? Apparently Mimosa has forestalled the dissipated life of the modern Babylons of London, Paris and New York, keeping up all night and going to bed only after the rising of the sun."

Concerning his experiments in applying regularly recurring electrical shocks of the same intensity to various plants, Bose says:

"As regards sensitiveness in ordinary plants, we cannot imagine anything more stolid and undemonstrative than a carrot. It is a revelation to find how excitable it is, and how vigorous and uniform are its successive responses even through a long period.

"The carrot has been shown to give a long series of uniform responses. Certain plants, on the other hand, are easily fatigued, celery for instance. But all plants show fatigue when the intervening periods of rest are shortened."

BOSE succeeded in devising a death recorder by which the dying plant records its exact death point. A sensitive plant is put in a bath of warm water, the temperature of which is gradually raised, while by a line, scratched on a smoked glass, the plant records its varying reactions.

"The experiment was commenced at 25 degrees Centigrade," Bose states. "The effect of increasing warmth of the bath on the plant, as on ourselves, is an expansive relaxation, and the curve is seen to move downwards. This continues until we note a short pause in the movement at about 60 degrees Centigrade (about 117 degrees Fahrenheit). Then a sudden spasm—the death spasm—occurs, the recording lever being jerked up with convulsive violence. The entire record is the curve of life and death. If the plant be cooled before the point at which the death spasm is reached, it survives; but once that point is passed, there can be no recovery. It was at the sharp turning point that the conflict between life and death was decided.

"In young and vigorous specimens this death throe is very violent; with advancing age it is less so. In extreme old age the record of the curve of life passes almost imperceptibly into that of death.

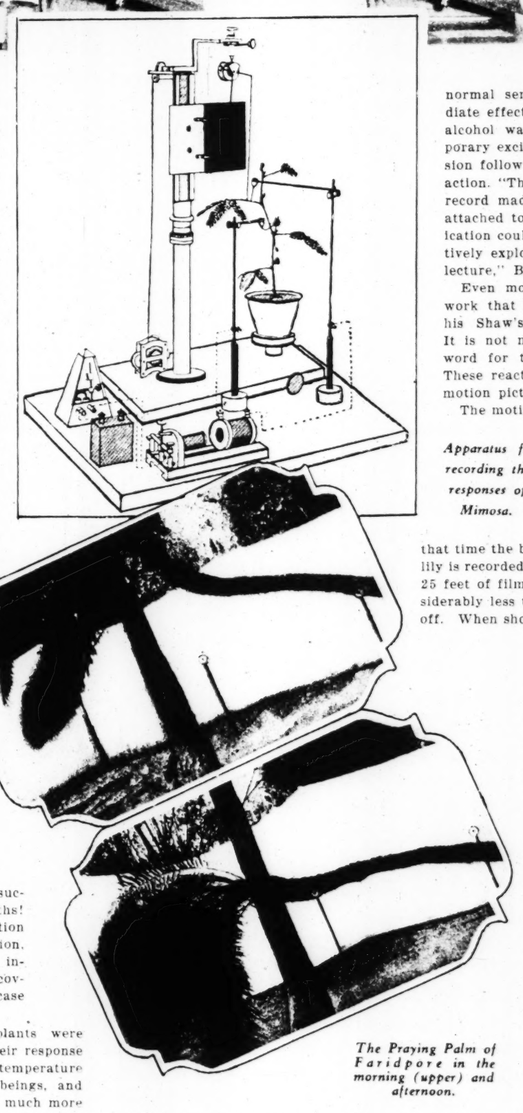
"If the plant has been fatigued by previous overstimulation, the death point is reached at a lower temperature. In a particular case the fatigued plant died at 37 degrees Centigrade, the death point being thus lowered as much as 22 degrees."

Many hundreds of experiments on dying plants led Bose to believe that intense excitation occurs in the tissue at death. His work so far has led him to the following generalization:

"Certain considerations seem to show that the phenomena of life and death are not entirely antithetic, but that there is a continuity which bridges over the chasm. After each shock the organism becomes irresponsive or dazed for a time, after which it gradually recovers. The duration of insensibility is prolonged with the intensity of the shock. Sensibility and insensibility—tokens of life and death—thus alternate. Our life is in reality a succession of incipient deaths! From a moderate stimulation there is a quick restoration, but after an excessively intense shock there is no recovery. Death is an extreme case of stimulation."

He discovered that plants were much more sensitive in their response to changes in light and temperature than animals or human beings, and also that plants responded much more readily to electrical stimulus. His tests showed that they were able to feel an electrical shock that the ordinary man would not perceive at all.

"In all this," Bose says, "we see how humanlike is plant behavior. In certain respects, the plant may even be found superhuman! I was awakened to this one day when taking a record of Mimosa in my laboratory. The response I was getting was uniform; but all of a sudden, there was a depression, for which I could at first discover no cause, since all the surrounding conditions appeared to be unchanged. On looking out of the window, however, I noticed a wisp of cloud passing across the sun. The plant had perceived the slight darkening, which I had not noticed. As the cloud passed by, the plant recovered its normal exuberance, as the record shows."



Apparatus for recording the responses of Mimosa.

The Praying Palm of Faridpore in the morning (upper) and afternoon.

All of Bose's instruments are so devised that no human factor enters into the recording. A moving lever that writes on smoked glass is attached by a series of adjustments that increase the mechanical force—amplify it, that is—to some part of the plant.

Application of ether showed that the plant began to lose its excitability just as a person loses consciousness after etherization. Blowing off the ether vapor, the plant gradually regained its normal sensibility. The immediate effect of a dilute vapor of alcohol was to produce a temporary excitability, but a depression followed from its continued action. "The ludicrous, unsteady record made by the lever when attached to a plant under intoxication could, no doubt, be effectively exploited in a temperance lecture," Bose observes.

Even more significant is the work that Pillsbury is doing in his Shaw's Garden laboratory. It is not necessary to take his word for the plant's reactions. These reactions are set down in motion picture films.

The motion picture cameras in his laboratory are so adjusted as to grind on continuously for 24 hours, say, at a speed so slow that in that time the blossoming of a water lily is recorded. The result is about 25 feet of film which requires considerably less than a minute to run off. When shown on the screen the flower bursts into bloom as beautifully as a skyrocket explodes against the night sky. Many of his films are in color.

He has taken films of plants sleeping, growing, reacting to ether, alcohol and many other stimuli, similar to those employed by Bose. He has photographed flowers going to seed and plants in the death throes.

But more important is the work he has done—for the most part merely a beginning of what he expects to do—in the photography of organisms which may only be seen with a microscope. For example, the division of cells. The division of cells in the yeast plant, which was what Pillsbury used in his experiments, requires about 24 hours for completion. No scientist had ever observed the entire process for the simple reason that it is humanly impossible to keep one's eye at the lens of a microscope for that length of time. Pillsbury has recorded this division on a motion picture film. The evolution of minute granules of pollen he has also been able to record.

Two other distinct lines of research, relating plants to animals in other respects, were outlined by Dr. Schneider.

Gordonoff and his students in Germany have scientifically demonstrated the close affinity between the red corpuscles in animals and human beings and the green chlorophyll granules in plants. There is a close chemical affinity between the two. Also the spectrum analysis — comparative study under a prism—shows a very close relationship in their physical structure.

As a result of their investigation it was found that the introduction of chlorophyll into the blood stream of an animal showed a marked generally stimulating effect. This has led to the introduction in the drug trade of chlorophyll tablets, called chlorosan.

Bose had previously discovered in plants a tissue that corresponded very closely to the heart in lower animals. This is the vascular cortex, a ring of cells extending throughout the plant, that sends the stream of chlorophyll pulsating rhythmically through the entire organism.

The other leading investigator in the plant-animal field is Monolieff, a Russian, who proved that there was a difference between the blood of male and female of the human species, using a series of test reagents. If the blood tested is that of a man the color disappears, if that of a woman it remains.

Monolieff had come to believe with Gordonoff in the similarity between the red corpuscles and the chloroplid granules. He decided that if the analogy was true then his tests for the blood of human beings should also hold true for the chlorophyll of plants.

This was found to be the case for those plants that have the pistil in one flower and the stamen in another.

SOME of the broad implications of these studies as applied to human life are hinted at by Bose. He points to the fact which he has demonstrated that by means of certain types of electrical charges the nerves of plants can be so affected that they will not transmit sensation—even a strong sensation that might otherwise cause a shock to the entire system of the plant. He points out the similar influence of ether on the nerves of animals and human beings and raises the question of whether or not it would not be possible to save ourselves from shocks of one kind and another by keeping our nerves in a state in which they will not transmit sensations. Not by ether or drugs but by the will power, in which Bose sees a force that man has never used to anything approaching its full power.

He also points out that, with another type of electric charge, plant nerves can be so affected that they will transmit sensations that would not otherwise be felt, the human inference being that it would be possible to so utilize the nervous system that sounds, for example, now imperceptible, would become audible.

What discoveries relating to human behavior may yet be discovered in the delicate organisms of the plant world no one can predict, according to Dr. Schneider. Once it was believed that plants were utterly dissimilar from humans and animals. Now that science has exploded this theory there seems no limit to which the boundaries of man's relationship with the universe may not be pushed.

CHICAGO had a bit of Monte Carlo, of Biarritz, of Deauville, right in the midst of its terribly exclusive North Shore district; Chicago had great, vari-colored umbrellas, umbrellas in the best Lido fashion; Chicago had a French kitchen, wine, champagne, roulette tables; Sophie Tucker, they say, dropping $7500 at a sitting, Sophie Tucker saying she didn't drop $7500 at a sitting; a Milwaukee rich man losing $50,000 in a few days' play, a professional dropping $20,000 in one session; lights, music, laughter, cars, liveried attendants, crap tables, luxury, men in dinner coats, women in evening gowns, $200,000 in chips in the gaming rooms. Yes, Chicago had all this, it had, it had, but this it has no more.

Yes, the Newport Beach Bowling Club was a little bit of the Continent set in the heart of Chicago. The Newport Beach Bowling Club, upon which Messrs. "Big Tim" Murphy and "Nicky" Arnstein expended $500,000 trying to give Chicago an up-to-date casino worthy of Europe itself, was discovered by the police to do its bowling entirely with ivory cubes. Whereupon the police struck the death blow. They struck it with an axe right on the front door of the club.

Mr. Arnstein, it will be recalled, at one time sojourned at the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas. Mr. Murphy likewise visited there for two years on one occasion. Mr. Arnstein was invited there by the Government for his offices in a $5,000,000 Liberty Bond robbery in New York, while Mr. Murphy gained entree to the institution due to his connection with the $886,000 Chicago mail robbery in 1921. Messrs. Arnstein and Murphy met at Leavenworth and there they formed a beautiful friendship. The Newport Beach Bowling Club was the fruit of their union.

NOW, gambling establishments are not exactly new to Chicago. No. Conservative estimates—conservative, mind you—place the number in operation here now at between 300 to 2000. But where before in Chicago has there been an establishment of such genteel magnificence as that due to the largess of Messrs. Arnstein and Murphy? No place.

First of all, the setting of the Newport Beach Bowling Club was perfect.

the close affinity between the red corpuscles in animals and human beings and the green chlorophyll granules in plants. There is a close chemical affinity between the two. Also the spectrum analysis — comparative study under a prism—shows a very close relationship in their physical structure.

As a result of their investigation it was found that the introduction of chlorophyll into the blood stream of an animal showed a marked generally stimulating effect. This has led to the introduction in the drug trade of chlorophyll tablets, called chlorosan.

Bose had previously discovered in plants a tissue that corresponded very closely to the heart in lower animals. This is the vascular cortex, a ring of cells extending throughout the plant, that sends the stream of chlorophyll pulsating rhythmically through the entire organism.

The other leading investigator in the plant-animal field is Monoiloff, a Russian, who proved that there was a difference between the blood of male and female of the human species, using a series of test reagents. If the blood tested is that of a man the color disappears, if that of a woman it remains.

Monoileff had come to believe with Gordonoff in the similarity between the red corpuscles and the chlorophyll granules. He decided that if the analogy was true then his tests for the blood of human beings should also hold true for the chlorophyll of plants.

This was found to be the case for those plants that have the pistil in one flower and the stamen in another.

Lights, music, liveried attendants—the last word in luxury! This was the Newport Beach Bowling Club, situated on Chicago's North Shore.

Mr. Arnstein, it will be recalled, at one time sojourned at the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas. Mr. Murphy likewise visited there for two years on one occasion. Mr. Arnstein was invited there by the Government for his offices in a $5,000,000 Liberty Bond robbery in New York, while Mr. Murphy gained entree to the institution due to his connection with the $886,000 Chicago mail robbery in 1921. Messrs. Arnstein and Murphy met at Leavenworth and there they formed a beautiful friendship. The Newport Beach Bowling Club was the fruit of their union.

NOW, gambling establishments are not exactly new to Chicago. No. Conservative estimates—conservative, mind you—place the number in operation here now at between 300 to 2000. But where before in Chicago has there been an establishment of such genteel magnificence as that due to the largess of Messrs. Arnstein and Murphy? No place.

First of all, the setting of the Newport Beach Bowling Club was perfect. Was it the like of other dens and haunts of gambling? It certainly wasn't. Did one sneak down back alleys to achieve disreputable entrance? Not at all. When Arnstein and Murphy searched the Chicago horizon for the home of the Newport Beach Bowling Club, Arnstein and Murphy wanted something noble. And they found just the place they wanted in the former home of the late Peter Reinberg, sometime wealthy head of the Cook County Board. The Reinberg mansion was at 5643 Sheridan road. Mr. Reinberg had gone to great expense in building his place. The doorknobs were of gold, all of them; so were the bath tubs, of which a number were scattered around the three floors of the house.

Still stands the Reinberg mansion, an imposing affair. But its style is considered by other North Shore residents to be, oh, just a little out of date. Therefore, Arnstein and Murphy had no trouble getting the place at a bargain. They paid through their manager, one William H. Wertheimer of Detroit and New York, $40,000 for the house, which had cost a lot more than that to build. Of course, the $40,000 included the gold doorknobs and the gold bath tubs.

ARNSTEIN and Murphy set to work. Refurnish, they did, the old place from cellar to garret. About $450,000 was spent in furbishing it anew—in redecorating, new carpets, paintings, draperies, furniture and gambling paraphernalia. An elaborate French kitchen was installed. The cellars, neglected, were brought to new life; in them rare vintages, wines and liqueurs found homes: 'Tis said a small fortune went into the contents of those cellars.

And the grounds. They were not neglected. Green and white awnings graced the windows. Lawns were terraced. Lido umbrellas were put here and there around the gardens in the rear, Lido umbrellas in the most approved Continental style. And under them were set dainty tea tables, where one might sit and sip.

Even before the advent of the Messrs. Arnstein and Murphy there were the sloping grounds behind the house that descended gently to a sea wall, against which the waves of Lake Michigan beat in a refined manner at high tide. Ah, that was just how Messrs. Arnstein and Murphy would have it. Sort of Monte Carlo like. Gay lanterns were hung above the gently sloping lawn and the appearance was said to have been elegant.

Again the beneficence of Monsieurs Murphy and Arnstein calls our attention. Was there a charge for the choice dishes and beverages offered at Newport? Ah, no. Uniformed maids and tuxedoed waiters dispensed without cost the palatable drinkables and the tasty dishes prepared by a French chef. And one made one's choice from off a neatly printed wine list and menu which were distributed for the pleasure of the guests. Here are the "suggestions" on the last menu of the house of Newport:

Antipasto Newport
Spaghetti a la Newport
Chicken a la Cacciatora
Filet Mignon, Fresh Mushrooms
Veal Scaloppini
Chicken Rissote a la Newport
(45 minutes)
Hot Chicken Sandwich, Poulette
Steak Minute a la Newport
Eggs a la Pergatory, Newport
Free lunch, yes, if you will, but who would be so profane as to call it such?

SO IT was. Continental as could be. Except for one thing: A young woman secretary and her card index of patrons and prospects. This young woman, whom the police described as "beautiful," presided over a telephone switchboard while before her rested the card index file. Police refer to that file as the "sucker list," but then the police are so rude at times.

Sophie Tucker.

Reported to have lost $7500 at one sitting.

Part of the paraphernalia.

And so to this luxurious casino did come during the short days of its existence the wealth and beauty and talent of Chicago, or so it is said, and no doubt to a great extent it is true. Play was high, running to $50,000 on good nights. Special matinees were held for the ladies. At some of them $20,000 to $25,000 was said to have been put into play.

Roulette was the principal game. Three elaborately hand-carved mahogany tables were for the roulette game and such patrons as preferred to see the little balls spinning around and around. And the ivory chips ran from the $20 orange color on through to the $25 blue and the $50 yellow and to the $1000 black.

For the clientele who found roulette at a $20 minimum too steep, the accommodating fellows, whose club the Newport was, had the more plebeian games of black jack, "stush" and "chuck-a-luck," the latter a variation of the old Chinese game wherein the dice are propelled onto the table from gilded "bird cages," thus eliminating the personal touch for those who might be so cynical as to believe all men are not honest.

And as the roulette wheels spun merrily and expensively, as the "bird cages" emptied out their sevens and elevens, as the tables of cards held their devout customers, other patrons wandered about admiring the paintings on the walls or sipped champagne and nibbled at the French dainties.

BUT Mr. Murphy and Mr. Arnstein? Seldom were they seen at the club. It was their part to haunt the hotel lobbies, the restaurants and the night clubs, it was their part to meet and mix with the good spenders and, so doing, to inform them of the delights and pleasures of the new Monte Carlo to be found on Sheridan road. That these two gentlemen did their part well is not to be doubted, for the long line of expensive motor cars that lined the road before the Newport Beach Bowling Club both by day and by night attested to the industry of the Messrs. Arnstein and Murphy.

Now the good people who really lived along Sheridan road at first were mightily puzzled by the sudden activity in the old Reinberg home. All night long the windows blazed with lights, gentlemen in evening clothes and ladies in evening clothes came and went at all hours. And from the back yard was wafted on the stilly Chicago night the murmur and laughter of many, many ladies and gentlemen in evening clothes.

But the neighbors weren't long in doubt. Thanks to the efficiency of the Messrs. Arnstein and Murphy the news of Chicago's little bit of Europe soon spread far and wide. Among those who came to see was Sophie Tucker. It is said, as we have mentioned before, that the lady dropped $7500 dallying for a couple of hours with a roulette wheel. But she denies it.

"I was just a piker," she says. "I never lost $7500 at all. It was nearer $100 or something like that."

But Manager Wertheimer insists that it was $7500 she lost. And he adds that wasn't much of a loss; there were some real losses. So it is not surprising that Manager Wertheimer, what with the large monies that were lost, no, it is not surprising that Manager Wertheimer was extremely pained when the police, under Captain of Detectives O'Connor, came to the door of the Newport one evening.

THE Captain tapped at the front door. He was asked through a spyhole if he was a member of the club. The Captain wasn't, so when he tried the gold doorknob he found it didn't do him a bit of good.

Whereupon the Captain said to one of his men: "Get the ax."

And the police chopped their way in. Once inside, the officers were so overcome by the magnificence of that which they saw around them that they instinctively removed their hats. The place was crowded with men and women.

"You can't do this, you know," protested Mr. Werthheimer. "We are protected, you know. 'Big Tim' Murphy and 'Nicky' Arnstein have taken care of all that."

But Captain O'Connor went right ahead. The guests were allowed to depart, Mr. Wertheimer was detained by the police. As for Messrs. Arnstein and Murphy, they were nowhere to be found. The police got busy and removed about $200,000 worth of gambling equipment and contraband, left a couple of men behind to guard the gold doorknobs and the gold bath tubs, and the Newport Beach Bowling Club had just about come to an end.

Wertheimer spoke quite freely about the whole business. Arnstein and Murphy were the owners, he said, but he hinted that they had the backing of a big gambling syndicate.

And Mr. Arnstein has kept pretty well out of public view since the little bit of Europe in Chicago came to its end. Mr. Murphy, however, could be found around Chicago the next day. He modestly disclaimed any interest in the Sheridan drive Monte Carlo.

"Sure," said Mr. Murphy, "sure, I've been there a couple of times, perhaps. Perhaps not. I think I've been there once or twice for supper. I believe the doorman's name is Joe."

But a moment later he forgot himself when someone remarked that the neighbors must not have been tremendously enthusiastic over that little bit of Europe so suddenly transplanted to their territory.

"They couldn't yap if they wanted to," said Mr. Murphy. "We told 'em right off the bat that if they didn't let us run our club we would build an apartment on the site."

BUT it wasn't from their neighbors or from the police that Messrs. Arnstein and Murphy feared trouble. It was some of Chicago's bandits they were wary of. And precautions they had taken against any holdups. A dozen gunmen, working on eight-hour shifts of four men each, constantly patroled the house and grounds. These gentlemen wore the conventional tuxedos, but hidden under those tuxedos were little arsenals.

And the police, examining the roulette tables, discovered that each had a hollow leg. And in each such leg was an electrical apparatus which, so say the experts, had a decided effect upon the little ball that spun so innocently above. Also, say the experts, these electrical contrivances were worked by a series of pushbuttons manipulated by a concealed operator.

Once in a while the men and women clustered about the tables would see some stranger win $10,000 or $20,000. These lucky strangers, say the police, were "shillos," or "stools," employed by the house. But the others grouped about the tables didn't know it, and the money they thought they saw won electrified them. Whereupon these patrons, hoping to do quite as well themselves, would bet high sums. Then the hidden operators glanced at the roulette tables and electrified them.

Rockville's Last Effort to Find the Black Phantom Who Slew Edward L. Mills, the Wealthy Dairyman.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

MARYLAND'S first "murder census" is now under way in Rockville, Maryland, fifteen miles from here, as a last effort on the part of the authorities to solve the mysterious murder of Edward L. Mills, wealthy Montgomery County dairyman.

Mills, prominent in the community, was murdered in broad daylight, within a stone's throw of his home, by a black-clad phantom which crept from the dense woods in back of his home, called him by his first name, and then fired five shots into his body.

Half-cringing, the figure stole out of the woods in the smoky dawn and met the dairyman as he was leading a horse—which had strayed to a far corner of the farm—across the pasture to the barnyard. From the stable, the 21-year-old farm hand, Clarence Miles, was watching.

There were words. The black ghost drew a gun and fired five, rapid, even shots, from an automatic pistol. Mills fell forward on his face, and the murderer, hurriedly bending over his victim, drew from his black clothes a piece of paper and pinned it to the blood-stained shirt. He uttered a curse, swung quickly away, and still crouching—like a small boy running from a firecracker—fled to the woods.

It seemed an easy case to solve, this spectacular killing of one of Montgomery County's leading citizens. Someone would see the murderer, someone would give a clew. Police would arrest him, and it would be all over. But the clew never came, and no arrest was made.

And now, adopting the famous methods of Scotland Yard in England, Montgomery County authorities are conducting an exhaustive census of the entire community in which Mills lived, questioning every member of every family for knowledge that might furnish some fundamental "lead" upon which to work.

That the "phantom in black" was a friend and neighbor of the murdered man is certain. He knew exactly when Mills would be in that particular field on that particular morning. He knew the intricate paths and trails of the dense forest from which he came and into which he disappeared. And, further, he knew his victim by his first name.

Two lone material clews are the basis for the questions being asked each of the 2500 persons in the vicinity of the Mills home. One is the death-letter, in the form of a confession, which presumably was to have been signed by Mills, and which would have been an admission of a criminal assault against the wife of the murderer, "a young woman with a baby in her arms."

Psychiatrists who studied the note declare that it was written by a person with the intelligence of a high school graduate at least. Typewriter experts declare that it was written by some one unaccustomed to the use of a machine.

THE other clew consists of the five empty cartridges ejected by the automatic pistol, and found on the ground near the body. They were "gvp" shells, of .32-caliber size, and not marked with the name of the manufacturer.

The questions being asked are:

1. Names of all men at the house?
2. Education of all men at the house?
3. Is there a typewriter at the house, or is there a typewriter available to anyone in the house?
4. Is there anyone in the house who can use a typewriter, or who knows anyone who can use one?
5. Did they know Edward Mills?
6. Did they know anyone who bore any sort of grudge against him?
7. Is anyone missing in the neighborhood?
8. Do they know of anyone who has an automatic pistol?
9. Do they know of anyone in the neighborhood who is of unsound mind?

Nearly fifty police and detectives are taking the census and every answer to every question will be carefully checked and cross-checked.

Mills, a graduate of the Maryland University College of Agriculture, lived on a sixty-acre farm of mediocre land between Hunting Hill, Md., and Travilah, fifteen miles to the northwest of the District of Columbia, and in one of the oldest homestead sections of the State. He was regarded as well-to-do, carrying no mortgages on his property, and having only a few debts.

Prominent in the community, universally liked and respected, he was an outstanding figure. His home, inherited from forebears of prominence, was a spacious, two-story white structure, with an immense white-columned veranda fronting on a wide lawn, shaded with magnificent trees.

The land on the farm was, to be sure, poor, but Mills regarded this with little concern, for his principal income was from his dairying, his portable saw-mill and his threshing machine. His twenty-one registered Holstein cows gave an average of 55 gallons of milk a day.

Inasmuch as this milk had to be cooled, put into cans, and hauled for nearly four miles to a tank wagon of a Washington dairyman by 6 a. m., it was necessary for Mills and his helpers to get up at about 4:30 a. m. And so, on the morning of the murder, he aroused his two sons, Paul, 18, and Sidney, 12, and the hired boy, Clarence Miles, 21, at that hour, and telling them to dress and follow him as soon as possible, he went on to get things under way.

Mills went to a nearby pasture—the night-pasture, they called it, because the cattle and horses were kept there at night, so that they would be close at hand in the morning—and drove the cattle and four of his five horses into the barnyard for the boys to make ready when they came out.

BUT the fifth horse had strayed into a far corner of the field, and failed to come in with the rest, and Mills went out again to bring it back.

It was a large field, fully two hundred yards from the barnyard to the place where the horse was grazing, and a high knoll in the center of the field completely hid it from the house. While Mills was making the trip, his son, Paul, and the farm boy, Clarence, came out, and while Paul was in the small dairy-house preparing the milk cans, Clarence went about harnessing the horses.

Clarence, who was in the middle of the barnyard, saw his employer coming over the hill and at the same moment he noticed, coming up from the woods on the right, the slim, phantom figure, half-bent forward as it walked. The stranger, he said afterwards, looked to be of moderate height, and had a small black mustache, and he wore a black shirt, black trousers and a black felt hat.

It was 4:45 a. m., just dawn, and Mills had stopped on the very crest of the hill, so that, from where Clarence was standing, the two figures made a clear, crisp silhouette on the outline of the hill. As the stranger drew near he spoke, calling Mills by his first name. Mills, who had stopped, waiting for him, answered pleasantly.

The stranger said something more, which Mills could not hear, and kept coming forward, crouching lower and lower. Twenty-five feet away, he drew a gun and, holding it extended before him, kept stepping nearer.

Mills, frightened, waved his hand at the visitor and said:

"Don't do that. Put that thing away."

BUT the man did not put it away. Instead he fired five shots in quick, even succession. Mills, already poised in an attempt to grab the weapon and wrest it from the grasp of his assassin, plunged face down and lay still.

From the barnyard, nearby, the farm boy watched, paralyzed with fear. He saw the black phantom crouch over the body, fumble in his shirt for a moment, and pull out something white. He was working nervously, hurriedly. Mills was lying face down, and the murderer seemed to be having difficulty in pinning the note to the blood-stained shirt. Finally, however, he was done and still crouching, he swept around, running swiftly and low down the hillside. He leaped across the narrow branch at the bottom in one jump, leaving his footprint in the muddy bank. Then, like a ghost, he disappeared in the dense woods.

Clarence Miles, by the time the murderer had started to escape, had recovered his senses, had run to the dairy-house and called to Paul, the son. Paul had emerged from the building just in time to see the murderer disappearing into the woods. Then, without waiting longer, the hired boy sped to the house and burst-ing into the kitchen where Mrs. Mills was preparing breakfast told her the news.

Then, while Mrs. Mills, hysterical, ran to the body of her husband, young Miles jumped in an automobile and drove to the nearest telephone, half a mile away, and called a doctor.

After also notifying police, he went back to the scene and found waiting there the family of the dead man, a group of neighbors and a nurse.

The case seemed easy. It seemed obviously impossible for any man to commit a cold-blooded murder in plain daylight and not soon be caught. Someone would see him. Someone would suspect. But the day passed and, with one lone exception, no one threw any light on the crime.

THIS exception was an aged colored woman who lived in a shack on the northernmost corner of the woods into which the murderer had disappeared. She told police that she had seen a man, dressed entirely in black, running across a field in back of her house shortly after five o'clock.

She had come outside to do some chores, she said, and as the man drew near and saw her, he turned quickly and bore off in another direction. She had thought little of it, she said, until she heard that the murderer, too, had worn this same strange costume.

She knew this man, she said, and furnished police with his name. He was arrested and brought in for questioning, but he furnished a perfect alibi, supported by more than a dozen persons. All testified that at the time the crime was committed he was asleep at the home of relations, 15 miles away.

There were three outstanding suspects:

First, there was a young man, known to have been connected with Mills in some covert business dealings, who had a beautiful young wife and a baby daughter, which seemed to tally with details of the document which the murderer had left pinned on the clothes of the dead man.

Second, there was another business associate in these same transactions, who was known to have quarreled with Mills shortly before the crime, and who also had a young wife and child.

And third, there was the same man whom the aged negress had told of seeing in the field behind her home, who, though he had no small child, had a beautiful young married daughter who had one.

The significance of the mother-baby item is that the death note was written in the form of a "confession" which was presumably to have been signed by Mills, which would have been an admission, on his part, of assault upon a young woman, supposedly the wife of the murderer, with a baby in her arms.

Unprintable, even in part, it is described in the most prurient terms of attack by Mills (as though he were himself telling it) giving each sordid detail. Finally, at the close, it said:

"Now I am confronted with the woman's husband, and I realize that death is the only just reward for such a wrong as this that I have done to this man.

"If he shoots me, it will be only what I deserve.

"Signed this —— day of June, 1927."

Police tend to the belief that the letter, in reality, was merely a blind to cover up some deeper motive for the killing, but they admit that in all probability some actual incident or imaginary grievance, such as that in the letter, may have suggested the use of this subject for the death letter.

THE letter, in itself, furnishes the most important clew in the entire case. Typewriting experts, who have examined and worked on it for hours, say that it was written on a rebuilt Underwood machine, one of a block of serial numbers between 960,000 and 990,000, and that the man who wrote it knew little of the use of the typewriter.

It had been written one letter at a time, each struck very hard, and several strong indications in the choice of keys showed that the operator was not accustomed to typing. For instance, in writing the date "1927" the capital letter "I" had been used for the figure "1" rather than the small letter "l" as is customary.

The paper was also examined and studied by psychiatrists, who declared that it was written by a degenerate with an education equivalent to that of a high-school graduate. Certain difficult constructions, which would be out of the question for an uneducated man, and the use of such words as "confronted," "lust," "desire" "appease" and "struggle" showed that the writer had a more than mediocre vocabulary.

The atrocious spelling, punctuation and capitalization of the letter were a tribute to an attempt to mislead investigators by making it appear the work of an ignoramus. But, as an actual fact, it was pointed out that the uneducated person makes the bulk of his mistakes in spelling, rather than in grammar, while it was quite the reverse in this letter. Strangely enough, the simplest words were misspelled, while those mentioned above were spelled and used correctly.

And so the Mills murder, as time goes on, begins to take its place with the list of unsolved mysteries—perfect crimes, if you choose to call them so. The woods were ransacked in vain for the gun and the queer black clothes.

Police are rather given to the theory that the murderer, after committing the crime, came back in a circle and was one of the first of the neighbors to arrive at the scene, offering his assistance to the stricken family.

ELLINWOOD, Kansas.

IT MAY have been the sweep of the winds across the Kansas plains that first inspired Mrs. Ella May Koett with the belief that the farm was haunted, though it is hard to say now just what it was. It may have been the rattle of the windows in the dark or the strange and solemn soughing of the cottonwoods that she first mistook for ghostly noises. These fretful trees of the prairie country are always soughing. They rustle and murmur even when the breeze is so slight as to be scarcely perceptible. It may have been that mysterious dog which never barked, but lurked in the shadows at nightfall and lured away the farm dogs.

Any of these manifestations, it seems now, might have preyed upon the imagination of this young farm wife, who was not yet 18 years old, and caused her to become a victim to fears and fancies. Happenings more readily accountable to others might have terrified her. She was not a native of the region. She had come to Kansas from the hill country of Arkansas and was not accustomed to the loneliness of the plains. Besides, the farm of Fred Koett, which lies across the prairie nine miles northeast of here, is a lonely place at best.

But whatever it was that gave rise to the notion, Mrs. Koett's suspicion that her husband's farm was the abode of sinister apparitions became a conviction. She reached that conviction one windy night of last February, and it grew with each succeeding nightfall. She convinced her husband of it, and when some of her relatives came up from Arkansas to help with the harvest, she convinced them, too. In a little while the big frame house—the house in which Koett's father died a year ago—became the daily scene of weird and astonishing phenomena, or at least such phenomena were reported by Mrs. Koett and her relatives. Terrifying were the stories they told.

FROM time to time, they said, human footfalls were heard at night on the untenanted floor overhead. Then the appearance of the mysterious dog would be followed by the appearance of a mysterious man, who would be seen walking through the yard or loitering near the door of the milk-house. Pictures of departed ancestors on the walls would turn their faces and perform antics ill becoming their venerable subjects. Inoffensive dogs were gibbeted with pitchforks and so much commotion raised generally that the alarm of the Koett family turned into panic. A few days ago they held a public sale, bundled up what remained of their belongings and fled to Arkansas, routed by the uncanny interlopers. Thus has ended the strangest experience with the supernatural the wheat belt of Western Kansas has been able to record in many years.

The big farmhouse is deserted now. Weeds which already had gained a good start during the hectic summer are growing tall and turning to seed in the dooryard. Except for mice and spiders and those other creatures which revel in abandoned buildings, the place is empty. Rapidly it is accumulating cobwebs and traditions and taking its place in local fame as "the haunted house." In broad daylight, school boys and harvest hands are courageous enough to approach and heave rocks at its dusty window panes.

and who also had a young wife and child.

And third, there was the same man whom the aged negress had told of seeing in the field behind her home—who, though he had no small child, had a beautiful young married daughter who had one.

The significance of the mother-baby item is that the death note was written in the form of a "confession" which was presumably to have been signed by Mills, which would have been an admission, on his part, of assault upon a young woman, supposedly the wife of the murderer, with a baby in her arms.

Unprintable, even in part, it described in the most prurient terms an attack by Mills (as though he was himself telling it) giving each sordid detail. Finally, at the close, it said:

"Now I am confronted with the woman's husband, and I realize that death is the only just reward for such a wrong as this that I have done to this man.

"If he shoots me, it will be only what I deserve.

"Signed this ——— day of June, 1927."

Police tend to the belief that the letter, in reality, was merely a blind to cover up some deeper motive for the killing, but they admit that in all probability some actual incident or imaginary grievance, such as that in the letter, may have suggested the use of this subject for the death letter.

THE letter, in itself, furnishes the most important clew in the entire case. Typewriting experts, who have examined and worked on it for hours, say that it was written on a rebuilt Underwood machine, one of a block of serial numbers between 960,000 and 990,000, and that the man who wrote it knew little of the use of the typewriter.

It had been written one letter at a time, each struck very hard, and several strong indications in the choice of keys showed that the operator was not accustomed to typing. For instance, in writing the date "1927" a capital letter "I" had been used for the figure "1" rather than the small letter "l" as is customary.

The paper was also examined and studied by psychiatrists, who declared that it was written by a degenerate with an education equivalent to that of a high-school graduate. Certain difficult constructions, which would be out of the question for an uneducated man, and the use of such words as "confronted," "lust," "desire" "appease" and "struggle," showed that the writer had a more than mediocre vocabulary.

The atrocious spelling, punctuation and capitalization of the letter they attribute to an attempt to mislead investigators by making it appear the work of an ignoramus. But, as an actual fact, it was pointed out that the uneducated person makes the bulk of his mistakes in spelling, rather than in grammar, while it was quite the reverse in this letter. Strangely enough the simplest words were misspelled, while those mentioned above were spelled and used correctly.

And so the Mills murder, as time goes on, begins to take its place with the list of unsolved mysteries—perfect crimes, if you choose to call them so. The woods were ransacked in vain for the gun and the queer black clothing.

Police are rather given to the theory that the murderer, after committing the crime, came back in a circle and was one of the first of the neighbors to arrive at the scene, offering his assistance to the stricken family.

GHOST DROVE HIM OUT OF KANSAS

The Strange Case of Farmer Koett and His "Haunted" House, Which Has Already Become One of the Traditions of the Countryside.

Fred Koett with his shotgun.

Mrs. Koett, the young wife.

Finally the family abandoned the farm and fled to the hills of Arkansas.

ELLINWOOD, Kansas.

IT MAY have been the sweep of the winds across the Kansas plains that first inspired Mrs. Ella May Koett with the belief that the farm was haunted, though it is hard to say now just what it was. It may have been the rattle of the windows in the dark or the strange and solemn soughing of the cottonwoods that she first mistook for ghostly noises. These fretful trees of the prairie country are always soughing. They rustle and murmur even when the breeze is so slight as to be scarcely perceptible. It may have been that mysterious dog which never barked, but lurked in the shadows at nightfall and lured away the farm dogs.

Any of these manifestations, it seems now, might have preyed upon the imagination of this young farm wife, who was not yet 18 years old, and caused her to become a victim to fears and fancies. Happenings more readily accountable to others might have terrified her. She was not a native of the region. She had come to Kansas from the hill country of Arkansas and was not accustomed to the loneliness of the plains. Besides, the farm of Fred Koett, which lies across the prairie nine miles northeast of here, is a lonely place at best.

But whatever it was that gave rise to the notion, Mrs. Koett's suspicion that her husband's farm was the abode of sinister apparitions became a conviction. She reached that conviction one windy night of last February, and it grew with each succeeding nightfall. She convinced her husband of it, and when some of her relatives came up from Arkansas to help with the harvest, she convinced them, too. In a little while the big frame house—the house in which Koett's father died a year ago—became the daily scene of weird and astonishing phenomena, or at least such phenomena were reported by Mrs. Koett and her relatives. Terrifying were the stories they told.

FROM time to time, they said, human footfalls were heard at night on the untenanted floor overhead. Then the appearance of the mysterious dog would be followed by the appearance of a mysterious man, who would be seen walking through the yard or loitering near the door of the milkhouse. Pictures of departed ancestors on the walls would turn their faces and perform antics ill becoming their venerable subjects. Inoffensive dogs were gibbeted with pitchforks and so much commotion raised generally that the alarm of the Koett family turned into panic. A few days ago they held a public sale, bundled up what remained of their belongings and fled to Arkansas, routed by the uncanny interlopers. Thus has ended the strangest experience with the supernatural the wheat belt of Western Kansas has been able to record in many years.

The big farmhouse is deserted now. Weeds which already had gained a good start during the hectic summer are growing tall and turning to seed in the dooryard. Except for mice and spiders and those other creatures which revel in abandoned buildings, the place is empty. Rapidly it is accumulating cobwebs and traditions and taking its place in local fame as "the haunted house." In broad daylight, school boys and harvest hands are courageous enough to approach and heave rocks at its dusty window panes, but at night, when the cottonwoods cast weird shadows in the moonlight, they shy around it and pass hurriedly on their way.

One finds among the neighbors and townspeople both scoffers and believers. Opinion as to the spook's genuineness is divided. There are a good many level-headed ones who frankly have little patience with the stories told by the Koett family, but whether or not they take any stock in the ghost, they find in the case a favorite topic of conversation. After all, it is not every community that can boast of a spook—even one of questionable authenticity—and so Ellinwood enjoys uncommon prestige. It induces a flare of civic pride. The "haunted" farm has done more to get the town's name in the city newspapers than the Sunday picture show, which, in a Kansas town of 1100 souls, is a real marvel. Even when some of the residents smile about the spook and tell the interrogator right out there isn't anything to it and that Fred Koett is just being duped, they evince an eagerness to linger on the subject of wraiths and spirits and the sights and sounds reported from the Koett farm.

AS THE Koetts never permitted outsiders to investigate for themselves, lest the spirits be further angered, nobody except members of the family is able to testify concerning actual personal contact with the phantom. It remained, strictly speaking, a private ghost. Everybody else was forced to base his interpretation of the phenomena upon hearsay or surmise, and so a wide variety of explanations are encountered. Most of these, it may be said, reflect little credit upon Koett as a spook detector and draw uncomplimentary inferences about his "gang of Arkansawyers." But the ghost was Koett's and not theirs. The fact remains that it was real enough to Fred Koett to cause him to abandon a valuable farm which was his for life. It caused him to sell his livestock and equipment at a sacrifice and flee to the hills. It was also real enough to drive him and his family to live in a corncrib a mile away while hurried preparations were being made for the flight.

Stories of the ghost's sinister activities first got around on last Memorial Day. The family encountered it that day on their return from a neighboring town. But when I visited the farm recently on the day of the departure for Arkansas, Mrs. Koett declared strange things had been happening long before May 30. From the beginning, it seems, the ghost had revealed itself to her more readily than to the others, and she was a sort of official interpreter. While her husband and brother were putting the flivver's tires in shape for the 600-mile trek to her home State she told me of her experience.

During the winter, she related, she and her husband and their small child, slept in a front room on the first floor. It was the room in which the elder Koett had died last August. She wouldn't go so far as to say the death had anything to do with the case, but after that she began to feel the place was haunted. There were sighs in the air and a dog which didn't seem to belong to anybody would appear at night, slinking around the yard. She didn't attach any importance to it for a long time, but in February she began to hear unaccountable sounds on the floor above. No, she didn't think the noise had been made by rats. It always occurred about the same time at night, just after they had gone to bed. A window would rattle, even when there wasn't any wind, and then there would be a dull thud like the sound a barefoot man would make in leaping down from the window sill to the floor. The sound of footfalls followed ——steps of bare feet moving across the room.

AT FIRST, she said, Koett didn't pay much attention to these sounds, though he heard them, too. He didn't believe in spirits. But when they continued, he came to share her alarm. His fear at that time, however, was not great enough to drive him from the farm.

There was reason for Koett's reluctance to leave the farm. It was a good one and crops had been excellent. The tract of 160 acres lying a few miles north of the Great Bend of the Arkansas River was one of the most fertile in the valley and Koett had use of it for life. His father, Ferdinand Koett, a thrifty German farmer, had come to Kansas early, when land was cheap, and accumulated many hundreds of those fertile Barton County acres.

And at his death he had provided all his seven children with farms of their own. To the others he had willed the land outright. To Fred's share, however, he attached a condition. Apparently dubious of this son's responsibility, he had left the home place to Fred's three children by his first wife, Fred to have the use of the land for life, but without authority to sell.

Fred's first wife died three years ago and the children were taken by a maternal uncle and aunt to rear. In the summer of 1925 Fred became associated with an Arkansas family, the Waddells of Fort Smith, who came to Kansas to work in the harvest. With them came Ella May, a girl of 15, who helped with the cooking. The 41-year-old widower fell in love with her and, in spite of the violent opposition of his father, married her. A son was born to them and soon afterward the elder Koett's will was made, tying up Fred's share of the estate for the earlier children.

THIS young mother who now stood in the doorway describing her encounters with the supernatural was Fred Koett's child bride. The two other women who stood by, nodding approval to her story and adding their own versions now and then, were her mother, Mrs. Sarah Waddell, and her brother's wife. Mrs. Koett had felt, she said, and so had her relatives, that Fred really ought to get away and build up a home that could be left to his new family, as they were unprovided for and he was getting along in life. Still, he had the income from the farm and was doing very well where he was. He hated to leave and start all over again in a strange community, and she had not encouraged him to do it. The idea of a ghost appearing for the express purpose of hastening such a move, she declared, had never occurred to her and did not occur to her until actually "it got so bad we were scared to stay here overnight."

THOSE eerie footsteps on the second floor continued all through th spring, her story went on. Sometimes they would be heard every night and then three or four nights would elapse without a visitation. She and Koett never got up courage to investigate until the next morning, and then they would find nothing amiss. The strange dog kept on coming, too. They would see it skulking about, and their dogs would chase it far into the country without seeming to catch up with it. Then, after the dogs had been drawn away, a man would appear. Usually they saw him walking across the yard and could hear the sticks crackling under his feet. He was short and heavy set, wore dark clothing and had a very large nose. He didn't look like the elder Koett. He was too young. Sometimes they would see him just hanging around the door of the milkhouse, a few yards away from the back door. He would never answer when they hailed him, but would walk straight across the yard and disappear into the hog pen, where the weeds were tall. They would go there to look for him, but would find no trace. Once Koett fired at him without effect and on another night in the summer, after Mrs. Koett's relatives had arrived, four men all fired at the intruder at once, with rifles and shotguns. Undisturbed by the volley, he had kept right on walking and vanished into the hog pen. That was about 10 o'clock. Between 2 and 3 in the morning they were awakened by a noise, and there was that face with the big nose pressed against a window.

"If it was a man," said Mrs. Koett, "he seemed to be just trying to scare us, for he didn't try to hurt anybody and we never missed anything from the place. We never could figure out who he was or what he wanted. He kept on walking until a few nights ago, when we started getting ready to move."

During the period in which the uncanny visitor was making his nocturnal calls, it appears, other strange things were happening in the house. These phenomena began on last Decoration Day. The family returned from Otis one evening to discover their clothing had been dragged from a closet and scattered on the floor. In another room, pictures had been turned on the supporting pegs and a crucifix, which had stood on a table, had been placed on the floor facing the southwest. The house had been locked and there was no evidence anybody had broken in. On still another occasion, they were sitting in the living room after supper when they heard several knocks on the table. They looked up and saw a vase of artificial flowers slide across the table and stop on the opposite corner. Anyway, Mrs. Koett said she saw it happen and Koett doesn't deny anything she says.

IT WAS soon after the Decoration Day occurrence that Mrs. Koett's relatives came up to work in the harvest. After that the ghost ran rampant. Pictures were turned around and left hanging crosswise almost every day. Clothing was dragged from the closets and covers on the beds disarranged.

Residents of the neighborhood are wont to criticise both Koett and his "in-laws" for not permitting some competent investigator to stay for a time in the house and try to solve the mystery. K. Miles, a spiritualist of Great Bend, 10 miles west of Ellinwood, says he could have solved it in mighty short order. Such phenomena, he declares, are common enough and he has seen them often. He has had many personal encounters with ghosts. Once, he told me, he even wrestled with the ghost of an Indian chief. He advised the Koetts to answer the spooks when they heard knocks. He supplied them with a code of knocks so they could ask it questions, but they said they were afraid to do it. They thought the best thing to do was to get out as soon as possible, and that is what they did.

Mrs. Waddell, who has had some experience herself with ghosts in Arkansas, thought that was the proper course, too. She says if you stay in a place after a ghost warns you to move there is pretty likely to be a death in the family, and she ought to know. Her sister once came near disaster by defying the will of a spook. Mrs. Waddell resents implications by certain neighbors that she and the rest of Koett's "in-laws" were trying to frighten him into moving to Arkansas. This ghost has almost made a wreck of him, she declares, and it grieves her to see him so nervous and fidgety. She was glad they were getting ready to move, as she was tired of sleeping in a granary.

With Koett on the move for Arkansas, the spook apparently was satisfied, for it caused no trouble after the sale. The farm land has been rented out, but the house stands vacant and probably will remain so for a long time. It is doubtful if even the most outspoken scoffers could be induced to live in it. No strange dogs or human figures now appear in the yard at nightfall, but the windows still rattle in the wind with ominous import, and the cottonwoods sough and murmur.

"The Lost Battalion" —Ten Years After

Whittlesey's Own Story of That Memorable Episode of the World War Told in the Recent History of the 308th Infantry.

Lieutenant-Colonel Charles W. Whittlesey.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

OUT of the hell of the great war arose many a deed of fine daring and bristling courage. Many a brave story was told of noble things finely done. But one of the most romantic stories—if not the most romantic—of the American troops was that of "the Lost Battalion."

The story of that battalion will be one of the many stories of heroism and courage that will be told and retold by the members of the American Legion now gathering in Paris in this tenth year anniversary of our entry into the great war. The battalion's story will be told by the men of the 308th Infantry, the regiment most of the men of "the Lost Battalion" were members of; that battalion's story will be told by many another than men of the 308th.

But a more formal account of that famous unit is related in the recently published "History of the 308th Infantry," by L. Wardlaw Miles, who served as a Captain with that regiment. The fight of the battalion which we have come to call "the Lost Battalion" is told by the late Lieutenant-Colonel Charles W. Whittlesey and Major George G. McMurtry, the officers in command of the unit. At the time of the battalion's beleaguerment, Whittlesey held the rank of Major, while McMurtry, the second in command, was a Captain.

THE battalion's story, from the "History of the 308th Infantry," follows, in part:

Full responsibility for sending the detachment, which is known as the Lost Battalion, forward into position where they were surrounded by the enemy for five days, is acknowledged by Major-General Robert Alexander. In "The History of the 77th Division," he writes:

> Major Whittlesey conducted his command to the objective designated for him by the Division Commander, occupied the position assigned to him, and held that position until the remainder of the division was able to move up to him.
> This command was neither "lost" nor "rescued." It suffered heavy losses; it was subjected to fire from both enemy and supposedly friendly artillery; notwithstanding all this, Major Whittlesey and his command held the position to which they had proceeded under my order and were found by me, when I visited them on the very early morning of October 8, an organized command, in good order and excellent spirits.
> Attention is invited to the extremely difficult character of the terrain in front of this command. The north and south ravine cuts the regimental sub-sector in two. The sides of the ravine are decidedly precipitous and densely covered with brush; in other words, an almost impassable obstacle was interposed between the right and left flanks of the brigade line—an obstacle which offered perfect cover to machine-gun nests and trench mortar emplacements.

At 10 a. m. on October 2, then, we find the first and second battalions of the 308th Infantry consolidated under the command of Major Whittlesey in the ravine. Their advance was held up by machine-gun opposition. The chief difficulty was in trying to manage both sides of the ravine at the same time. Companies B and C were supported by Company E on the east side of the ravine; Companies D and F, supported by companies A, G and H, were on the west side, where the principal opposition had been encountered. For the success of the operation, the German line of cleverly concealed machine-gun and trench mortar emplacements had to be broken.

The following order was received at 11:33 a. m. from the Regimental Commander:

"THE advance of the infantry will commence at 12:30. Infantry action will be pushed forward until it reaches the line of the road and the railroad, where the command will halt, reorganize, establish liaison to the left and right and be ready for orders for a further advance. You will leave two companies on your left as a containing force, that is, the remainder of the first and second battalions. The General says you are to advance beyond the barrage regardless of losses. He states that there will be a general advance all along the line."

As soon as these plans had been explained to the company commanders, details were sent immediately to collect rations, one day's supply of hard tack and corned beef having just been sent up from the rear. At this time the command had no reserve rations, these having been consumed in the earlier days of the advance.

Promptly at 12:30, companies A, B, C, E, G and H, accompanied by sections of machine-guns from companies C and D of the 360th Machine-Gun Battalion, moved out in pursuit of the barrage of the 75s, which were whistling over the top of the ravine. A thin line of scouts constituted the advance guard, with the companies creeping along in platoon columns, the only formation which permitted keeping touch through the dense underbrush. Machine-gun, rifle and grenade fire were encountered and there was considerable sniping by the enemy from the left side of the ravine. Runner posts of two men were established every 200 yards, so that communication might be maintained with the rear.

By 5:15 p. m., the advance elements of the command arrived at the edge of the southern slope, which looked down on the La Viergettes-Moulin de Charlevaux road. The companies had suffered 90 casualties from flanking machine-gun and sniper fire.

THE command was halted while Major Whittlesey and Captain McMurtry made a reconnaissance. To the north across the valley a narrow road could be seen plainly, running east and west about half-way up the hillside. A steep, quarrylike edge cut into the densely covered slope on the north side of the road, and above the edge the hill rose sharply. According to the attack order the day's objective was this road, beginning at a point about 400 yards west of Moulin de Charlevaux.

As soon as the disposition by companies was decided upon the word to advance was given and the command, including the machine-gunners, filed down the slope, through the morass at the bottom of the ravine, and crossed the diminutive Charlevaux brook on a narrow plank bridge. Although the hard and rocky ground opposed stiff resistance to intrenching tools wielded by tired arms, the command dug itself in for the night within an hour.

The night passed quietly. It was bitter cold, however, and the men suffered acutely from lack of blankets and overcoats, equipment which had been discarded by regimental orders on the morning of September 26, when the Argonne attack had started. A message reporting the position was sent by the runner posts to regimental headquarters.

At 6 a. m. on October 3, Company E, under command of Lieutenant Karl Wilhelm, was sent back to attack on the west side of the ravine. Company E filed out of the position, crossed the slope to the south and was soon lost from sight in the forest.

WITHIN an hour after this detachment disappeared, Company K of the 307th Infantry, with 79 men, under the command of Captain Nelson M. Holderman, came through the marsh below the position and reported to Major Whittlesey. They had worked their way forward by way of the runner posts.

German artillery began to shell the position at 8:30, but without serious effect, owing to the protection afforded by the reverse slope. A patrol was sent out at 9 a. m. to size up the situation to the west, and another patrol to make a similar reconnaissance on the right flank. Both patrols returned in half an hour to report that small numbers of the enemy had been seen scurrying through the woods off our right and left flanks.

Lieutenant Leake, with about 18 men, reported that E Company, which had advanced a short distance along the top of the west side of the ravine, had encountered a powerful force of Germans. The Germans also had fired on two of our runner posts, killing or capturing several runners. Captain Holderman, with Company K of the 307th Infantry and a detachment of 20 scouts from Second Battalion headquarters, were sent across the southern slope, with instructions to clear the Germans from the ridge and re-establish the runner posts. At noon Captain Holderman returned. He reported that he had met severe opposition. He said that there was no doubt that the enemy, in considerable numbers, had filtered through around the left flank during the night and had taken possession of the high ground in the rear.

At noon on October 3, Major Whittlesey and Captain McMurtry knew that their forces were cut off from communication with the rear, and that the Germans were both in front of and behind the objective which our troops had been ordered to occupy.

The following message was at once communicated personally by Major Whittlesey and Captain McMurtry to all company commanders:

"OUR MISSION IS TO HOLD THIS POSITION AT ALL COSTS. NO FALLING BACK. HAVE THIS UNDERSTOOD BY EVERY MAN IN YOUR COMMAND."

From this time until reinforcements arrived on October 7 there was no communication between regimental headquarters and the forward troops except by seven carrier pigeons, the last one being sent on October 4.

Major Whittlesey released the first pigeon at 8:50 a. m., when enemy artillery began to shell the Charlevaux road, sending this message:

"We are being shelled by German artillery. Can we not have artillery support? Fire is coming from northwest."

Again at 10:45 a. m. he sent a pigeon message telling that our runner posts were broken.

THE presence of the surrounding enemy began to make itself felt in various ways. First, a heavy trench mortar suddenly opened fire from a position 600 yards to the northwest, hurling many shells right into our position. Scouts sent to the crest of the ridge reported that the mortar was strongly protected.

At 3 p. m. there came the first organized enemy attack from the ridge above the command. A shower of potato-masher grenades fell through the trees, to explode at the edge of the roadway where the defending companies rushed forward their firing lines. When rifle and chauchat fire was poured into the bushes above the road the attack ceased as suddenly as it had begun.

At 4:05 p. m., while the attack was in progress, Major Whittlesey had dispatched his third pigeon to regimental headquarters with the report that the situation was serious.

Twenty-five per cent of the original effective strength of approximately 554 officers and men were killed or wounded the first day. No medical officer was present. In an attempt to apply only first-aid dressings to the wounded, three enlisted medical corps men with the surrounded companies soon exhausted their supply of bandages.

Hunger added its pangs to suffering from the cold. The last bit of food was consumed at noon on October 3. Water was discovered in a spring at the bottom of the ravine. But the Germans knew of the location and had a machine-gun trained on the spring.

AT DAYLIGHT on October 4 patrols were sent out. Before they had gone 500 yards they were dispersed and driven back by heavy machine-gun and rifle fire. The following message was started back by pigeon at 7:25 a. m.:

"Many wounded here whom we can't evacuate.

"Need rations badly."

One of the two remaining pigeons was released at 10:55 a. m. with a message to appraise the regimental commander of the growing seriousness of the situation.

During a lull on the afternoon of this day a friendly barrage began to fall on the ridge to the southeast. Increasing in intensity, the barrage crept down the slope, crossed the marshy bottom of the ravine, where it hurled mud and brush in the air, and settled directly on our position. Our shells, intended for the enemy's destruction, were tearing huge chunks from the one bit of earth which sheltered the beleaguered battalion. Funk holes crashed in, burying their wounded occupants.

Out of the inferno of noise and confusion flew Whittlesey's last pigeon with this message:

"Our own artillery is dropping a barrage directly on us.

"For heaven's sake, stop it."

For an hour and thirty-five minutes there was no indication that the bird had reached the division pigeon loft. It was a severe test for the men to see 30 of their comrades killed and wounded by their own artillery fire.

The German trench mortar threw in a few shells to add to the fury of the friendly barrage. As soon as the shells began to fall less frequently, a small force of Germans armed with potato-masher grenades launched an attack. They were driven back.

Dawn of October 5 brought the routine of sending out patrols on either flank and the melancholy duty of burying the new dead. Late in the afternoon the Germans laid down an intense machine-gun barrage. It was followed almost immediately by a potato-masher attack from the north, which was, as usual, quickly repulsed.

ON OCTOBER 6 the men were found to be too weak from hunger to attempt to bury their dead. Some bodies were covered with brush and leaves, but most remained lying in the positions in which they had been struck down. Another day dragged out its weary length of trench mortar, machine-gun and sniper fire, with a heavy grenade attack at 5 p. m. This was repulsed after 20 minutes of vigorous fire from the American rifles.

On the morning of October 7, the fifth day of the command's fight against the surrounding enemy, it was almost impossible to find men who had strength enough to go out for the usual patrols to size up the situation.

At 4 p. m., while the enemy firing ceased temporarily, a private of Company H, who had been wounded and captured, was seen limping along the slope of the left flank and carrying a cane on which was tied a white handkerchief. He reported that he had been sent in by the Germans with a message for the commanding officer.

He gave the message to Captain McMurtry, who handed it to Major Whittlesey. It was a letter, dictated in English and neatly typewritten, and addressed to the commanding officer. The letter asked for the surrender of the Americans.

Legend has made famous the reply, "Go to hell," which Whittlesey is reported to have hurled at the Germans.

For the purpose of history the following recital of facts will suffice: Whittlesey read the note and handed it to Captain McMurtry. He read it and handed it to Captain Holderman. The three officers looked at one another and smiled.

No answer whatever, written or verbal, was made to the German commander's letter. But the German commander evidently understood the fact that his note was ignored, for within 30 minutes a furious grenade attack was made from the ridge above, and many potato-mashers exploded about our firing line. Gradually the Germans withdrew and silence settled down on the hillside.

DARKNESS soon came, and the men were preparing listlessly to suffer another cold night of hunger and thirst, not to mention the horror of enduring the moans of the severely wounded. The hopeless seriousness of the situation was beginning to penetrate even the stoutest hearts. Only two of the original nine machine-guns remained in action, and there were no gunners left to feed the last five boxes of machine-gun ammunition to the guns. Rifle ammunition was practically gone; grenades were all gone. No firing was heard to the south. It began to look as if the battalion was abandoned to its fate.

A few minutes after 7 p. m., while Major Whittlesey and Captain McMurtry were seated in their funk hole talking in a low voice, a runner scrambled breathlessly down the slope from the right flank and reported to Major Whittlesey that an American officer with a few men had just come in on the right of the position.

"He says that he wants to see the commanding officer," the runner whispered.

Major Whittlesey followed the runner over to the right flank and there found the relief for which his men had been waiting since the morning they found their runner posts broken. First Lieutenant Tillman of the 307th Infantry, with a patrol, reported that three companies of that regiment were located in the forest a short distance to the right. After a brief talk with Major Whittlesey this officer made his way back to his command and shortly afterwards guided companies A, B and M of the 307th Infantry to our position. The long expected relief had at last come.

The news spread rapidly along the hillside. There was no wild demonstration, no cheering. In the grim darkness of the shadows above Charlevaux brook, haggard men with bleary eyes and muddy stubble on their chins rose from the holes they had expected would be their graves and grasped one another's hand silently. They crawled to the side of those heroic wounded and whispered the news that relief had come, that food was on the way to the position at that very moment, and that it was all over but the shouting, which would have to be deferred until later. If tears followed, the darkness concealed them. The battalion that had been lost was found.

Everything about the modern movie palace is on a larger scale, including prices. But, although admissions have ballooned from 20 cents to 65 cents after 6 p. m., there is much to compensate this added wear and tear on the alligator. The lobby, for instance, is decorated with many ancient works of art, including two or three cashiers not so ancient. It is lined with full-length mirrors sufficient to accommodate a battery of 200 women overhauling the landscape. If the escorts do not work in the directors' room of a large corporation, they may enjoy the luxury of dropping their cigars into sewer-pipe ash trays of the Louis XVI period.

They are planning theaters now with swimming pools and bowling alleys, presumably for the convenience of patrons who desire to pass away the time while the orchestra is playing the overture. If you wish to remain over the week-end to see a new show you may repair to the writing room and drop your folks a line.

A young man and his lady friend recently had a controversy on how to spend the evening, the young man favoring a game of bridge and the lady a motion picture. When they get to the theater they discover the feature film is "A Lumberjack's Revenge" and pany H, who had been wounded and captured, was seen limping along the slope of the left flank and carrying a cane on which was tied a white handkerchief. He reported that he had been sent in by the Germans with a message for the commanding officer.

He gave the message to Captain McMurtry, who handed it to Major Whittlesey. It was a letter, dictated in English and neatly typewritten, and addressed to the commanding officer. The letter asked for the surrender of the Americans.

Legend has made famous the reply, "Go to hell," which Whittlesey is reported to have hurled at the Germans.

For the purpose of history the following recital of facts will suffice: Whittlesey read the note and handed it to Captain McMurtry. He read it and handed it to Captain Holderman. The three officers looked at one another and smiled.

No answer whatever, written or verbal, was made to the German commander's letter. But the German commander evidently understood the fact that his note was ignored, for within 30 minutes a furious grenade attack was made from the ridge above, and many potato-mashers exploded about our firing line. Gradually the Germans withdrew and silence settled down on the hillside.

DARKNESS soon came, and the men were preparing listlessly to suffer another cold night of hunger and thirst, not to mention the horror of enduring the moans of the severely wounded. The hopeless seriousness of the situation was beginning to penetrate even the stoutest hearts. Only two of the original nine machine-guns remained in action, and there were no gunners left to feed the last five boxes of machine-gun ammunition to the guns. Rifle ammunition was practically gone; grenades were all gone. No firing was heard to the south. It began to look as if the battalion was abandoned to its fate.

A few minutes after 7 p. m., while Major Whittlesey and Captain McMurtry were seated in their funk hole talking in a low voice, a runner scrambled breathlessly down the slope from the right flank and reported to Major Whittlesey that an American officer with a few men had just come in on the right of the position.

"He says that he wants to see the commanding officer," the runner whispered.

Major Whittlesey followed the runner over to the right flank and there found the relief for which his men had been waiting since the morning they found their runner posts broken. First Lieutenant Tillman of the 307th Infantry, with a patrol, reported that three companies of that regiment were located in the forest a short distance to the right. After a brief talk with Major Whittlesey this officer made his way back to his command and shortly afterwards guided companies A, B and M of the 307th Infantry to our position. The long expected relief had at last come.

THE NOISY SILENT DRAMA

THERE has been a remarkable development in motion picture entertainment during the last few years and they now hand you everything from a curfew-lunged tenor to a brace of Russian dust-kickers and present the whole in a gorgeous edifice that looks like a cross between the Metropolitan Museum and the Fifth National Bank.

Everything about the modern movie palace is on a larger scale, including prices. But, although admissions have ballooned from 20 cents to 65 cents after 6 p. m., there is much to compensate this added wear and tear on the alligator. The lobby, for instance, is decorated with many ancient works of art, including two or three cashiers not so ancient. It is lined with full-length mirrors sufficient to accommodate a battery of 200 women overhauling the landscape. If the escorts do not work in the directors' room of a large corporation, they may enjoy the luxury of dropping their cigars into sewer-pipe ash trays of the Louis XVI period.

They are planning theaters now with swimming pools and bowling alleys, presumably for the convenience of patrons who desire to pass away the time while the orchestra is playing the overture. If you wish to remain over the week-end to see a new show you may repair to the writing room and drop your folks a line.

A young man and his lady friend recently had a controversy on how to spend the evening, the young man favoring a game of bridge and the lady a motion picture. When they get to the theater they discover the feature film is "A Lumberjack's Revenge" and look for an evening of delightful entertainment, what with a forest fire, a landslide, a dynamited saloon, and, doubtless, a burly French-Canadian socking the tar out of somebody who tries to feed his police dog a breakfast of minced windshields.

No sooner has the couple battered their way into the lobby than a guard comes bounding along with the end of a rope and they are thrown against the wall with several dozen others as the guard, protected by excellent interference, makes 17 yards around left tackle. Heartened by the announcement that the next show starts in 45 minutes, the crowd commences to squirm and fidget in enthusiasm and the young man treads on someone's hoof and a plasterer's voice says: "Whaddayuh think I am, a safety zone?"

The young man states that, while there are plenty of scenes inside, he is not averse to causing another, and he and the plasterer exchange ultimatums about larruping each other on the bridgework. The young man then discovers his girl 20 feet away hanging on to the arm of a total stranger. This is a tough break for any young man, considering that he has purchased the tickets, so he will approach the girl and say, "I believe you made a mistake," or "Who is your boy friend?" according to the ward in which he votes. The girl will flush and explain that she got misappropriated.

As the rope lowers, the couple makes a dive for the stairway, the young man with a certain air of confidence as he has had some experience in the Canadian Rockies. The girl, however, is not so fortunate, as her climbing experience is limited to the time she ascended the five floors of her apartment the night the elevator stalled. They negotiate floor after floor until they reach the vicinity of the projection machine, up around timber-line. Here an usher, clad in the gorgeous raiment of a sidewalk dentist, congratulates them with a flourish of his baton and an oriental kow-tow. There is no extra charge. He points to two seats halfway across the aisle and 20 people have to stand up to let them in.

IT SEEMS that 12 "units" are required to work the audience into the proper frame of mind for viewing "A Lumberjack's Revenge" and the first unit is a stage presentation called "Woodman, Spare That Tree." Ladies of the ensemble troop out dressed as various trees—oak, elm, maple, birch, etc.—and cavort hither and yon until a husky Woodman comes out and does a toe dance with someone who looks like she might be cast as a Century Plant. He tosses this girl around promiscuously and, as a climax, bends her into a pretzel-like formation and hurls her to the floor, where she dies in a deliberate fashion. The trees bow and scamper off the stage until next week, when they will appear as Greek statues and the Woodman will enter wearing a wreath and tooting a pipe and repeat the pretzel act.

The electrical staff presents the next number, which is a succession of red, green and purple illumination, and the audience is urged to put on the muffler for the overture. This is "The Unfinished Symphony." The selection is played regularly every week, the apparent idea being that if they play it often enough they will finish it. The music stops with a crash and the conductor bows left, right and center, while the audience, remembering the admonition to preserve silence, courteously refrains from applauding.

The organist then rises on his galloping organ and informs the audience that he is going to play "Sunday," and a few people start rejoicing that this is only Saturday, but the organist treads out a half-dozen selections and winds up by playing something like "Moonlight on the Ganges" while a slide requests the married men and the single men to alternate in whistling the chorus through their teeth.

The following unit depicts all the exciting things that are coming off during the next few weeks, viz: an automobile plunging over a cliff, a smoking shotgun, a courtroom scene, a fight over a good poker hand, an airplane crash, a woman screaming and finally a tiny question mark that grows rapidly until it covers the entire screen. These views are followed by a short film about the beauties of a moonlight trip in the swamps of Louisiana and how the Navajo Indians make hand-forged pickle jars.

In the news weekly, the audience sees a close-up of Babe Ruth, a baby show in Atlantic City, a prize collie, three divorcees and a violinist arriving on the Majestic, an oil fire in Southern California, a dancer posing on the roof of the Singer Building, a steeplechase, a tumbling smokestack and finally the Atlantic Fleet cruising in Hampton Roads at sundown. The orchestra members get a harsh deal during this film, being forced to play everything in their repertoire inside of 10 minutes, so when the last battleship has eased across the screen they are pretty well exhausted and yield to the organist, who resumes the quest for the lost chord.

The next unit is an atmospheric prologue and the curtain goes up to show a lumberjack's camp with an electric heater burning brightly in the center of the stage. There is a buffalo roasting over the heater. The lumberjack, a very clean young man with the ruddy complexion of the outdoors, comes in with an axe in his hand and sings "Mother Machree." The idea is that he is longing for home, although no gentleman would sing about his mother with an axe in his hand. However, the audience appreciates the sentiment and cheers and the young man goes off stage, waving the axe. There follows a lot of stamping and a long whinny, and the young man reappears on horseback (horse by courtesy Hook and Ladder Co. No. 45) and rides across the stage wearing a frozen smile while the orchestra plays "Thanks for the Buggy Ride."

AT THIS juncture, someone in front exclaims: "This is where we came in!" and the whole row stands up and gives the guilty couple a dirty look. Some day, the entrance to every aisle will be equipped with a derrick for the purpose of swinging people in and out of their seats, but until this is done it is advisable to wear tough army shoes or tuck your feet into the wire arrangement that serves as a hat receptacle.

The vacated places are occupied by two splendid young men—both piano movers—and there is nothing for those in the rear to do but crouch down in their seats and look at the picture horizontally. Just as everyone gets settled, the two young men decide they are too far away, so they beg a few pardons and the row has to rise again, and this performance is repeated until the spectators are acting like a reviewing stand at one of those parades where they have a flag every 30 feet.

The young man and his lady friend, meanwhile, are patiently awaiting "The Lumberjack's Revenge," and when the screen finally announces the feature film, the audience bursts into huzzas. There is not much lumber in the picture, however, with the possible exception of the hero's knob, the story concerning a murder in a Fifth avenue mansion and did the butler slay the millionaire by hitting him with a syphon or did the chauffeur do the job with a coal shovel? Just as they are about to hang the hero, the dead man shows up with some kind of flimsy excuse for being alive and the final scene shows the millionaire's daughter and her friend seated on a hill overlooking a Western prairie while a toothless ranch hand stands behind them snickering.

As "Good Evening" is flashed, the young man gets up with a crick in his neck and his foot asleep, and while he is warned to "walk, not run, to the nearest exit," he can't do anything but hobble. It all goes to prove, however, that these theaters give you everything obtainable on Broadway, and, if you stick around long enough, a motion picture.

IT DOESN'T MATTER

BY

Frank L. Packard

AS FAR back as anyone could remember the boy, which was going back to the time that old John MacGallaghan spent everything but the odd change of a month's pay check celebrating the arrival of an offspring that he had given up hoping for years before, everybody had always called him Spud.

Nobody ever said Spud was handsome, not even his mother—which is some concession. The plain English of it is that Spud wouldn't have had a look-in for a prize at a beauty show, even with a blind man as the judge.

Everybody knew that the MacGallaghans weren't rich. Wiping in the roundhouse, even after you've wiped for 15 years and get to drawing $1.45 a day on account of long service, wasn't enough so that Mrs. MacGallaghan could dress Spud up in any Little Lord Fauntleroy fixings even on Sunday. Take it all around, appearances were against Spud from the start—but, according to Tommy Regan, that wasn't the seat of Spud's troubles. Regan said the trouble was that Spud lived up to appearances.

There wasn't any question, of course, as to what Spud would do to make his mark in life. No boy in the little divisional mountain town ever had but one idea on that score. There wasn't anything to it but railroading. If you were born in Big Cloud, you started in railroading as soon as you were old enough, and sometimes when you weren't.

All this naturally obviated any vexing parental worry anent a boy's future in Big Cloud. The only complication usually came from the boy himself in his effort to make choice between the engine crews, the shops or the trainmaster's department.

Spud, however, was perhaps the exception that proves the rule. When his father asked him about it, Spud said:

"It doesn't matter."

SO OLD John, being in the roundhouse, naturally tackled Regan on the subject. He hit up the fat little master mechanic for a job for Spud one morning as Regan came in through the roundhouse doors.

Regan sparred for wind from the start.

"H'm!" said Regan cautiously, as he eyed the old wiper. "A job for Spud, eh? I dunno! It seems to me I've heard a few things about him!"

Old John clawed earnestly at Regan's sleeve.

"Listen here, Regan," he said anxiously. "Yez have been listenin' to tales out av school. Listen, Regan! Shure, it's mesilf thot knows the lad, an' wot he don't know, I dunno. He can read and write illegant, an' he's better at figures now nor ever I was in me life."

"H'm!" said Regan.

"Regan," said the old wiper, in sudden dismay, "Regan, yez weren't thinkin' av not givin' the lad a job!"

Regan pulled at his scraggly little brown mustache.

"How old is he?" he inquired.

"Thirteen," said old John. "Thirteen—come next Sunday."

"It's an unlucky number," said Regan—and then he screwed his eyes up at the dawning dismay in the old wiper's face, and reached into his back pocket for his chewing. "All right," said the big-hearted little master mechanic hurriedly, as his teeth met in the plug.

"What kind of a job have I got in the shops?" Spud inquired of his father at home that night.

"I dunno," said old John. "Regan didn't say."

Spud had picked up an amazing lot of things, and he didn't seem to have overlooked much in the picking. He had even commenced to get a grip on philosophy—of a sort.

"Well, it doesn't matter," said Spud inconsequentially.

WHICH was exactly what he said to Regan six months later, in reference to a little matter of some 40 gallons of machine oil that, wending its way from the barrel tap across the floor of the storekeeper's domain, disappeared in a sodden, greasy stream, following the handcar tracks under the door, in the general direction of the blacksmith's shop—for whose use it was not intended.

Regan choked.

"Get out!" said the master mechanic apoplectically.

And Spud got out.

Maybe it was old John's cajolery that got Spud back again into a job, or maybe it was the Klondike boom that was just opening up, and which, to say nothing of the tourists' specials that were running in sections and crowding on each others' heels and demanding double shifts from the crews, was spreading its contagion through the Hill division itself until the pay roll began to thin woefully from the gold itch casualties.

At the end of another three months, however, he had been fired twice again.

Then Spud, through the intercession of his father, who was sick, went over to the dispatcher's office.

MAYBE Regan was right. Maybe things ran smoothly for Spud for a while because the job was fool proof. Regan wagged his head, quite pleased with himself, and put it down to that, anyway. Maybe Regan was right—but maybe, too, Fred Blainey had something to do with it. Donkin having gone as chief of the Prairie division, Spud went on the night trick with Fred Blainey, who wasn't much more than a boy himself, not much more than 24 or 25, quiet, white-faced, delicate—the doctors down East had ordered him out to the mountains the year before.

Queer? Well, perhaps! Spud and Fred Blainey codgered up to each other from the start—and it started on the first night Spud went on duty, and, fitting into the niche in the time-honored way, as though he had filled it all his life, curled himself up in a chair in the corner and buried his nose in a nickel thriller.

Blainey, between train orders and meeting points, looked Spud over.

"I used to read them, too," said Fred Blainey. "Pretty good stuff!"

Spud's jaw dropped, and he stared at the dispatcher.

"Huh?" he said.

"You bet!" said Fred Blainey. "But how about copying some of these train orders?"

Somehow that started it. But Spud wasn't changed much. Any other man but Blainey wouldn't have let Spud copy for him again. Not but what the writing was all right and legible. It was. But Spud, with his mind on the nickel thriller, got the engine numbers mixed up—and put them down mixed up.

"Well, it doesn't matter," said Spud ingenuously, when the dispatcher, with a grim little smile, called his attention to the mistake, "I can change 'em easily enough."

Two months, three months, Spud spent listening to the current, picking up a little Morse code, listening to Fred Blainey cough and doing odd jobs, with his mind on something else, and listening to Fred bail him out and then frame up an alibi to save him; and then, one night when he trudged into the dispatcher's room, Spence, the chief, was in the chair—and Blainey wasn't there.

Spence told Spud that Blainey had had a hemorrhage. Spud had no more than a very hazy idea of what that meant; but he went up to the boarding house the next day to see Blainey—and came away whistling. Blainey seemed pretty near all right again. Fred himself said he'd be sitting in again the next night at the office.

BUT Blainey was wrong. The next night Fred Blainey got down to the station all right, but he went into Carleton's office instead of his own—and Carleton said "no." He told Blainey to take a month's holiday.

"I can't afford a month's holiday," said Blainey, shaking his head.

"You'll take a month's holiday, just the same, Fred," he smiled. "You can put in the time up at the Mitre Rock station. There's plenty of altitude there—and plenty of quiet. We'll shift Crane along the line somewhere until you get back, and we'll bring someone in here to fill in. And it won't change the figures on your pay check. What do you say?"

That was Carleton's way. Fred Blainey went up to Mitre Rock the next day.

The fast express for the coast, otherwise No. 73, came in off the Prairie division, and scheduled Big Cloud in the early evening. She pulled into the Big Cloud yards one night, a week after Blainey had left, about half an hour late, which is to say about 10 o'clock. Also, she was very heavy that night. The train sheet was full, but it was an understood thing that No. 73 was to get the best of it any old time.

It has already been said that, due partially to the Klondike boom, traffic through the mountains, single-tracked, was straining the Hill division to the limit, and that night, as Spence pushed the hair out of his eyes and studied his train sheet, it looked like a Chinese puzzle gone wrong. From Big Cloud to Loon River, clear through the Rockies to the Sierras, extras, specials and regulars, east and west, were hugging the sidings and trying to dodge each other as they felt their way along. Spence cursed the halted 73. Late already because she was heavy, she couldn't be trusted to keep any kind of schedule on the mountain grades ahead of her, and it wasn't the kind of a night to hunt trouble by inviting confusion. It was decided to send No. 73 out in two sections.

And then it was all up to Spud. Spud being handy, he was sent uptown to call a crew for Second No. 73, which was to follow 30 minutes behind the first section. And it was impressed upon Spud to hurry.

Spud hurried—until he was about halfway up Main street.

He got interested in a crap game here and was found by Regan a half-hour later. Then Spud was quite definitely fired for good.

"Well, it doesn't matter," said Spud complacently. "I can get another job."

If he couldn't get a job in Big Cloud, it would have to be out of Big Cloud. That was perfectly reasonable. But where?

The inspiration came. It came in one magnificent, stupendous, overwhelming flash. It took his breath away. The Klondike! It was so conclusively, so obviously the solution that the last thing to be thought of was to question it for even a single instant.

It didn't cost any money to ride on a freight if one weren't found out, and the local way freight west would be making up and pulling out just about now.

Spud reached the yards, and, finding the way freight ready, beset himself to find accommodations for the rest of the night. Spud played in hard luck. For some unexplained reason there wasn't a single boxcar door open. The only alternative was a flat car. Spud boarded a flat as the local pulled out, and curled himself up in a corner and went to sleep.

AT THE age of 15, or thereabouts, one sleeps with profound abandon. It was light when Spud woke up; and then it was neither the rattling, nor the bouncing, nor the stops the way freight made that disturbed his slumbers—it was the rain.

He stared out over the side of the car. They were just passing Sprigot's Siding. There was no use jumping off here; it wasn't anything but a siding, and——

Spud whistled suddenly, low and joyously. The next station west was Mitre Rock—and Fred Blainey was at Mitre Rock! Half an hour later, toasting his flesh in front of Fred Blainey's heater, and with his mouth full of the grub that Fred Blainey rustled for him, Spud got a grip on himself again, and the Klondike began to look ripe enough for picking once more. Spud told Fred Blainey about it.

Fred Blainey wasn't very old, but he was a whole lot older than his age. He began to talk quietly, wiping quite a bit of the glamour off gold rushes in general, and the one to the Klondike in particular.

Spud listened. There wasn't anything else to do. Mitre Rock even under normal conditions, let alone Mitre Rock in bad weather, didn't offer many attractions. It was all right from the observation platform of the Limited, because about half a mile west of the station the right of way, hugging the mountain wall, made a great semi-circle around a huge bluff of gray, bare rock, and the passengers, by craning their necks over the brass railings on the other side, could get a thrill out of the sheer drop of some 500 feet to where the Moosehead River swirled and tumbled along below them.

It was very pretty. They called it Mitre Rock because that was what it looked like on account of an enormous fissure that, from a distance, appeared to split the rock bluff from the top to about three-quarters of the way to the base. That is, it looked that way—from a distance. But the road men claimed the fissure went a whole lot deeper than that; they swore never a year went by that it didn't widen at the top, and they backed up their argument by pointing out that the rock had never overhung the right of way in the beginning the way it did now.

FRED had a lot of supplies on hand and he invited Spud to stay for a while. And all that day it rained. By the next morning the storm only seemed to have got its second wind, and to be settling down to its job as though it really meant business. Down at Big Cloud the big fellows were growing anxious as the road reports began to pile in. The water through the mountains was rising everywhere.

Spud was the only one whom the elements in uproar did not seem to affect. Spud, toasting himself at the heater, and eminently comfortable, said it didn't matter.

All that second day it rained; and all the third day it rained. Matters began to look ugly—they had long ago begun to look serious. But by now, back at Big Cloud, though the strain grew hourly, they had buckled grimly down to see the thing through.

Extra men were put out, the road gangs were doubled, trebled, and even the construction bosses with their crews were thrown into the fight to hold the levels. There weren't any more reports of just rising water. The culverts were running a mill race, the creeks had overflowed their banks, and the Moosehead River, wherever it paralleled the right of way at anywhere near the same level, was lapping at the ballast and the tracks.

The Hill division fought with its back to the wall. Bridges were watched, trestles strengthened, culverts kept open—but no one thought of Mitre Rock. Even with the water reported at the highest level ever known in the mountains, and even though it was still rising, Mitre Rock towered 500 feet above any such consideration. No one thought of Mitre Rock.

Fred Blainey was coughing pretty badly on that third night.

"I was hoping that some day you'd get a jolt, Spud, that would bring you to some idea of a sense of responsibility," said Blainey pleasantly. "A man with 'it doesn't matter' as his philosophy of life is heading straight for only one place, and if you don't know what place that is, I'll tell you—it's the junk heap. The only advantage I can see coming to you in beating your way to the Klondike is that, if you're dead set on the junk heap, that's the line to take, because you'll get a through schedule and no stopovers to the terminal. But you're not going that way, are you, Spud—at 15?"

Spud didn't answer. Already half undressed, he was scowling at the heater.

Fred Blainey didn't speak again for a moment. The sounder was chattering like a woodpecker on the rampage. Blainey's face lost its smile. McCann, the construction boss, who had been thrown into the pass with his men, was pleading hysterically for reserves.

Blainey coughed—and turned again to Spud.

"And then here's Mrs. MacGallaghan," he said. "How about the mother back there at Big Cloud that you're running away from?"

Spud's face flushed. That wasn't fair. He wasn't throwing his mother down.

"I ain't running away from her!" he said belligerently. "But I can't earn anything for her there when I haven't got a job, can I? I've told you that often enough!"

"Well, then, why don't you get a job there?" inquired Fred Blainey.

"Because they wouldn't give me one—any more," snapped Spud.

"Why not make them?" Blainey was staring out through the window.

"Heh?" Spud inquired with a gasp—and again eyed Blainey suspiciously. Fred Blainey was having fun with him. "Say, cut it out. How'd I make 'em—eh?"

"By making them believe in you," Blainey answered. "There's no kid that was ever born in Big Cloud that wouldn't rather——"

BUT Fred Blainey never finished his sentence. Over the racketing of the storm, silencing the howl of the wind, and the pelting water, and the rattling sash, there came a terrific crash that seemed to shake the station to its foundations—and then a prolonged roar, punctuated by a succession of minor crashes that in themselves were like the firing of big guns.

"My God!" whispered Blainey. "What's that?"—and, snatching up a lantern, dashed out of the door.

Spud, half undressed, his face a little white, followed as far as the window, and glued his eyes to the pane. He couldn't see anything in the blackness except the glimmer of Fred Blainey's lantern, that seemed to bob queerly through the curtain of rain that ran down on the outside of the window. He watched the light until it disappeared around the curve down the track, and then he went back to the heater to wait. There wasn't anything else to do. He debated with himself whether he would dress again, or complete his undressing; but he couldn't see any reason why he should do the former, and equally, he wasn't going to get into his bunk, of course, until Fred Blainey got back and in. Spud, found out what the matter was, so there wasn't any use in taking off the rest of his clothes. So he just waited as he was.

The minutes passed—five, ten of them. Spud's eyes kept straying to the clock. Fifteen minutes went by, and then Spud stepped to the window again. Yes, there it was! He could see Fred Blainey's light coming back again, but it didn't seem to be coming very fast, and at times it didn't even seem to move at all.

Spud watched. And after a long time Fred Blainey, head down, battling the wind that swept the platform like a tornado, went by the window, and the door opened, and Fred Blainey staggered in—and the wind swirled in after the operator, and the lamps went to smoking and flickering badly, because Fred Blainey didn't shut the door after him, but just lurched like a drunken man for the table, and his fingers, pawing for the key, began pounding the Big Cloud call.

ONE of the lamps went out just. And Spud remembered the door and shut it. And then he listened to the stammering wire. He could read it, all right—Fred Blainey wasn't sending very fast. Mitre Rock had crashed—the tons upon tons that made the bluff—carrying the right of way into the Moosehead River 500 feet below. The track was out in the middle of the curve. The track was out, Blainey kept repeating that in a queer way. The track was out. And then Fred Blainey's hand sort of jerked itself from the key, and went to his lips, and stained suddenly to a bright crimson—and Fred Blainey went down over the table.

There was nothing hazy now about Spud's idea of what a hemorrhage was, and, half wild with fear and grief, he got his arms around the operator's shoulders and half-dragged, half-carried Fred Blainey back to one of the bunks. Only Fred Blainey didn't speak. It was more than a hemorrhage—the man had gone a long way past his strength.

Spud got some of the wet things off the other, and stirred up the heat, and kept begging Fred Blainey to speak to him. Only Fred didn't speak.

Yes, there it was! He could see Fred Blainey's light coming back again but it didn't seem to be coming very fast and at times it didn't move at all.

The International Romance of Boeheim and Her Mail-Order Has Wound Up in the Div

WASHINGTON.

THE international romance of a comely young German girl—who, from across the seas, advertised for a rich American husband and got one—landed on the bleak shoals of a divorce court here when the husband asked freedom from his "mail-order wife," claiming that she had over-advertised herself.

In 1925, Maria Boeheim, in the little village of Duisburg-on-the-Rhine, took stock of her prospects, and found them few. Chained—figuratively—to those same narrow crooked little streets which she had never left since early childhood, the tomorrows were dark.

The war had robbed her of her parents, and had reduced the list of eligible bachelors to virtually none. There was no prospect of her finding a husband, no prospect of anything more than hopeless, maddening years upon years in that same little dullard-town.

BUT being strong, Maria made up her mind to break her bondage. Before the war, and in the early days of it when things were bright, she had gone to school, and had learned English. Advertised for a Husband—GOT HIM—LOST HIM

The International Romance of Fraulein Maria Boeheim and Her Mail-Order Mate Which Has Wound Up in the Divorce Court.

WASHINGTON.

THE international romance of a comely young German girl—who, from across the seas, advertised for a rich American husband and got one—landed on the bleak shoals of a divorce court here when the husband asked freedom from his "mail-order wife," claiming that she had over-advertised herself.

In 1925, Maria Boeheim, in the little village of Duisburg-on-the-Rhine, took stock of her prospects, and found them few. Chained—figuratively—to those same narrow crooked little streets which she had never left since early childhood, the tomorrows were dark.

The war had robbed her of her parents, and had reduced the list of eligible bachelors to virtually none. There was no prospect of her finding a husband, no prospect of anything more than hopeless, maddening years upon years in that same little dullard-town.

BUT being strong, Maria made up her mind to break her bondage. Before the war, and in the early days of it when things were bright, she had gone to school, and had learned English. And after long hours of thought, when she lay on her straw cot at night trying to go to sleep, she planned her course of action carefully.

She had found an American paper, dropped somewhere by some American soldier in the Army of Occupation while on furlough, and to this paper she wrote her plea. It took her more than ten days to write and correct it; but at last, when it was finished, it said what she wanted it to say:

"Dear Sir:

"You will please excuse the liberty I take in addressing you in the following matter.

"I beg to introduce myself by inclosing my photo, which was taken a short time ago. My age is twenty-four.

"My parents have been dead since the war, and after their death I have been a poor girl.

"I am just one of those German girls, who, on account of the tremendous losses of marriageable men in the past war, tried in vain to secure a husband. It has been my long-cherished wish to go over to the United States, but before doing so I wish to get acquainted with an American gentleman who is desirous of getting a good German wife.

"I am a good cook and an excellent housekeeper, and would certainly make a good wife to an American gentleman. I can give best references as regards my character and education.

"You would do me a favor by publishing my letter and photograph and by stating that any applicants should send their letters by registered mail to my address. I shall reply to any letter by return mail.

"Thanking you in advance for your kind assistance, I remain,

"Yours faithfully

"MARIA BOEHEIM."

Maria Boeheim Langford.

MARIA was not sure what would come of it. She was not sure that the editor to whom she was sending it would not glance at it and toss it into a waste basket.

Weeks dragged by. Her hopes dimmed more and more. But finally, with the arrival of a boat from the States, she found her answers, scores of them.

Carefully, she waded through them, wondering more with each new one how she would ever be able to choose by mail. True, they were taking a chance. But she—she was making a desperate escape from the blackness of a prison, and she had no intention of making a mistake.

But finally, as if by kind providence, the quandary solved itself. One of the applicants, who described himself as a wealthy, middle-aged farmer of Creighton, Mo., had enclosed with his answer a draft for $250, to pay her way to America on approval. She did not hesitate. In less than ten days she was on the seas, bound for the land of rich bachelors.

MARIA had decided definitely what it was she was looking for. A young man, she decided, would be dangerous. His life would be too unsettled, too much in the making.

It would be a social as well as a material risk. A middle-aged man would be too domineering and unreliable. But an elderly man, who desired nothing more than being cared for with affection and tenderness, and who had sufficient fortune to allow her to live in comfort, would offer few dangers. It was upon this that she settled her mind.

And so, in New York, she set about eliminating all those who did not fit her needs; and as there were many, it took some days. She answered each letter, just as she had agreed, and explained to each exactly why he was not acceptable. Then, finally, when she had narrowed the field down to a few who seemed to fit her requirements, she went over the situation with more care than ever, investigating each. She finally chose Charles Langford, a rich and elderly man, for a reason she never disclosed.

With the help of a small sum, borrowed from her landlady in New York, Maria came to Washington, and Langford, being entirely satisfied with the wife he had ordered by mail, married her immediately. For two years they lived together in his spacious home overlooking beautiful Rock Creek Park, and all, seemingly, went well.

But while Maria was striving conscientiously to live up to her bargain, she found that the role of housekeeper for a wealthy, elderly man was—in its way—almost as dull as her life had been on the banks of the Rhine. The longing for love and young life which she thought had long since been dead, grew strongly and dangerously again, and she became discontented.

There were young men in the neighborhood, youthful business associates of her husband, attractive young relations, who called at the home now and then, and each new time the loneliness grew deeper.

And Langford, all this while, could not understand the apparent waning interest on the part of his mail-order wife.

THEN came this spring, and Maria could stand it no longer. She went to him, frankly, and told him, he says, that she could bear it no longer; that she wanted a young husband, who would love her as only young husbands can. She explained to him that she had realized that money and wealth means little, unless one has helped to earn it, he says.

He protested, he told the Court, but she would not listen, explaining without bitterness that she had stuck it out as long as she could. Without malice, she went to a lawyer and asked him to obtain her freedom.

But Langford, under the urge of pride, would not submit to the separation without a fight, and after she had filed her petition in the Supreme Court of the District, he asked for marital freedom in a suit of his own.

The disparity in their ages, he told the Court, made any semblance of happiness impossible. She wanted a young husband, and she should have one. For his part, he wanted someone to take care of him and to give him the things she had said she could give, in her "advertisement."

And as the black-robed Judge hears the pleas of husband and wife, he sits on his bench, apparently thinking:

"It's the same old story. Youth trying to find happiness with old age's wealth."

IT WAS only the sounder there that talked. It talked insanely. It kept calling Mitre Rock, calling, calling—with the 17 now—the life and death. It was Spence back there calling—calling with the 17. Spence's sending was quick as the tattoo of a snare drum, but in a curiously detached way Spud got the gist of the message because it was repeated so often, over and over again: The Mitre Rock call, then the 17, and then: "No. 40 is out of Pilot Head. Can you get around the rock to stop her? No. 40 is out of"——

Spud stood suddenly still in the middle of the room—and he stared at Fred Blainey, who didn't speak, and who lay there on the bunk, unconscious. He understood now. No. 40 was the through express, eastbound. They wouldn't be able to see in time that the track was out, because of the curve, and, before they could stop, they would be into the thick of it, and into the Moosehead River 500 feet below—into eternity. And No. 40 was already out of Pilot Head, the next station west, only 15 miles ahead. And there wasn't much time left, perhaps not even enough now—only Fred Blainey was lying there, hardly breathing, and——and——

Spud, with a spring, was across the room, and for an instant he knelt at Fred Blainey's side.

"I got to go, Fred," he told the unconscious man—and dug his knuckles into his eyes to brush away a rush of blinding tears. "I got to go. I wouldn't leave you, Fred, if I could help it. You know that, don't you? But I got to go. I got to go."

AND in the dispatcher's room at Big Cloud, Regan and Spence and Carleton looked into each others' eyes and read the doom that each knew was in his own—because there was no answer from Mitre Rock; and they did not think of Spud, who had disappeared; and much less did they understand that Spud, not being an adept with the key, was not wasting priceless moments to practice with it now.

"Clear the line, Spence," said Carleton. "Tommy, see that the wreckers are called—and McTurk. There's nothing else that we can do."

And while Flannigan, the wrecking boss, marshaled his crew, and, in the yards, they loaded a coach with volunteer nurses and coupled it on behind the derrick and the tool car, Spud battered his way down the track. It was cold, bitterly cold, and the rain cut through his thin shirt, and stung like sharp needles; and it was black, pitch black, and the lantern hardly served to show any more than the great, grotesque, looming shapes of the fallen boulders that blocked his way as he reached the spot, in the middle of the curve, where once in scenic grandeur Mitre Rock had overhung the right of way.

There wasn't any way around—only a drop to the river below on one side, only the mountain wall on the other, and linking the two, in valleys and peaks and gaping holes, were strewn the tons of granite that they had temporized with too long, for the road men had been right, and the fissure had opened clear to a strata of sand and gravel, which, with the torrents of water pouring upon it as through a funnel, had washed out and shifted for all time the center of gravity of Mitre Rock.

There wasn't any way around. Spud began to scramble over the debris. But it wasn't easy. He couldn't see very well, and the rocks were slippery with the rain, and he kept stumbling, and the edges were sharp and jagged and cut into his hand, and he had to safeguard the lantern with his other hand. And there wasn't any time. And fear came again to Spud because there wasn't any time. He didn't know how long ago it was that No. 40 had pulled out of Pilot Head. Her running time over the grades from Pilot Head to Mitre Rock was 20 minutes—but he didn't know how long it was since she had pulled out of Pilot Head.

And there were tons and tons of these great rocks, like mountains in themselves, and great holes like ridges, and he couldn't see. And he could only feel his way and climb up one and down another, and there was hold neither for foot nor hand because the rocks were as slippery as grease with the rain.

And then, almost through to the far side, at least Spud told himself he must be almost through, he slipped suddenly from the top of a boulder, and, quickly, before he could recover himself, his feet shot out from under him, and he plunged downward, for some great distance, it seemed, and his body twisted and struck—and he lay still, half stunned, dazed.

When he moved again, it wrung a cry of agony from his lips. His leg, at the least movement, caused torture and pain that was unendurable, and brought beads of sweat out on his forehead to mingle with the rain that already ran streaming down it.

He lifted his head to look around him—but the lantern, though he still clasped it, was out, shattered to pieces in his fall. He did not know how far he had fallen. He was lying on what seemed like a great flat rock—he could feel rock, nothing but rock, around him. He raised his hand to clear the rain away from his face—but it wasn't rain, was it, that was blinding him now in that stream? Rain wasn't hot! It must be something else, and——

NO. 40 is out of Pilot Head. The words droned in a sing-song way through his head at first, and then they seemed to act like some galvanic shock and clear his brain. And he drew himself forward over the rock on which he lay, and moaned, and fell again, but not far this time, only a foot or so—and his hand touched a steel rail. He was through. He had only to go on now just a hundred yards or so, just far enough to get around the bend and get into the clear.

He lay still for a moment, because he was sick and dizzy, and his head was swimming, and he thought he could ease the pain a little that way. It was the pain that was robbing him of his strength. But he lay still only for a moment. There wasn't any time to lay still. He must go on.

And Spud went on. Trailing a broken limb, creeping his way along, clawing from tie to tie, until the torture of it turned him sick and nauseated him, Spud went on.

"It doesn't matter," whispered Spud, and in the agony of it bit at his lips until his teeth sank into them and they bled. "It doesn't matter," whispered Spud—and won forward yard after yard.

And then dizziness and faintness came, and a queer delirium and queer fancies, for there was a great, round light gleaming in the distance ahead of him, and it struck upon the dripping steel rails and made them gleam and sparkle like polished ribbons of silver and—no, it wasn't delirium. It was No. 40's headlight coming up the stretch. But his own lamp was gone, and they wouldn't be able to see him in time to do any good if he lay here with his face on the ties.

Spud got up—first on his good knee—and then on his good leg—and stood there—and waved his arms, and screamed once because he couldn't help it, for, with the movement of his arms, the dangling leg would not hold still. And the light grew brighter, bigger, playing up the right of way, and Spud stood there—and waved his arms. And then the shriek of a whistle rang through the gorge—and Spud quit then. He fainted.

WHEN they picked him up, Spud got his senses back long enough to tell them the track was out, and to beg for help for Fred Blainey—and then he fainted again. But Spud need not have worried about Fred Blainey. Fred Blainey got into good hands—he had a carload of volunteer nurses to look after him when the wrecker pulled in, and they pulled Fred Blainey through.

And when the light came, Regan, who had come up with Flannigan's men, looked the ground over, and looked Spud over, but he didn't say anything then because Spud was raving in a fever. But that night, back at Big Cloud, with Carleton as an audience, Spud didn't lose anything because it was Tommy Regan who told his story. Tommy Regan covered the boy with glory before he was through.

"And there's none like him," said the fat little master mechanic, summing up. "None! He's one grand little railroad man. I could sing the doxology for the sake of him and the lives he's saved. I could!" asserted Tommy Regan. "And if you want to know it, I did—last night."

Carleton nodded.

"I know, Tommy," he said, in his big, quiet way; and then: "What are you going to do with him when he gets around again?"

"Do with him!" ejaculated Regan—and blinked fast. "How do I know? He can have any job he likes, can't he? Well, then—h'm? It doesn't matter."

Scanty Clothes Blamed for Women's Ill-Health

Wisconsin Physician Arouses Health Associations by Declaring That Tuberculosis Can Be Checked by Dress Reform.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BECAUSE the death rate from tuberculosis for young women ranging from 15 to 25 years has been continually increasing while the death rate for the whole population of the United States has shown a steady decline over a long period of years, American physicians are now preparing to fight the causes which bring about the untimely demise of many of the nation's fairest long before they have attained maturity.

Tuberculosis, it is generally agreed, is no longer the serious menace to our national welfare it once was. The death rate for all classes and all ages has dropped to such a point that authorities believe they have pretty nearly reached a bottom level for possible sufferers of all ages and classes with the exception of the young women and girls in their late 'teens and early twenties.

Why several thousand more young women and girls must die each year in the United States from tuberculosis than young men and boys is not definitely known. The theory has lately been advanced, however, that women's flimsy dresses have no small part in the amazing death roll which takes many thousands who might otherwise live to enjoy maturity and leaves many other victims of this insidious lung disease.

Slenderness is her ideal.

Gilliams Service

If young women and girls suffer from tuberculosis in greater numbers than men and boys, let them pay due attention to the flimsy gowns they wear, advises Dr. Hoye E. Dearholt of Milwaukee, whose recent comments have stirred the officers of several national health organizations to realize more keenly the large number who annually die from tuberculosis and whose deaths might otherwise have been avoided.

BASING his observations more or less directly upon his experiences with the Wisconsin Tuberculosis Association, Doctor Dearholt is led to conclude that scantiness of clothes is responsible in no small measure for ill-health, inefficiency and death from tuberculosis. "I believe," the doctor is reported to have said, "that we can cut down tuberculosis among young women if we push dress reform. There is a point in the race for scanty clothing at which a girl must stop lest the body be chilled too much and weakened, and its resistance to disease lowered."

There seems to be little discussion among medical practitioners regarding the figures supplied by the Public Health Service or the prevalence of the fad among the modern young women to undress. Other reasons, however, are cited by physicians of national reputation to explain the tendency for the modern young women to contract tuberculosis in so much greater numbers than their brothers of the same age.

Dr. John A. Smith, medical secretary of the National Tuberculosis Association, claims the increase is due as much to the jazz age in which modern youth is moving as it is to a single item such as women's clothes. If the girls and boys of today were not compelled to move at so swift a pace to keep up with the times, Dr. Smith believes, the sanitoria of several Western states would not be filled with school pupils and college students of both sexes.

"WHAT else is to be expected," Dr. Smith queries, "when youth is allowed late hours, automobile rides and jazz parties? I have no doubt but that the high mortality among young women from tuberculosis is due in no small measure to the scantiness of the clothes they wear. Yet there are other factors which must be taken into consideration. The luncheon of the average young business woman is possibly as good a clew to the situation as anything could be.

"Visit a restaurant or soda fountain at noontime and what do you find? There she sits, the average young woman, eating a little salad, a sweet, perhaps, and as much of an ice cream sundae as she thinks she can stand without the possibility of spoiling her boyish figure. Self-imposed dieting of this kind, purely unscientific in its regimen, cannot do other than weaken the system and make one susceptible to all kinds of diseases communicated by germs.

"It is not so much the absolute scantiness of the dress of women, I should be inclined to say, as the lack of discretion in exposing herself to changes in temperature. Many vigorous constitutions can stand light clothing, but there are few who can stand going from a heated room into the cold air of a winter night without putting on an outer wrap. To go from a dancing floor into a chill night and to go riding at top speed thereafter, even in summer, is necessarily an invitation to danger."

Miss Jessamine S. Whitney, chief statistician of the American Tuberculosis Association, by virtue of her sex and her position, is able to throw further light on the situation. "Statistics show," Miss Whitney asserts, "that tuberculosis is not now so common among younger children as it formerly was. My conclusion is that this is so because parents have a better control over their children while young, and the younger children themselves are more inclined to obey their parents. It is extremely hard to get both young men and young women to listen to advice about their health."

Sufficient nourishment might spoil the boyish figure.

MISS WHITNEY is not an undiscerning critic of women's dress. "As a woman," she says, "I do not feel that the prevailing style of dress is as bad as some of its critics think. It is light, gives great comfort, especially in hot weather, insures freedom of movement and has much to commend it. Sudden exposure to cold and the failure to vary the attire when there are changes in temperature, are, I admit, sources of trouble. I should say that the failure of girls and young women to eat enough nourishing food to build up their constitutions is the main cause of their susceptibility to lung disease."

Other experts, including Dr. Lenna L. Meanes, medical director of the Women's Foundation for Health, which conducts its work with the approval of the American Medical Association, believe that dress is essentially an individual matter. Dr. Meanes, especially, stresses the manner in which young girls are prone to neglect their physical condition. Many of them, she says, fail to consult a physician for a periodic examination.

IF THE garments of the modern woman are conducive to bad health, as Doctor Dearholt points out, the same challenge has been levied at the past. The corseted, bustled woman of a former day was long subjected to the scorn of American medical science. As recently as 20 years ago, Dr. Thomas Darlington, a former New York Health Commissioner, said recently, he was called upon to admonish women not to wear trains on their dresses in rainy weather when crossing the city streets.

The modern young woman, apparently, errs in the opposite extreme. For a long time it appeared as if she were going to obey the hygienic injunctions offered her by American medical practitioners. There are figures to prove that the death rate from tuberculosis was lower when she did. In 1915, for example, 3.8 per cent more young women and girls died in the United States than young men and boys. The rate at present is 49 per cent [illegible] young women and girls [illegible] young men and boys. [illegible] clothes that make [illegible] ence?

THE WESTERN BEAUTY

Out of "the golden West." Her skin is a delicate bronze, with russet roses in her cheeks. For her—the Naturelle or Rachel shade of Pompeian Powder, with Oriental Pompeian Bloom.

SHOULD YOU WEAR GREEN?

Does it disguise or accent your type?

THE DRESDEN-CHINA BLONDE

A gay young thing of unbelievable grace. Skin like alabaster. Blue, blue eyes. And the pinkest of cheeks and lips. For her—White Pompeian Beauty Powder and Light Pompeian Bloom.

THE AUBURN BEAUTY

She has red-brown hair, and a fine warm tone of skin. Eyes like sherry. She should mix 2 parts Nude to 1 part Flesh-Pink Powder and use Orange or Oriental Pompeian Bloom.

By MME JEANNETTE DE CORDET

COLOR is deceptive. A color that is becoming to one is unbecoming to another. This is true of powder and rouge as well as of dresses and hats.

The colors you wear should blend with your skin rather than with your hair and eyes. For hair and eyes do not determine your type—but the tone of your skin does.

The crescendo from the fairest type of blonde to the darkest brunette is as delicately graded as the chromatic scale—and each note has its distinct color tone!

Every woman has some little individuality of coloring that makes her different. And this coloring should determine the tones of powder and rouge that she wears—the shades of her dresses and hats.

Sophisticated women accent their natural coloring and individualize their type by wearing those colors that most become them, and by using a shade and tone of powder and rouge that blend with their own skin coloring.

Pompeian Beauty Powder and Pompeian Bloom have that enviable virtue of natural shades and tones to match the various types of skin. The Powder comes in five primary shades from which, by mixing various combinations, fifteen other beautiful shades can be created. The Bloom—in five lovely natural tones—blends with the Powder in perfect harmony.

Among the shades of Pompeian Beauty Powder and tones of Pompeian Bloom there are the exact complements for your skin. Use them to accent your natural coloring and you will achieve your utmost loveliness

THE NEUTRAL BLONDE

Hers is a sophisticated charm — that flames into loveliness with the right make-up. Her eyes reflect the colors she wears. For her — Nude Pompeian Powder with Medium Bloom.

THE NUT-BROWN MAIDEN

Her hair is silky brown like the satiny finish of a nut. Her eyes are wide, clear eyes. Her lips are rose, her skin is white. For her — Naturelle Pompeian Powder with Medium Bloom.

Now You Can Reduce 2 to 4 Lbs. in a Night

Eat what you please
Wear what you please
Do what you please
Take no risky medicine

Send the coupon for your first three Fayro Baths

Thousands of smart women have found this easy way to take off 2 to 4 pounds once or twice a week. These women take refreshing Fayro baths in the privacy of their own homes.

Fayro is the concentrate of the same natural mineral salts that make effective the waters of twenty-two hot springs of America, England and Continental Europe. For years the spas and hot springs bathing resorts have been the retreat of fair women and well groomed men.

Excess weight has been removed, skins have been made more lovely, bodies more shapely and minds brighter.

The Hot Springs are now Brought to You

Painstaking analyses of the active ingredients of the waters from twenty-two of the most famous springs have taught us the secret of their effectiveness. You can now have all these benefits in your own bath. Merely put Fayro into your hot bath. It dissolves rapidly. You will notice and enjoy the pungent fragrance of its balsam oils and clean salts.

Then, Fayro, by opening your pores and stimulating perspiration forces lazy body cells to sweat out surplus fat and bodily poisons. Add Fayro to your bath at night and immediately you will lose from 2 to 4 pounds in an easy, refreshing and absolutely harmless manner.

Your physician will tell you that Fayro is certain to do the work and that it is absolutely harmless.

Fayro will refresh you and help your body throw off worn-out fat and bodily poisons. Your skin will be clearer and smoother. You will sleep better after your Fayro bath and awaken feeling as though you had enjoyed a week's vacation.

Lose Weight Where You Most Want to

Fayro reduces weight generally but you can also concentrate its effect on abdomen, hips, legs, ankles, chin or any part of the body you may wish.

Results Are Immediate

Weigh yourself before and after your Fayro bath. You will find you have lost from 2 to 4 pounds. And a few nights later when you again add Fayro to your bath, you will once more reduce your weight. Soon you will be the correct weight for your height. No need to deny yourself food you really want. No need for violent exercise. No need for drugs or medicines. Merely a refreshing Fayro bath in the privacy of your own home.

Try Fayro at Our Risk

The regular price of Fayro is $1.00 a package. With the coupon you get 3 full sized packages and an interesting booklet, "Health and Open Pores," for $2.50, plus the necessary postage. Send no money. Pay the postman. Your money refunded instantly if you want it.

"I am always tired Will yeast help me?"

IN hundreds of letters each month men and women ask: "Is mine a case for Yeast?"

"My work is not difficult and yet I am always tired." "I have almost daily headaches"—"Everything gets on my nerves" . . . "Will Yeast help me?"

In hundreds of thousands of such cases Yeast has helped.

If you are run down it means that poisons are flooding your body more quickly than you can throw them off.

Nine times out of ten these poisons come from constipation. They indicate an unhealthy condition of your intestinal tract. That is why Fleischmann's Yeast performs what often seems like a miracle.

This amazing food—fresh as any garden vegetable—keeps your whole system clean and active. Unlike harmful cathartics, it actually strengthens weakened intestinal muscles. It invigorates your entire body.

Start today to eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast every day. Eat a cake before each meal, or between meals, plain. Or drink it dissolved in water—cold or hot (not scalding). Or in any other way you prefer. Order two or three days' supply of Fleischmann's Yeast at a time from your grocer and keep in any cool place. Send for our latest booklet on Yeast in the diet. Dept. N-941, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

"I AM in charge of the Physio-Therapy Department of a hospital. In this department we give not only massage but various mechanical and electrical treatments, including electric light baths and new, interesting combinations of electric wave treatments. All this necessitates heavy work on my part every day.

"Some time ago I was taken with pains in my stomach. My whole system became extremely run down. I lost weight at an alarming rate. I tried various remedies without benefit.

"A friend suggested Fleischmann's Yeast might help me. So I tried it. Finding it very palatable, I took it regularly every day with my meals. After a month I began feeling better. My weight came back to normal. I am now able to do the most vigorous physical work daily."

CHARLES COURSAULT

Los Angeles, Calif.

"I RETIRED from business, to build up my health. I was very much run down, troubled with constipation and gastric disturbances. A change of climate and various remedies did not help. My appetite failed. My constipation and indigestion grew worse. I was discouraged. I had occasionally seen Fleischmann's Yeast advertisements and had read some of the testimonials. I had never given them much thought, being rather skeptical about Yeast as a remedy for anything. However, having tried almost everything else I began eating three Yeast cakes daily. The effect on me was almost magical. I began to feel a decided change for the better. My elimination became easier and more regular. My digestion improved. My spirits rose. My folks think the change is remarkable. I sleep more soundly, I have more energy, endurance and even a better complexion."

JAMES H. KELLY

Pontiac, Mich.

"BEFORE my marriage I was a school teacher. At the end of one particularly strenuous term, I found my nervous system completely wrecked. My complexion was in almost as bad a condition. I had no desire to eat. Even when my favorite dishes were prepared I could only taste of them. Quite a few of my friends kept telling me that Fleischmann's Yeast was just the thing to right whatever was wrong with my system. I was naturally a bit skeptical about Yeast since I had already tried a number of remedies without any benefit. But, finally, I started to eat a cake before each meal. I found my grip on life returning. I got back my clear complexion simultaneously with a healthy appetite. I feel and look different. My nerves are like iron again."
